BPS reopening plan elicits a mixed bag of reactions

Greta Gaffin
Staff Reporter

Boston Public Schools (BPS) released their spring school re-opening plan in January, and reactions have been extremely mixed. Some BPS students, such as those with severe disabilities, have been in person since the fall, but all other students have been fully remote.

The current plan for non-high priority students is to phase in grades throughout the month of March using a hybrid learning system (two days in-person, two days remote with one day for cleaning). For the full BPS re-opening plan, go to <https://www.bostonpublicschools.org/> reopening.

Students who wish to remain remote can do so. One confusing aspect of the plan to many about the reopening plan was why be open now when cases are so much higher than they were in the fall? Last summer, BPS said that if the COVID-19 positivity rate was above 4 percent, they would ask the Boston Public Health Commission to decide whether or not schools should be open. But Boston was using a cumulative rate of positivity instead of a seven-day or 14-day average until November, meaning that they were including all cases since March. The state's report of the positivity rate in September 2020 in Boston was at .94 percent — as opposed to the most Jan. 28 positivity rate of 3.23 percent.

Many said they feel that BPS continuing to be closed is not in line with BPS' stated goal of improving racial equity. They argue children from poorer families who do not have access to lots of resources, and especially children who are not native English speakers are especially being harmed.

While the city did send out Chromebooks, for many students they were not available until the end of October, meaning they missed out on two months of instruction.

Some parents have been in a battle with the Boston BPS

Consalvo, Arroyo address community at WFHCG forum

Mary Ellen Gammon
Staff Reporter

Local officials state Rep. Rob Consalvo and District 5 City Councilor Ricardo Arroyo addressed an audience of 40 concerned residents at a virtual forum hosted by the West Fairmount Hill Community Group (WFHCG) on Mon. Jan. 25. At-Large Councilor Annissa Essaibi-George also participated.

Creating partnerships and being accountable to the community were recurring themes. Development was a key issue, and both Arroyo and Consalvo addressed this by working to create a master plan for Hyde Park.

"What I have found is this is something that the City wants," Arroyo said. "Roslindale wants this. Mattapan wants this. This isn't just a Hyde Park issue. This is something that I consider a priority for myself."

He added that development needs to be looked at for its impact on the community as a whole, "not as a project-by-project thing." City and state officials can work in tandem to help facilitate this process.

Seed Retail Cannabis Shop opens in Feb. at Hyde Square

Richard Heath

Core Empowerment gave an update to the Jamaica Plain Neighborhood Council (JPNC) on Jan. 26 about the imminent opening of its retail cannabis store Seed at 401 Centre St. next to Whole Foods.

This was a virtual meeting, but it seemed just as hostile as its last in-person meeting with the council on Oct. 22, 2019.

In the planning phase, which went on for over two years, Core is set to get its certificate to operate from the state Cannabis Control Commission (CCC) on Feb. 11, according to CEO April Arrasate.

"We plan to open shortly thereafter," she told the council. "In three days or two weeks depending on when we get our license. We plan a late February opening."

It will be the first cannabis shop to open in Jamaica Plain.

In preparation for opening, Seed and the JPNC in collaboration with the Office of Returning Citizens held a one-hour virtual job fair for retail positions on Jan. 29.

The 6,000 square-foot basement space, formerly the Milky Way Lounge that closed in 2008, was built out in late summer and fall and named Seed.

Arrasate said that Seed is the store name but is operated by Core Empowerment.

"It's one of the largest cannabis spaces in the Boston area," she said. "We've spent a lot of time and energy improv-

Parkway Youth Hockey looking to expand Girls' teams

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Parkway Youth Hockey League (PYL) girls program, otherwise known as the Parkway Lady Hawks, is looking to increase its membership for next season with an exhibition game at the Roche Center on Feb. 16 starting at 9:30 a.m.

PYL organizer Stephanie Wilkens said currently, the league fields four youth leagues, U10, U12, U14 and U16-18, and they want to expand that offering. She said currently they are looking for new recruits for next year so that the PYL can field two U10 teams and two U12 teams respectively.

"For several years now we've had more than enough for one team but not enough for two teams," Wilkens said. "We're finally at a place where we have potentially enough enrollment for two optimally-sized teams for U10 and U12 enrollment, which just feels amazing from a girls hockey perspective."

Wilkins said years before, girls played only on coed teams, which were usually almost all boys with one or two girls sprinkled in.

"It means more and more girls are playing and sticking with the sport and we're trying to take advantage of that momentum," she said.

Wilkinson said the event is designed to be a kind of meet-and-greet for new potential players with some of those

"I think the need is critical," Consalvo added. "Most other neighborhoods around the city that have gone through development had a master planning process initiated by the City and the Boston Planning and Development Agency to ensure that there is community voice and a thoughtful plan of what responsible development should look like moving forward."

HPNA president Jim Kirker brought up that his organization has established a planning and zoning committee, which he hoped could collaborate on this initiative. One goal was to hold forums on the zoning code, which WFHCG co-chair Marcia Kimm Jackson embraced.

An upcoming proposed project that brought the need for both planning and conservation to the forefront is at 990 American Legion Hwy. Ten acres of land on Crane's Ledge is proposed for development, according to community activist Mimi Turchinetz. It is located behind the Walgreen's.

"It in fact brings together a lot of the issues that we're so concerned about," she stressed. "It's an economic justice issue. It's a green issue. It reflects that there's no real planning strategy in Hyde Park."

Health equity was another major concern that both Arroyo and Consalvo addressed. COVID-19 brought this neighborhood's shortcomings into sharp focus when it was at or near the top of the list of neighborhoods affected by the pandemic, yet only recently got a mobile testing site.

Arroyo, the chair of the council's Public Health Committee, said he is "incredibly unhappy" about the lack of COVID-19 vaccine distribution in the neighborhoods he represents. He will be holding a City Council hearing in February on this issue.

The need for a health center in Hyde Park was mentioned several times by both residents and the officials.

Education was also a key topic. When Arroyo was asked if he supported an elected or appointed School Committee, he said what he would actually prefer is a hybrid model comprised of elected representatives and appointed experts within specific realms of education, such as autism or language specialties.

"I think if we do a hybrid, we can have the best of both worlds," he said.

Essaibi-George noted the importance of the student representative on the School Committee, saying that person should get paid the same $7,500 stipend as the adult counterparts. She also weighed in on the issue of racial justice.

"So much of these conversations are happening in our schools, mostly virtually" she said. "That really needs to be a big part of where these conversations exist, not just in the community. It also has to be more than just the token book club or a lunchtime, once a week conversation."

On open space, Consalvo said he has hit the ground running, meeting with the Southwest Boston Community Development Corporation (SWBCDC) on renovating Doyle Playground and also working to protect Fowl Meadow from illegal dumping.

Kimm Jackson, who hosted the meeting, celebrated some of her group's recent achievements before the elected officials spoke about their goals for Hyde Park. Graphic illustrator Muddy Schlegel from the Whiteboard Academy recorded the meeting visually through a storyboard.

WFHCG leader Nathaniel Thomas announced that a long-held dream of the organization was on the verge of becoming reality. Since 2018, he has been working to obtain Community Preservation Act (CPA) funding, and he recently heard that the Community Preservation Committee (CPC) is recommending funding for the renovation of Moynihan Playground in the amount of $200,000.

Thomas noted that there was a significant community letter-writing campaign in favor of the project as well as support from Consalvo. The committee will vote on the recommendation and then it will go before the City Council and the mayor for approval.

Once that process is complete, Thomas added that WFHCG can apply for an up to an additional $150,000 from the Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR) for matching funding.

"If you go around Readville and if you go around Kelly Field and then you come over here, you can see that this playground down the street hasn't been modernized yet," he said.

Teachers Union (BTU), which they feel has too much power. One parent noted that BPS is already asking for next fall if parents would prefer hybrid or remote, and wonders if the teachers will ever want to go back to full in-person learning. Last fall, the BTU sued BPS over going back in person. At the time, Boston Mayor Marty Walsh had planned to open schools in October and November.

While Judge Robert Gordon dismissed their suit, schools still did not reopen for all but the highest-need students. In Chicago, where public schools were supposed to reopen this week, many teachers refused to return to school, and other districts around the country have had similar issues. Scott Balicki, a middle school science teacher at Boston Latin School (BLS), says he has no sense whether or not schools will be safe.

One issue is that two of the windows in his classroom do not open, despite him asking them to be fixed for multiple years. The poor quality of BPS' buildings and their ventilation has been a frequently cited issue for why schools are not safe. The majority of BPS schools were built before WWII, and have not been properly maintained.

He said he also thinks BLS and BPS have done "a great job with remote learning," both for getting students access to technology and for helping teachers navigate online learning, but that "hybrid learning is a big unknown." The BLS hybrid learning plan is to have students in person but on Zoom in their homerooms, while the homeroom teacher teaches another class. Another BLS teacher said that BPS did not consider how hybrid learning would work at the high school level, where you cannot have cohorts that share the same class like in elementary school. Parents have also asked why BPS cannot be open when parochial schools have been. The St. Theresa of Avila School, the Holy Name Parish School, and the Sacred Heart Parish School have all been having in-person instruction since the fall.

Thomas J. Doherty III, the Director of Advancement at Enrollment Management at St. Theresa's said that he has been getting more BPS transfers than usual. They are currently at their maximum enrollment of 300, but they took transfers at the beginning of the year. He said they have 15 students on the waiting list, and 70 applicants for the fall, half of whom are from BPS. When the Bulletin spoke to Fr. John Connolly last June, he expected 30-50 more students for fall 2020.

While some students have tested positive, they have quarantined those students and those around them, and they have not had any school transmission of the virus. Masks are required, and windows are open. Doherty said that some parents did pull their children out last spring, and parents who wish to have their children at home can have them be remotely present via the computer into the in person classroom.

Some parents plan on continuing to keep their children at home. Rachel Young, a parent of a child at the Sumner Elementary School in Roslindale, says she has been pleased with remote learning and plans to continue using it. Her child is part of a learning pod with other students, which she feels is less risky, and she also plans on sending her child to summer camp in July. She is worried about the quality of remote education going down when some students are in person.

Amaurys Abreu, another local parent, also plans to keep his child remote out of concern for his family's safety, but he does not feel his child is adequately prepared for first grade, and he is also concerned about the quality of remote learning going down.

Other parents are planning on sending their children back. A doctor and single mother of a fifth grade who asked that her name not be used spoke about her frustration with remote learning. She could not find any supervision for her child, because nannies did not want to be in a home where the parent was a doctor, so her 11 year old has been home alone all day.

She said she has thought about moving out of the city, and about using a remote home school program. Other cities, both in the U.S. and in other countries, have allowed the children of essential workers to return to school. This parent said she feels BPS has not been supportive of single parent families, and is concerned she cannot help her child during the day, or even take calls, because she is in the operating room, and her child's father likewise cannot help because he is also a doctor, working in the ICU.

At-Large City Councilor Michelle Wu, who lives in Roslindale and has two young children, said that as a parent, she is desperate, but she also acknowledges that the safety of in person school depends on factors outside of BPS' control. She thinks the pace of how BPS has been moving is too slow. She also thinks Governor Charlie Baker should prioritize K-12 teachers for vaccination.

Roslindale Com. Fridge to host a mental health-themed food drive on Feb. 13

Ariane Komyati
Staff Reporter

Volunteers from the Roslindale Community Fridge will be hosting "Love Wins: A Mental Health Themed Food Drive" at 1 Firth Rd. in Roslindale.

The event will take place on Feb. 13, from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m., with a rain date of Feb. 14. Volunteers will be handing out grocery bags as well as mental health resources available online and in the Boston area. They also plan on handing out cleaning supplies and menstrual items.

The Roslindale Community Fridge is located behind the Roslindale Market at 4140 Washington St. and opened last October. It is a community-run initiative that aims to provide free food to the local community, 24/7, 365 days a year. Neighbors and community members can leave food or take what they need. Over the past few months, volunteers have partnered with local businesses to reduce food waste and keep the fridge and pantry full. These local businesses include Fornax, Exodus Bagels, Target in Roslindale Village, Kaitzroubas, The Roslindale Food Collective, LifeBoat, Sekali, Grant Family Farm, Faulkner Hospital, Boston Organics, Equitable Boston Food Ecosystem, Take-a-Zine, Purple Shell Boston, and more.

Volunteers and community members who work with the Community Fridge decided that having a monthly drive would be a great way to engage the community and redistribute resources beyond just food security.

"As the Community Fridge continues to gain traction, we have been lucky to have donations roll over month to month. But we do not want these funds sitting around, when they can be put to use. We continue to think of ways to reliably redistribute resources and become a consistent hub of mutual aid. We are hopeful that this event will become the first of many monthly drives to come. We are now able to plan ahead like this because the community response and volunteers' dedication are so great," said volunteer Arielle Goldhaber.

Volunteers chose February to hold this drive because of Valentine's Day - but it is important to remember that the most important love of all is self-love. "With the month of February being so focused around Valentine's Day, we wanted our drive to still reflect the realities we don't always see. I think we are very fortunate to have a wide pool of volunteers that bring so many different perspectives. Valentine's Day is great for the chocolate business - but now more than ever, we know how being isolated is so damaging to our mental health. We don't want to wash over the issues, or slap a Band-Aid on it...we want to amplify these issues and actively propel change," Goldhaber said.

She also added that volunteers at this event will be abiding by CDC recommendations and regulations for COVID-19 safety, and will enforce wearing masks and social distancing.

The Roslindale Community Fridge has done similar drives in the past, including on Thanksgiving and during the Holiday season.

"We had a Turkey Drive on Thanksgiving, which was incredibly successful. We filled our car trunks with turkeys and chickens, and then continued to receive more donations from neighbors, EMS workers, grocery stores...we were able to pass on 70-plus chickens and turkeys, with pies, pantry staples, sweets, eggs, bread...close to 100 families/individuals that stopped by," explained Goldhaber. "Then we

The interior design is by Kristen Gianattasio of Atelier et Alia.

Things have changed since October 2019.

At the time Core estimated that 170 customers could be accommodated.

"Due to Covid restrictions there will be no more than 50 people in the shop at one time," Arrasate said. "There will be no appointment scheduling, and there have been reduced visits to dispensaries overall. Most people are ordering online."

Chief Operating Officer Peri Higgins was also on the call. She didn't think there would be long lines on the sidewalk, a concern of council members.

"There are changes in the industry," she added. "There's a 50 percent decline in in-house customers. More online ordering and pick-up at the store."

Higgins anticipates fewer lines and added that Seed is "much larger than any others in the area."

Still Core anticipates being busy at first. They have a crowd control management plan in place and will have a police detail during the first month and employees stationed at the door.

Arrasate said there would be six points-of-sale stations in the basement store and only pre-packaged products will be sold.

The host community agreement and customer parking dominated the often-heated meeting.

Committee member Dave Baron repeated what he said at the Dec. 5, 2018 zoning committee meeting.

"What's in it for JP?" he asked about the host agreement.

Baron particularly didn't want Core to remove the benches outside the building.

"Don't do that," he said.

Arrasate said that the host community agreement is "pretty standardized."

"In the early days there was a lot of gouging as neighborhoods wanted specific benefits

Prayer to St. Anthony

O Holy St. Anthony, gentlest of Saints, your love for God and charity for His creatures, made you worthy, when on earth, to possess miraculous powers.

Miracles waited on your word, which you were ever ready to speak for those in trouble or anxiety. Encouraged by this thought, I implore you to obtain for me (request). The answer to my prayer may require a miracle. Even so, you are the Saint of Miracles.

O gentle and loving St. Anthony, whose heart was ever full of human sympathy, whisper my petition into the ears of the Sweet Infant Jesus who loved to be folded in your arms; and the gratitude of my heart will ever be yours. Amen.

Our Father, Hail Mary, Glory be.

for specific organizations," she said. "Then the state basically said 'let's flatten the field' and so Boston gets 3 percent annually."

Tomas Gonzalez, who is now chief of staff, repeated what he said in 2019 were Core's commitments.

"We're still giving $500,000 over five years to local nonprofits. It's our decision," he said, and listed a few as the Hyde Square Task Force, Spontaneous Celebrations and the Reagan Youth League.

But committee member Gert Thorn wanted more proof.

"Will you give a written promise, something in writing that these are the organizations you will support?" he asked.

Arrasate said she was "not going to commit."

"I want to be really clear, we want to be flexible in this host community agreement," she said. "We're not going to say when or how."

Council chair Kevin Rainsford lives nearby on Paul Gore Street and he was concerned about customers taking up on his block.

"A lot of people can't smoke [cannabis] at home so they smoke in their cars, he said. "People are going to leave your business and get high in front of my house. Who do I notify?"

"You call the police," said Arrasate. "You also tell us. We have a hand-out on customer regulations."

Parking was a hot issue and Core's 2019 plans to mitigate it have been unsuccessful.

"We don't have a separate lot," Arrasate said. "The El Mundo lot [408 South Huntington] can't be used. [Owner] Mordy Levin doesn't want it used for parking. He's considering redevelopment there."

Core said in 2019 that it would use valet parking, but shared valet is not going to happen now due to Covid restrictions.

Thorn and Gonzalez argued about parking.

"We now have two-hour parking signs in Hyde Square," he said, "and a designated pick up and drop off zone."

Thorn was impatient.

"That's not an answer," he said. "You need 69 parking spaces. Be responsive."

Rainsford said that as more customers return to Hyde Square after the pandemic, there would be an increase in parking.

"It's a double-edged sword," he said. "We want an increase in business but it will bring in more people and more parking."

Rainsford said he'd like to invite Core back for a review after it opens up.

"Thank you," Arrasate said. "We want you to love us!"

Roslindale Fundraiser

began to try different routes to fundraising, by hiring local artists to create totes that we sold on a sliding scale to raise money for a winter Holiday Goodie Drive! We also had stickers designed that went in the totes. On Dec. 22, with the funding raised, we were able to receive and donate over 100-plus pounds of food to more than 100 families. There were also blankets, mittens, face masks, coats, premade meals from restaurants. Events like these really rallied all of the resources we had been blessed with. I think it was the success of these that led us to think, ‘why shouldn’t we do this every month?’ We wish we could do it big like this every week.”

Prayer to the Blessed Virgin

(Never known to fail!)

Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine, splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in this necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my mother. Oh Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth, I humbly beseech thee from the bottom of my heart to succor me in my necessity (make request). There are none that can withstand your power. Oh Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (three times). Holy Mary, I place this cause in your hands (three times). Say this prayer for three consecutive days and then you must publish and it will be granted to you.

neighbors during this dark COVID winter. “We will also be allocating funds to “self-care” items and other mental health resources that are available online and in the Boston area. We will also have Spanish-speakers present to chat with neighbors. We think that being there for our neighbors, to chat, to connect, to give blankets and mittens, are all great ways to combat a day (not to mention the whole year of 2020) that can make people feel so lonely,” Goldhaber stated.

For the February drive, community members can donate pantry goods, fresh fruits and veggies, dairy products, cleaning supplies, menstrual supplies, and reusable bags. Email roslynlecommunityfridge@gmail.com for questions. Visit their website linktree/

Marie, died on January 17, 2021 at Hebrew Senior Life in Roslindale, MA. "Mimi" as she was known to family and her Connecticut friends relocated to West Roxbury from Fairfield, CT in 2006 to be near her daughters Suzanne Gall Marsh and Victoria Gall. She lived at Sophia Snow Place in both Independent and Supportive Living. She served as president of the Residents Council, volunteered with Crafters Group, planned special programs with the Activities Directors including "Tea with Isabella Stewart Gardner", boat trips to Spectacle Island and a trip to the Museum of Fine Arts to view items donated by Sophia Snow, a benefactor of the Roxbury Home for Aged Women. Marie and her daughters were intrigued to learn more about Sophia Snow and did research for several years visiting libraries and archives. Their research culminated in a March 2020 presentation by Patty Roggeveen, president/CEO of Sophia Snow Place. Marie was born in 1924 in New Brunswick, New Jersey. She moved at an early age to Bridgeport, CT with her parents Barnabas P. Toth, Mary S. Toth and grandfather Joseph Sebock where they established deep roots in the Hungarian community. Her brother Robert was born with special needs. Both parents were active in civic and community affairs. They nurtured the seeds of her wide ranging interests and activism. Marie met her late husband, Atty. Edward S. Gall, also of Hungarian descent, in Bridgeport. They married

When the Bloodroot Vegetarian Restaurant and Bookstore opened in the Black Rock neighborhood, Marie was a regular and recommended the restaurant to countless number of people. For a few years she also washed dishes and took orders at the front desk. Marie was very proud of her Hungarian heritage and spoke the language. She and Vicky traveled to Budapest while it was still under Communist Regime. Other trips to Hungary were with a Road Scholar tour, with Suzanne and then Suzanne and son-in-law George Marsh. During these visits she renewed connections with relatives and purchased crafts that she sold through her Hungarian Folk Art business. Marie was a life-long volunteer juggling these activities with family, work and school. She drove for the American Cancer Society taking patients to medical appointments, helped the Red Cross with disaster relief, was an AIDS buddy, served on the Executive Committee of Jobs with Peace/Nuclear Arms Freeze, worked at the Audubon Birdcraft Museum in Fairfield, and organized the Bridgeport and Fairfield Stamp Clubs. Traveling and enjoying new experiences gave her much pleasure. The "Gall Girls" visited family and friends around the United States and she made trips to Italy, England, Romania, Holland, Greece and Turkmenistan when Vicky served in the Peace Corps. Later in life, Marie began working as a library aide at the Fairfield Public Library. This combined with her family and numerous community activities kept her more than busy. She enjoyed driving to Boston with her mother to visit "the girls." Marie is survived by Victoria Gall of Hyde Park, MA, Suzanne Gall Marsh and partner George Marsh of Roslindale, MA. In Marie's memory, our family asks you to, "Do a good turn daily" the Girl Scout slogan since 1912. There will be a remembrance gathering later in 2021. Lawler & Crosby Funeral Home 617-323-5600.

Since the Federal, State, Local authorities have put in place social distancing guidelines, and places of worship have suspended services, we've found ways to help families continue to honor their loved ones.

We can meet with you in person, via telephone or email to assist with the planning process. We can also offer some alternatives to traditional rites and ceremonies by live streaming, online condolence books as well as other alternatives to traditional choices.

Hockey

players who have been in the program for a while.

"It's basically for anyone who's ever been interested in the PYL who has been interested in the girls hockey program or has played in the past and was concerned about the team sizes," she said. "The team sizes have always kind of been on the larger side because there has historically been a culture of wanting to give girls a place to play and they never wanted to turn anyone away."

Wilkens said that meant however that not as many players got a good deal of ice time during play, which can be discouraging.

"My daughter has played for the Lady Hawks for three years and the smallest team size she's had was 18," she said. "Which is obviously a challenge for the players who get less ice time, the parents who don't see their kids play and the coaches who have to manage these big teams. Out of nowhere though the interest has been growing to the point where we think we could field two teams at each U10 and U12 level."

Wilkins added they have three coaches who played professionally in college, including Tina Szocik playing for the Rensselaer women's ice hockey team, Erika von den Benken who played for UMass Amherst, and Kathleen Roche who played for Salve Regina.

"It's just awesome for these girls to not just have a female role model, but a female role model who played competitively in college is a really awesome thing for the girls to see and shows them the long-term vision for the sport," she said. "It's a first-class coaching team across the board but three of them are women who played in college and I think that's pretty cool personally."
