

Edwards wants ZBA changes, Wu says throw the BPDA out

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

Last week, District 1 City Councilor Lydia Edwards filed a call for a hearing to the Boston City Council to look at ways to improve transparency at the Boston Zoning Board of Appeals (ZBA).

Then this past Monday, At-Large City Councilor Michelle Wu launched a campaign to dissolve the Boston Planning and Development Agency (BPDA) and its legal entity the Economic Development Industrial Council (EDIC) and replace them with a City Planning Department. Wu has apparently been planning the campaign for some time, as there is now a web site at abolishthebpda.com where residents can get more information.

“Boston’s development system is broken; it’s a system of special approvals and exceptions designed to shut out community voices and it’s been this way for six decades,” she said in a statement Monday.

Wu also wants to abolish any agency’s power for urban renewal, which allowed the then-named Boston Redevelopment Authority to demolish the West End.

District 1 City Councilor

Wu’s plan calls for BPDA employees to become employees of the City of Boston. Many residents may be unaware that the BPDA is a quasi private public entity, and is not as beholden to the city as one might expect. According to Wu’s report, her plan is to split employees into 14 new departments under the new planning agency.

“The BPDA Board is seen as a rubber stamp for the Mayor and high-profile developers—

Kids, cops walk to school in Boston last Wednesday

Last Wednesday, students from neighborhoods across the city took part in “Safe Routes to School Boston” day, gathering together to walk to school on a beautiful fall morning. There were plenty of smiles as officers assigned to District E-13 (Jamaica Plain) and the Bureau of Community Engagement walked with students from the Curley K-8 School in Jamaica Plain, assisting at crosswalks and providing high fives and words of encouragement upon arrival at school. “Safe Routes to School Boston” is a city-wide effort to promote walking to school while rallying neighborhoods and the community as a whole to work together to make walking to school safe, popular, and fun.

Moving Day hits Allston, this time for Parkinson's

Hundreds came out to raise funds and keep moving for the sixth annual Parkinson's Foundation Moving Day Celebration in Allston on Saturday.

While Allston Christmas is done and finished, The Parkinson’s Foundation hosted Moving Day along the Charles River to promote healthy living with Parkinson’s and raise money for research programs on Saturday.

Community Development

Manager for the Parkinson’s Foundation Samantha Cheung said the event in Boston is part of a nationwide event to raise millions for Parkinson’s research.

“This is our sixth year doing it in Boston, and the Parkinson’s Foundation is a national program and we have more than 45 Moving Days throughout the country,” she said. “We’re very excited that we got such a great group of people out here.”

Dozens of organizations and vendors lined the finish line as hundreds ran or walked their way back. Cheung said the funds raised at the event go right into the nation grant program, which funds local pro-

54th Regiment rolls through Blue Hills Collaborative

The 54th Regiment Company A Volunteers came to host a living exhibit on Saturday at the Blue Hills Collaborative on Como Road in Hyde Park.

Exhibits of paintings, ammunition, rifles, soldier paraphernalia and Robert Gould Shaw's actual rapier were on display during the day, as well as the reenactors themselves.

The exhibit is part of the group's initiative to get more education about the regiment in Boston and Hyde Park education curricula. Hyde Park Main Streets Director Thien Simpson said she's been working with the 54th and Boston Main Streets (BMS) to get the word out about the group.

"We were just trying to find a place within the community that would allow us to do the exhibition, and a couple of years ago we did it at the Menino Arts Center, but that was a tiny place," she said.

They were then able to secure a time at the Blue Hills Collaborative for the exhibit.

"That was all Bob Vance," Simpson said.

Vance works as a reenactor himself, playing the settler, which is the role many civilian merchants took on during the war to supply armies with goods and services necessary to survive.

"It's fantastic, because you get a chance when you're talking to people and explaining after you do some research and reeducate yourself, you get entrenched in the camaradery and commitment to what the whole purpose of the war was, which was to allow African Americans to go into service for their country and participate in the fight for their freedom, that's how serious it was," Vance said.

First Sgt. Gerald Grimes said he's been working with the regiment for 20 years now.

"I joined because I found out a relative was in the regiment and he had siblings that were also in the 54th, 55th and 5th Calvary as well," he said. "When we found out we were descendants, that really gave me that push to join."

Grimes said that when he was growing up, the 54th was barely mentioned in the history he was taught in school.

"It's a good feeling to participate because it was basically unknown that blacks fought in the Civil War when I was growing up," he said. "I always thought it was whites versus whites to end slavery, I just didn't know. I did not learn that the first was the 54th in this state, and that's unfortunate, but teaching other people the history allows them to open their eyes to what happened, and it was a terrible and horrible war, but a necessary war to eradicate slavery."

The 54th is also looking for a permanent space for its exhibits, and they are looking to "drum up" support for the space by letting the community know what it means to have had the first black regiment in the U.S. military train down the street in Readville.

"This will allow more people to see who we are and what we do and we're hoping that someone will come in and have a space. We're always looking for that one person," said Second Lieutenant Benny White.

"A lot of people don't realize the 54th trained right here in Readville, and so this is something big for us and the goal is to get the museum," said Private Clifford Jackman.

Prayer to the Blessed Virgin

(Never known to fail!)

Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine, splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in this necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my mother. Oh Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth, I humbly beseech thee from the bottom of my heart to succor me in my necessity (make request). There are none that can withstand your power. Oh Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (three times). Holy Mary, I place this cause in your hands (three times). Say this prayer for three consecutive days and then you must publish and it will be granted to you. —P.A.M.

Working at 65, So What About Medicare?

Dear Rusty: My husband turns 65 in December of this year, but he is employed and will be on his employer's health insurance at least through this school year (May 2020). How should we inform Medicare of this situation and must we let Medicare know that he is presently insured by BCBS? When must we let Medicare know about these details? I know there is a certain window when no health questions are asked but what is that time frame? If my husband quits teaching in May, when does he let Medicare know he wants to start Part A and B in June 2020? Is there only open enrollment in the 3-month window of his birthday? Signed: Confused by Medicare

Dear Confused: If your husband has creditable healthcare coverage from his employer, he need not enroll in Medicare when he turns 65. His creditable employer coverage will exempt him from a late enrollment penalty when he enrolls in Medicare Part B (or D) later ("creditable" coverage is a group plan with at least 20 participants). When his employer coverage ends he will enter a Special Enrollment Period (SEP) which will last for 8 months from the date his employer coverage ends. As long as he enrolls in Medicare Part B before his SEP expires, your husband will not incur a late enrollment penalty. To sign up for Part B shortly before his employer coverage ends or during the 8 months after his employer ends, he should complete and submit an Application for Enrollment in Part B (CMS-40B) and a Request for Employment Information (CMS-L564), both of which can be found at this website: https://www.cms.gov/Medicare/CMS-Forms/CMS-Forms-List.html.

Your husband may want to enroll in Part B prior to his employment coverage ending in order to avoid a lapse in healthcare coverage (it usually takes a couple months for Medicare Part B to become effective). Note that unless your husband is contributing to a Health Savings Account (HSA), he may wish to enroll in Medicare Part A at age 65. Medicare Part A (hospitalization coverage) is free if your husband is also eligible for Social Security, and he will need to be enrolled in Part A in order to enroll in Part B (doctors and outpatient services) and Part D (prescription drug coverage), both of which have a premium associated with them. He will also need to be enrolled in Part A to collect Social Security after age 65.

If your husband is already collecting Social Security when he turns 65, he will be automatically enrolled in both Part A and Part B, but he can, if desired, decline Part B until his employer coverage ends. Please also note that if your husband wishes Part D prescription drug coverage (provided by private insurance carriers) he must enroll in a plan within 63 days of his existing employer drug coverage ending to avoid a Part D late enrollment penalty. After age 65, one cannot go more than 63 days without creditable prescription drug coverage without incurring a late enrollment penalty for enrolling in a Part D plan later.

For your awareness, if your husband does not enroll in Medicare before his SEP expires, he will not be able to enroll again until the General Enrollment Period (GEP) the following year (the GEP runs from January through March of each year, for coverage to start on July 1 of that year). I suggest your husband enrolls in Medicare a couple months before his employment ends (to avoid a lapse in coverage), but in any case he should not miss enrolling during the special enrollment period, because the late enrollment penalties are significant and are recurring (he'll pay the premium penalty for the rest of his life).

Finally, there is no "window" for qualifying medical questions to be asked when enrolling in Medicare; everyone who is eligible by virtue of paying FICA payroll taxes, or via a spouse who did so, is covered regardless of their current health.

Ask most people which state could be—how shall I say this?—the most crooked, with a high number of employees capturing the trifecta of being overpaid, underworked, and dishonest, many of whom relish being seen frequenting churches, temples, mosques, and other places of worship. To this question some will answer, "Massachusetts" because of all the Herald's true stories over the years. The ranking of number one is due to a number of events ranging back to the graft with the Boston Common garage and UMass construction, the recent Registry of Motor Vehicles and State Police scandals as well as the hordes of political appointees and beneficiaries of nepotism at various state agencies as well as at authorities, such as Mass Port Authority, Mass Convention Center Authority, Boston Planning and Development Authority, and the MBTA. (I know there is a lot of painting with a broad brush here, but . . .)

If not the Bay State, maybe New Jersey would surface as a top contender in the "crookedness" quotient. Any other candidates?

So it came as a surprise to me recently read that the residents of North Dakota are being duped by that state's employees. Perhaps the surprise resulted from my holding rural residents, who live closer to the land, in high regard, as opposed to us city folk, who are more acclimated to filth and slime.

In recent years North Dakota has been a mecca for the oil and gas companies. The small town of Williston is regarded as the fastest growing community in the country because of its location, as it outgrows its capacity for restaurants, motels, and bars as well as police and medical services. (The need for increased schooling has not grown that much because the oil and gas workers tend to come alone and live in trailers.)

North Dakota's Health Department indeed has egg on its face after a liquid natural gas pipeline leak that was much more extensive than originally reported; this one may take ten years to clean up.

The Associated Press obtained records that the Health Department has identified more than 8,000 reported leaks in the last five years but did not issue public updates on a spill's severity, nor did the department issue any notices to the public on cleanup status.

The worst instance of a coverup occurred six years ago in the northwestern part of that state when a wheat farmer—not the pipeline company—

My Kind of Town/

discovered what was to be an 840,000-gallon spill. The debacle was hushed by a week and a half by state regulators and only acknowledged when the Associated Press inquired about the leak.

Nebraskans cannot help but be discouraged by a recent court ruling that permits construction of a pipe line through its pristine farmland. Are they worried about spills or the spills in conjunction with state officials and politicians lying to them about the deleterious effects of spills?

Yes, since misery likes company, it's nice to know that Massachusetts has competitors in the category of employees not doing their jobs.

CENTRE STREET ROAD DIET'S HARMFUL IMPACTS

To the Editor:

I realize the Centre Street "Road Diet" plan is the number one topic of discussion in West Roxbury and I have been opposed to this from the very start. I currently live on Mt. Vernon Street off of Centre Street and a life-long West Roxbury resident. There is another issue with the City's plans that has been rarely discussed that I would like to point out for your readers' attention.

I have reviewed the City's Transportation Department plan for the lane reduction and installation of protected bike lanes. The City also proposes to remove the traffic signals at both Mt. Vernon Street at Centre and Park Street at Centre. This aspect is very troubling for those of us who depend on these traffic signals to both enter Centre Street safely in vehicles and also for pedestrian crossings at signalized intersections.

The intersection of Mt. Vernon Street abuts the Lyndon Elementary School, the YMCA, the West Roxbury branch library, and local businesses. How does the removal of traffic signals promote greater pedestrian safety at this extremely busy intersection? I can imagine the difficulty and anxiety parents and kids will experience as they try to navigate across that street without a pedestrian activated signal to stop traffic. There better be a police officer on hand at that location for every school day if this nonsense goes through.

Also, if these traffic signals are removed how do I and my neighbors on that side of Centre Street take a left to get to Roche Brothers for example? One option is to go to LaGrange Street or Corey Street in order to take the left onto Centre Street but those feeder streets are continuously backed up, particularly at peak traffic hours (which gets longer and longer each week). The other option is to attempt to take a left off of Mt. Vernon onto Centre across a bike lane, a parking lane, a travel lane, a left turn only lane, and merge into another travel lane—all without a traffic signal giving me a right of way. I'm sure all the drivers on Centre Street will graciously allow me to cut across that street after having sat in backed-up traffic. Good luck with that!

And the same situation will occur at Park Street at Centre.

This plan was designed by the student of the nutty professor from Northeastern who lives in JP. Clearly, the teacher

Hyde Park Youth Basketball Association heating up

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

Every Saturday of October, the Hyde Park Youth Basketball Association (HPYBBA) will be hosting registration session at the Hyde Park Municipal Building from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m.

League Director James Michel said he's been volunteering a the league for decades, and he knows it's a great way to build character and learn team work.

"I started coaching 26 years ago, this will be my 27th season, and I've been the director here for 20 years," he said. "I've always loved team sports and I think it's the way people can really come together in a positive moment. It's a great learning experience to be part of a team and there is nothing more inspiring than seeing a bunch of 9, 10, 11, 12, 13-year-olds or whatever age group of kids come together and become a team."

Michel said in his time, he's seen a lot of kids go through the system and he knows from personal experience as well as the stories he hears from returning players that the league really helps educate players in social skills as well as physical.

"It's a great set of life lessons about sacrifice and bonding and connecting in an authentic way," he said. "And of course it's fun. It's also kind of like music you know? There's nothing better than when a band comes together and gets in sync; it's the same experience."

Michel said the community really comes together around the league too, which fortunately allows the league to offer registration for as low cost as they can."

"We've got about 20 sponsors, who are all local," he said. "We've got Kenney Cleaners, Cappy's Pizza, the River Grille and all the banks. Our big sponsors are Rockland Trust and the Hyde Park Coop gives us money as well, and we basically leverage that with all the volunteer energy and charge families very little."

Michel said they field teams made up of anywhere from 150 to 400 youngsters every year.

"There's always been ebbs and flows in my 20 years of being a director," he said.

Michel added that the league is for every skill level.

"I think one of the things for me that I'm proudest of is we are truly a recreational league, we serve kids who will go on to play in high school and maybe college and we serve kids who will never be invited to put on a uniform, and we love them all the same," he said.

Boys and girls ages 6 to 14 are invited to register any Saturday this October from 9 a.m. to noon. For more information, go to facebook.com/HPYBA.

Jamaica Plain Open Studios on Sept. 28 and 29 stretched from The Monument and Loring Greenough House to Porter Street on the edge of The Brewery.

Stonybrook Gallery opened at 27 Porter St. in 2007 and holds classes for adults and teens in welding, metal casting, figure sculpture and jewelry making.

At Open Studios it hosted blacksmith John Hayden who is on a mission; he literally practices what the Old Testament prophet Isaiah preached, that swords be turned into plowshares.

Hayden turns guns into garden tools.

“I’ve been an amateur backyard blacksmith for 19 years,” he said at his propane gas forge inside the brick gallery building.

“A few years ago I read in the New York Times about Raw Tools from Colorado,” he said. “Michael Martin and Shane Claiborne. They cut up a donated AK 47 assault rifle and made it into garden tools.”

“I called them up and said, what can I do? How can I help?” Raw Tools sent Hayden gun parts and he started about a year ago to make garden tools called Guns2Gardens.

“I have an MIT degree in electrical engineering,” Hayden said. “That’s my day job making safety features for software.”

“Nights and weekends, I’m a blacksmith.”

“in 2000 I took a one year course in blacksmithing at Old Sturbridge Village through the Worcester Center for Crafts,” Hayden said.

He took more courses and began making garden tools at Prospect Hill Forge in Waltham.

Guns2Gardens operates out of Stonybrook Gallery.

Ann Sasser directs the gallery and she spoke with The Bulletin.

“John has known about us for years,” she said, “and he reached out to us about a year ago. We were and still are really excited about the idea.”

“Together we’re working toward setting up forging at Stonybrook to facilitate workshops with gun violence victims. It will be a great addition.”

Hayden works with master welder Walter Clark who lives in Egleston Square and has been an instructor and artist at Stonybrook for about eight years.

He’s learning the blacksmith trade from Hayden.

Clark took a gun barrel and after thrusting it into the blazing furnace, put it on the anvil and demonstrated how to twist the molten metal.

“There goes one less gun,” said Hayden.

“We aren’t part of the gun buy-back program yet,” Hayden said, “but we hope to be soon.”

The Sandy Hook schoolyard massacre in 2013 inspired Martin and Claiborne Rawtools and Hayden would like to do a commemoration event.

“We hope to get a real weapon through the gun buy-back and work with the City of Boston, Mass General Hospital and UMass and do a program on the anniversary in December,” Hayden said.

Hayden’s garden tools from guns were put to use during the Beauty in the Barrio event at the Peace Garden in Egleston Square on August 23.

Volunteer students from the Harvard First Year Urban program used a swan neck hoe to weed the shrub beds.

“We donated that to the Egleston Square Main Streets,” Hayden said. “One of the four tools we used during the event. One was a leaf trowel Walter made.”

“We’re at the pilot stage where we’re limited only by the supply of donated firearm material.”

“We’re really looking forward to supporting the next round of local buy-back initiative, especially the mid-December buy-back by UMass Medical on the anniversary of Sandy Hook.”

“We hope to reforge fire arms into dozens of garden tools for community gardens in Boston and Worcester,” Hayden said.

Neponset River Greenway Council discusses upcoming celebrations

Mary Ellen Gambon
Staff Reporter

The Neponset River Greenway Council's (NRGC) 15 members met on Wed., Oct. 2 at the Area E-18 police station to plan the fall's upcoming community celebrations and discuss area issues.

It was Hyde Park's turn to host the meeting, as the venues rotate among the neighborhoods of Hyde Park, Mattapan, Dorchester and Milton.

Chair Jessica Mink of Roslindale announced that on Sept. 25, the Neponset River Greenway, a multi-use trail system along the banks of the Neponset River, was named one of six "Great Places in America in 2019" by the American Planning Association (APA). One of the reasons for the award was improving access to the trails for Mattapan residents, including the addition of a blue bikes station and affordable housing along the greenway.

"The public spaces recognized this year demonstrate the importance of planning in creating welcoming, multi-use spaces for the entire community to enjoy and come together," said Kurt Christiansen, APA president, in a press release. "The Neponset River Greenway is a national example of how improving accessibility to community assets can drastically improve the lives of residents and make communities more inclusive."

The area was once an industrial corridor with factories and a paper mill. Now it has been transformed into a publicly-accessible network of open spaces and trails where people can enjoy the environment and stay in shape, thanks to the efforts of environmental activists.

"On the second day after this section first opened, I saw a man in a wheelchair using the trail," Mink said. "This shows how accessible the area that was once hidden has become for residents."

She added that the Neponset River Greenway joins the Emerald Necklace, the Back Bay, Leventhal Park, Washington St., and Fields Corner as Great Places in America.

To celebrate this achievement, the NRGC is planning on holding an event on Sun., Oct. 27. A community walk will begin at Mattapan Station, with guest speakers at the Harvest River Bridge near Ryan Playground. The walk is about 1.3 miles and takes an average of 45 minutes to complete. Walkers can collect trash along the way.

Member Lee Toma of Milton volunteered to lend his public address system. Several members volunteered to share the history of the organization, the development of the area's trail system and the building of the Harvest River Bridge, and the importance of the award. Members of the APA will also be in attendance.

Hyde Park leader and Neponset River Watershed Association (NepRWA) board member Martha McDonough said she would reach out to Keep Hyde Park Beautiful (HKPB) to join the effort. She also suggested borrowing bike carts for people who could not complete the entire walk to offer a transportation option.

Vivien Morris of the Mattapan Food and Fitness Coalition (MFFC) told the group she would reach out to groups like Mattapan Love and Mattapan Walks. She currently involved in organizing a six-team Mattapan walking challenge on Saturdays with MFFC.

Vivian Ortiz, a Mattapan organizer, offered to reach out to Boston Harbor Now to see if representatives would like to speak about the harbor's connection to the Neponset River.

Sarah Lensing, a planner at the Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR) the said she will give a presentation of the 125-year history of the river "and put it in a larger context."

Another event the group is planning is a pumpkin float in the spirit of Halloween. The DCR and the NVGC are joining forces for the annual event, which will take place beginning on Davenport Creek at Pope John Paul II Park in Dorchester at 5 p.m.

The pumpkins will be lit by NVGC volunteers with battery operated candles. DCR volunteers at the river banks will place them on floats to cast into the Neponset.

Volunteers offered to place flyers along the trails in all communities, as well as at pumpkins at grocery stores, farmers markets, local coffee houses and ice cream shops, and Lambert's.

McDonough addressed traffic mismanagement in Wolcott Square, which is comprised of several dead-end neighborhood streets near the Father Hart Bridge.

"The road was closed down at 6 p.m.," she said. "Traffic can be backed up through Readville and beyond going toward Truman Prkwy. There was no email from the City. The Father Hart Bridge was totally closed."

The Neponset River Greenway Council met at the E-18 Police Department Station in Hyde Park to discuss upcoming events, awards and clean ups.

She added that she was approached by a state trooper, who told her the route was closed. "And there has been construction on the Dana Ave. Bridge, too," McDonough said.

McDonough added that the local businesses have been impacted because their parking has been shut down after 6 p.m.

"I talked to the guy who owns the liquor store," she said. "He just opened two months ago, and he had no idea this was going to happen. Why is this coming in front of our businesses? These businesses do most of their work in the evenings."

State Commander Lt. James A. Bazzinotti of the State Police told the group that it is the construction company's responsibility for signage.

CALLING ALL YOUTH BASKETBALL PLAYERS

Registration Opens Oct. 21; Program Begins Oct. 28 - Calling all youth basketball players! The YMCA of Greater Boston, in partnership with the Boston Celtic's Shamrock Foundation, is kicking-off the nonprofit's fall youth basketball development league for youth starting at age 3 through the 4th grade. All YMCA members are invited to play in the eight-week program, which starts Oct. 28, at select YMCA branch locations. Registration is open Oct. 21 through Nov. 1. The goal of the league is to teach youth players the values of the Boston Celtics with an emphasis on health. The clinic schedule includes a mix of large group activities and exercises, small break out drills, friendly competitions and improvement-based games. How it works: Premiere youth basketball coaches will divide participants into instructional and recreational teams based on age. A current Celtics player and other VIPs will be in attendance to engage with players and participate in activities. Sportsmanship, positive attitude, work ethic and primarily FUN is encouraged throughout the season. Each participant will receive a special edition Jr. Celtics reversible shooting shirt, access to special events with Celtic VIPs, two tickets to Celtics 2019 Open Practice and a team photo. Participants who register prior Nov. 1 will save $10. For more information, to register, or to see if and when a clinic will be offered at a YMCA of Greater Boston branch near you, visit: <https://ymcaboston.org/jrceltics>.

2020 KIA Telluride

What is it? It is a big SUV that is something I would never have imagined, built in Georgia. This is an all-new vehicle for KIA and is setting new high standards.

Let's start with the base front drive LX at $31,690 (destination fee: $1,045), nicely equipped. The one engine is a powerful 3.8 liter, V/6 with 291 horsepower via a multi-mode 8-speed automatic. Push-button start, 18-inch tires and alloy wheels, easy to enter third row seating, heated outside mirrors with turn signals, rear-view camera, blind spot assist, lane keeping assist, keyless entry with panic button, rear heater ducts, plus all other safety equipment and standard features. You can step up to the AWD LX at $33,690 – for the snowbelt area, a very wise choice.

Our test vehicle was the top-of-the-line SX AWD. The Telluride feels more like a smaller sport SUV than the large SUV that it is. The V/6 has ample power to move while delivering 19 city, 24 highway, 21 MPG combined. LED lighting is everywhere. The design and style looks very modern and vision is great from any angle. The large, touchscreen center mount display is clear and easy to read, even in the sun. Our test vehicle had two large glass roofs. Everyone who looked at the Telluride could not believe it was a KIA. One of my customers even took it for a short ride and now plans on buying one. Did I mention the heated steering wheel plus heated and ventilated front seats? The feel of the interior is super glove soft and looks very impressive and very expensive. Everything in this SUV is top quality at a very reasonable cost.

As most manufacturers offer, our test Telluride had many options including snow white pearl paint: $395; and the SX Prestige Package with heads-up display, Nappa leather, premium head liner and sun visors, heated and ventilated second row seats, rain-sensing wipers, 110-volt inverter: $2,000. At $43,490 (with options: $47,705). 10 year/100,000 mile power train warranty, 5 year/60,000 mile basic warranty.

had to reissue the agenda. Due to Open Meeting Law, that meant they had to wait to start the meeting to allow 48 hours of notice. Acting Chair for the Board Markk Erlich, filling in for Christine Araujo, said any representatives of appointments that were supposed to present to the Board before 11:30 a.m. could defer without any other explanation.

For Roxbury Prep, that wasn't the reason for the deferment. Attorney representing Uncommon Schools Joseph Hanley said they were again asking for a deferral this time for the same reason as before. The project has not been approved by the Boston Planning and Development Agency (BPDA) and he said his clients, Uncommon Schools, needs to continue the BPDA process before coming before the board.

"We are still in the Article 80 Process of Review with the BPDA," Hanley said. "This is a project that has obviously had a lot of eyes and participation on it, and we look forward to having our day here and I also understand the need not to have continual deferrals, so I would ask the Board to give us three to four months to finish the process with the BPDA."

Hanley said he's hoping for the Article 80 Process to be concluded by the end of the year 2019. The School was scheduled to present at the June BPDA Board meeting, but according to BPDA Project Manager Aisling Kerr: "BPDA staff has determined that the proposed Roxbury Preparatory Charter High School project at 361 Belgrade Ave. in Roslindale will remain under review, and will not be brought before the BPDA Board of Directors for a vote at their monthly meeting," she said in June.

The Roxbury Preparatory High School proposal has been on the books for at least two years now, and even after the school reduced its size by about 50,000 square feet and more than 250 students, many residents are still conflicted with the plan.

Opponents cite traffic concerns. They feel the transportation plan presented by the school - which involves a heavy reliance on the MBTA - is not sufficient to keep parents off the streets during rush hour dropping off their children. Others feel that the students themselves would have cars, despite the school's assurance that they would put a disciplinary system in place to discourage that practice. Opponents still say the school is too big for the location, which up until recently housed Clay Chevrolet and Auto Center.

The school has been the subject of much debate over the last few years in the neighborhoods of Roslindale and West Roxbury.

Many other residents have expressed support for the school, both from the Parkway and abroad. Some cite the lack of a high school, as the Roslindale High School closed down in the 70s and the West Roxbury Education Complex was shut down earlier this year for extensive renovations or even a demolition and replacement. Many opponents have repeatedly asked why the school just doesn't buy that land from the Boston Public Schools, to which representatives have repeatedly said they had tried, but the BPS is not willing to sell land to a charter school.

Roxbury Preparatory High School currently operates out of two locations, in Jamaica Plain and Roxbury, and does not have a cafeteria, theater or a gym; problems the new development is looking to solve. It also means many students have to commute back and forth between those locations and proponents have stated they believe the students deserve one single location.

The current proposal encapsulates 49,520 gross square feet for 562 students containing a three-story classroom wing, cafeteria, gymnasium, administrative offices and storage space. It would also contain two second-level exterior usable rooftop courtyards, and 30 spaces of valet-assisted surface parking and 46 below-level garage spaces.

The October BPDA Board Meeting is set for Oct. 17 from 3:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m., but as of the date of publication no agenda has been set. To view more about the Roxbury Prep High School plans, go to bostonplans.org/projects/development-projects/roxbury-preparatory-charter-high-school.

Indecent problems plaguing Dale Street, neighbors concerned

Mary Ellen Gambon
Staff Reporter

The most pressing crime issues brought up by the 25 attendees at the monthly Dale Street Crime Watch meeting on Tuesday, Oct. 8 at Weider Park were not matters on the police report, but the 911 calls that did not make the list, including drug dealing and public intercourse.

Part of the problem, according to group leaders Kim O'Connell and Beth Columbo of Roslindale, is the attitude of the officers who answer the emergency calls.

"It's an ongoing thing with the 911 dispatch operators," Columbo said. "We've had several incidences over the past month, and we wanted to bring it to your attention to find out what can be done."

"There was a gentleman who came out of the park and got into a Lincoln," O'Connell said. "He got into a car and tried to drive off legless."

"My son called 911, and they put him on hold," O'Connell said. "He hung up, and when he tried to call back, he was put on hold again. He stayed on hold for a while, and then he hoped he would get a call back. He did – 20 minutes later. He got a description. My concern was that it could have been a domestic issue. It could have been anything."

O'Connell said she had called a week later about an incident, but a car never came in a response to a 911 call.

Another woman said she was outside on Thursday, Sept. 26 at around 4 or 5 p.m. in the same area when she called 911, but received no response to her call. There was no record of the call in the police report, which officers checked on site.

Captain Joseph Gillespie, one of four Boston Police Department Area E-18 officers who attended the meeting, asked for a list of dates and times of the incidents so that he could check into what had been going on in the neighborhood.

The alleged rudeness of the 911 department has gone beyond the Dale Street vicinity to other parts of E-18, according to Columbo.

"A couple of nights ago, Kim and I were coming down by the Beech Street projects," she said. "There was a woman who jumped up and slammed her hands on the front of the car. Then she went to the next car and started doing the same thing to the cars behind us as well."

"I had her call the West Roxbury Police," O'Connell said.

According to Columbo, "The officer was so rude; she didn't want to take the call because we didn't have a street address."

On Sunday, Oct. 6, O'Connell and Columbo were driving on Truman Parkway around midnight on their way home when a car came around the corner with its flashers on. The car hit another vehicle, which was leaking gas.

"The driver appeared to be drunk," Columbo said. "She got out of the car and started throwing beer cans. So I call 911, and again I get the woman with the nasty attitude. She wants the street address. I gave the cross streets. What are we supposed to do?"

Sgt. Daniel Keane said the protocol would be to ask for the person's supervisor. Also, a caller can get the dispatcher's identification number, which an officer is required to give.

"When complaints are filed against them, it's pretty cut and dried," Keane said. "There's a recording of the call. They should still treat you nice when they answer."

Gillespie noted that he used to be a 911 operator, so he knows the officers are trained to be respectful.

Columbo asked if she and O'Connell could visit Boston Police Headquarters to speak with the 911 staff to find out about the breakdown in communication. Gillespie said that would have to be worked out with the operations department at BPD headquarters. O'Connell noted that in the previous decade, the captain facilitated that.

Gillespie noted that this is one of the biggest districts in the city, and that to be more effective in policing the area it would be helpful to get specific dates and times.

"We can't just hear at a meeting that cars have been speeding on Dale St.," he said. "If we have a list of dates and times, that's more helpful."

O'Connell said she will provide a list of the incidents she and other residents mentioned.

Another problem a resident mentioned are drug deals and people having intercourse in a car at the end of Dale Street.

"On Friday and Saturday night there is a car that parks at the end of the street," a neighbor said. "The younger kids are rolling blunts. What really concerns me are the people with needles. I was walking my dog around 11:30 at night, and when I walked by a car, I saw a guy's bare backside."

"There was somebody having sex at the end of my driveway Friday night," O'Connell said. "I turned on the floodlights in front of my house, and they never moved. I called 911, and nothing happened."

"I have never heard anything like this from the other neighborhood groups," Gillespie said. "I'm shocked that no one's coming for you guys. I'd like to look into it."

On a happier note, Gillespie noted that there will be extra officers patrolling the area on Halloween to watch over the area's Trick or Treaters.

"I want to thank the police," O'Connell said. "Our children felt very safe last year, and so did the parents."

On the MBTA police front, resident were excited about the progress made on the Dale St. Bridge after months of complaints. There were two attacks on the footbridge, which runs to Hyde Park Ave. The bridge had been littered with graffiti and overgrown with brush.

Lauren Margharita of Roslindale said she has "never seen the bridge so clean in three years." "When we first came here, there was a couch down there, a toilet and a bike," she said.

O'Connell said there was a grill at one point.

Margharita added that she felt the police were trying to "establish a good rapport with the neighborhood."

"Keolis finally owned up to the fact that the bridge was their responsibility," Keane said after the meeting. "They cleaned the bridge and patched up some cracks and potholes. They also looked into some lights and cameras."

"The MBTA did follow up with what they promised to do," Adriana Cillo said. "They cleaned up and they removed the paint."

"We have a great relationship with Dale Street," Keane said. "We are looking into these issues. They are a very good group and they are good to work with. We will have some extra patrols out here for Halloween."

The Dale Street Crime Watch will not meet again until April 2020. The group will remain active via Facebook.

Community comes together for Rose's Bounty

Kevin Perrington-Turner
Staff Reporter

Last Saturday, night more than 100 people came out to support the Rose's Bounty Food Pantry Fundraiser at Mosley's ballroom in Dedham.

The Rose's Bounty Food Pantry on 77 Stratford St. in West Roxbury held the event with raffles, donations, and live music from "The Urge" for the night.

Director Darra Slagle said she's proud of the community holding up the organization.

"As usual, the community shows up. It's a community organization," she said. "We can't do it without our neighbors helping us to support our most vulnerable neighbors in need."

Slagle added that they do far more than provide food to those who need it.

"I want to make people aware that we are more than just a food pantry. Although we are providing food to people, we also have multiple other programs. For example, we have a children's elementary backpack program, and we just sent food to kids over the weekend who were hungry so they have the nutrients to do better in school" Slagle said.

Slagle continued by speaking of what else the Rose's Food Pantry does to support the community.

"We have our veterans program that we are super proud of. We are currently serving over 54 veterans... nobody in this country should be going hungry."

Slagle went on, "My general concern is that there are people we are not reaching. And we need to figure out how we get to the people in the community that we aren't currently serving."

Resident and volunteer Alice Donaldson said it's just the right thing to do to support Slagle and the pantry's programs.

"I think it's a wonderful cause" she said. "A lot of people are not able to take care of themselves for one reason or another. We help. That's the most important thing."

She also touched upon children and the importance of feeding them.

"There are children involved. And you know it's a sad thing to see a child go hungry, and in this country it should never happen, but it does. For one reason or another, whether a person has mental problems or can't help themselves, that's why we are here."

More than 100 residents came out to support the Rose's Bounty Food Pantry in West Roxbury last week at the group's annual fundraiser.

Donaldson spoke on what she hopes to see from events like this in the future.

"We want to see less poverty in the world. We want to see less people hungry. And that's really the long terms goal. But in the meanwhile, let's help."

"I think it's great, they've been doing it for a very long time" said local supporter Ellen King.

She spoke on her ideas of what steps to take to solve the issue of hunger.

"Mental health. We need to start training people about mental health. We need to understand the reasons why some of these people are in the positions that they're in. Nine times out of 10 it's a mental health issue that's been flying unaddressed for a very long time.

"if you need a hip replacement or some special surgery every doctor knows right away who's the best person to see." King continued "But, when you ask about mental health, they just send you on your way with a phone number. It's very frustrating."

EILEEN MCNAMARA, AUTHOR OF "EUNICE: THE KENNEDY WHO CHANGED THE WORLD" TO SPEAK AT THE WEST ROXBURY BRANCH LIBRARY ON OCTOBER 17TH

Eileen McNamara, author of "Eunice: The Kennedy Who Changed the World" will speak at the Annual Meeting of the Friends of the West Roxbury Branch Library on Thursday, Oct. 17, 2019 at the West Roxbury Branch Library, 1961 Centre Street, West Roxbury. The Annual Meeting will begin with a reception for Friends' members at 6:30 p.m. McNamara's talk will begin at 7 p.m. and is free and open to the public.

In her talk, McNamara, the former Pulitzer Prize-winning columnist for The Boston Globe, will contend that Eunice Kennedy Shriver leaves a more profound legacy than any of her vaunted brothers. McNamara had access to Kennedy Shriver's never-before-seen papers in writing "Eunice." She argues that the determination and vision which led Kennedy Shriver to found the Special Olympics was born of rage. The rage was directed at the medical establishment that failed her sister Rosemary; at her revered but dismissive father; at the government's failure to provide equality to the intellectually handicapped.

McNamara recounts that while Joe Kennedy was grooming his sons for political power, cigar-smoking, determined Kennedy Shriver was using her father's fortune and her brothers' political power to ignite a civil rights movement that benefits millions of intellectually impaired adults and children.

Copies of "Eunice" will be available for sale and signing at the event. Friends' memberships can be purchased at the door or on the Friends website, FriendsOfTheWRLibrary.org and there's good reason for this perception. A review of BPDA Board meetings from 2014-2018 found only 22 non-unanimous votes out of an estimated 1,708," the report stated.

Also detailed in the report is Wu's plan for the financial side. The report states that while the city will be taking on the 252 full-time positions within the BPDA, those costs would be offset by the city taking on the property assets that generates income for the BPDA.

Wu's proposal would have to be approved by the state legislature in the form of a home-rule petition from the Boston City Council, so there are some hurdles for this proposal. Other aspects of her plan listed include the creation of a model community benefit agreement or a community benefit ordinance and a home-rule petition to amend the Zoning Enabling Act to change the requirements for the ZBA's appointed seats to create a wider representation of the community interests.

BPDA Director Brian Golden said in a statement that the agency has created more than 100,000 jobs and 6,000 new income-restricted units since 2014.

"Proposing to abolish the BPDA ignores the reality of the present day community-based planning agency, and discredits the hard working staff who are in our neighborhoods every single day engaging residents on how we prepare for Boston's future," he said in his statement.

Earlier last week, North End/East Boston Councilor Lydia Edwards proposed a new plan to organize transparency within the ZBA.

"We clearly need to update the ZBA," she said.

Edwards represents two neighborhoods experiencing severe development, with several high-profile cases involving neighborhood opposition to development and the ZBA approving them anyway.

Edwards' plan is to give the community more input and information on the ZBA. While this is all up in the air at this point, she said she wants to establish a report on variances by neighborhood and zoning district that would help to inform future zoning by clearly indicating where actual development practices and the zoning code differ. Basically, it would identify areas of the city where developers ignore the zoning code by requesting zoning relief in dozens of instances on one singular project.

"We're dealing with an

BPDA Director

extreme development boom in Boston's history, which is a wonderful thing that's happening; we have recently learned that we are halfway through with 30,000 units coming online," she said. "And yet, we're going through that development, that boom, that change of our city that's extreme, fast and intense, with a 60-year-old plan. This is the beginning of a conversation to say we need to do better."

Edwards also said she wants to review the records and notice policies at the ZBA, as well as increase the representation on the ZBA of renters, civil rights and fair housing experts and environmental experts on the board, which she feels is not currently the case.

"There are actual positions reserved for real estate agencies, for labor, for all the different perspectives, and that I wonder, if it's really setting us up to have a limited conversation," she said. "We need to hear from renters and homeowners, planners and fair-housing experts, experts in environmental protections and those who are experts in workers' rights and safety and those who are specifically interested in historical preservation, ensuring that we are developing a Boston for all. Today's law actually requires the membership of parties at a risk of, I think, creating a conflict of interest. The real estate industry should not sit on any board making regulatory decisions about real estate."

Edwards pointed out that when she first sat on confirmation hearings – the City Council can vote to approve or not approve appointed members to the ZBA – she found the kinds of questions they could ask to inform their decision-making were limited.

"Not only was the conversation limited by statute, it was limited by the way in which we have been operating here in Boston," she said.

Every sitting city councilor signed on to attend the proposed hearing.

"We have about 1.3 million grants spread throughout the country and in research alone, we fund about $22 million that goes right back into the community," she said.

One of those grantees was local resident Linda Hall, who started a local non profit program called Parkinson's Fitness to engage those with Parkinson's to get moving and keep moving.

"Linda is awesome, and they do a great job," Cheung said. "We're here to share exercise demos because we know movement is key in Parkinson's. Exercise demos, like Rocksteady Boxing or Parkinson's Fitness with Linda Hall and a few other community organizations make sure patients have the information they need while also getting everyone together."

Hall started the program with her family because her husband Keith, described on their web site as a "the experienced Navy flight instructor, military reconnaissance and commercial airlines pilot, staunch fitness enthusiast and personal trainer, wage-earner husband and father of a young baseball-playing son" was diagnosed with Parkinson's at age 55. Hall said she never gave up, and their son Max kept up to keep Kieth moving.

"My dad has had Parkinson's since I was about 12 or 13, and I'm 25 now. My parents started this organization teaching fitness classes," said Max. "It's amazing, they received an honor today at the ceremony and we just wanted to come out and support them."

Linda Hall and Max Hall were both recognized as caregivers during the event. Max said the day was amazing to see so many willing to help.

"It's incredible just to see that there's so many people going through the same things and people coming together to find a cure, it's incredible, because I know certainly at times it can feel like you're alone, like it's just us going through this, but you can see everyone going through the same things and fighting together, it's very inspiring," Max said.

Youville House Director of Communications Yanira Burgos emceed the event and said her organization works as an option for assisted living, with a focus on Parkinson's patients.

"We basically linked up with the Parkinson's Foundation and we've been able to work together to pull off events like this," she said. "I help the Parkinson's program at Youville to as many materials the Parkinson's Foundation has."

Residents Clarence Friedman and Brian Coonley said they were coming out to this Moving Day as well as the one in Buffalo, New York, held earlier in September.

"My wife's father has Parkinson's, and we come every year," he said. "My wife's been doing this since her father was diagnosed, and it's a great event, it's great to get out and moving in a community that deserves it and it's a great way to organize for the cause."

Boston University student India Wilerson said this was her first time coming out and representing BU to the community in terms of the research her lab does towards treating Parkinson's.

"I'm here with a research lab at Boston University called the Steplab for Sensory Motor Rehabilitation Engineering, and we're currently doing research on Parkinson's," she said. "An event like this is perfect for us because there are obviously a lot of people who are supporting the research and are interested in improving quality of life for people with Parkinson's."

She added that it's great to see so many residents coming together for Parkinson's research and to stay healthy.

"It's awesome; physical activity is so important in so many kinds of diseases and especially a condition like Parkinson's," she said. "It's just so great to see so many people out and moving, even though it's a little chilly out here."

Cannabis Education Discovery (CED) representative Callie Farmer and Nurse Practitioner Julie Battel said they were out to educate residents on how cannabis can help treat Parkinson's symptoms.

"Samantha invited us to come out and tell people what we do, which is medical marijuana certification, evaluation and education," Farmer said.

"One of the brain structures that's deeply affected in Parkinson's is the basal ganglia, and the basal ganglia has an enormous amount of cannabinoid receptors," Battel said, adding that the human body makes its own cannabinoids – endocannabinoids, but those can be supplemented to a positive effect with cannabis consumption.

Community Meeting

PLAN: Dudley Square

Monday, October 21
6:00 PM - 7:45 PM

Boston Water and Sewer Commission
980 Harrison Ave, 2nd floor Training Room
Roxbury, Massachusetts, 02119

Event Description

This open house style meeting will build upon previous PLAN: Dudley workshops and will focus on development objectives and guidelines for the Crescent parcels and Malcom X and Putnam parcels (Parcel A/B). We will spend time looking at original design guidelines for the parcels and will build upon the planning and engagement that has been done up until now.

As with all previous workshops, feedback provided will be taken into consideration for incorporation into the RFP documents. Throughout the evening there will be opportunities for attendees to engage in dialogue with City and BPDA team members, regarding development objectives and design guidelines.

PLAN: Dudley Square is an initiative to think strategically about the types of uses and the scale of development best suited for the future of Dudley Square and Roxbury. PLAN: Dudley Square build on the visions presented in both the Roxbury Strategic Master Plan and Dudley Vision.

We look forward to seeing you at the meeting.

and his acolyte have absolutely no idea of the pedestrian and vehicle traffic patterns in our neighborhood and the residual impacts of this road diet. The signal's removal is a method to supposedly allow Centre Street traffic to move more smoothly. So yet again, the residents on the sidestreets will bear the brunt of increased cut through traffic, much greater inconvenience, and safety—all to make this drastic road diet somehow more palatable.

On another note, I see that all the remaining candidates for At-Large City Council have come out in support of the Centre Street Road Diet plan. I think maybe one actually lives in West Roxbury. I know I'll leave them blank on my November ballot and write in Mickey Mouse. He's got big ears and maybe he'll hear the majority of folks and merchants in our neighborhood opposed to this.

As I've repeatedly stated

since this plan first came out in February—improve the Centre Street pedestrian crosswalk areas, get a visible police enforcement effort and then leave us alone.

DID YOU SEE THE VET AT THE VA ON FOX NEWS?

To the Editor:

Well if you didn't, the 78 year old vet had to park hundreds of yards away to get to his appointment at the VA. I bring this up because I'm sure parking is being used by people catching the bus. Traffic to the VA, Faulkner and the Beth Israel complex is a large part of our overall problem and could be relieved with a parking garage built on the Parkway and serviced by buses, both institutional and MBTA.

The place across the street from the VA is already over built with luxury condos, and I've heard talk about another salt box complex going up by the trailer park. Boston and the Climate would be better served by a large parking garage with service to the hospitals. This facility would also be very useful to locals during snow emergencies.

Can you really trust people at City Hall who want to fix climate change by building thousands of units which no doubt come with thousands of SUVs and greatly increases closed, cemented surfaces without exposed soil, vegetation and trees for shade, water drainage or absorption by plant life?

So let's get on with the road diet because I know I'm going to find this very entertaining. And while you're at it, finish building out apartments from the edge of the sidewalks to as far back as possible along the length of Centre St, Spring St, and the Parkway.

A SERIOUS NEED FOR WALK LIGHTS

To the Editor:

On Wednesday evening at 6:40 PM, I was nearly hit by a car while crossing Centre St. at Hastings. I was in the middle of the crosswalk, and the vehicle came within two feet of me. (Fortunately, I was able to get out of the way in time). Centre St. on a road diet would not have solved this near-miss incident. Traffic planners, please, please install red-light-on-demand walk lights at key crosswalks along Centre St!
