

Logan Airplane noise meeting date confirmed

Officials go to Washington, D.C.

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Boston South Fair Skies group will be meeting on Nov. 15 at the Roslindale Community Center at 6:30 p.m. to discuss ongoing issues with noise from Logan Airport.

The meeting will be a combination of information sharing session as well as workstream of airplanes over concentrated areas.

The problem was further worsened this summer when resurfacing work began on one runway and increased the amount traffic on Runway 27, which goes over much of Southwest Boston.

Nine apartments planned for tiny Stonley Road recording studio

Richard Heath
Staff Reporter

A former sound stage and recording studio at the end of Stonley Road is proposed to be retrofitted into nine rental apartments by new owners Pat Moloney and Colm O'Shea.

Moloney, O'Shea and their architect, Chris Scales of Jamaica Plain, made a presentation to the Stony Brook Neighborhood Association (SNA) at its Oct. 16 meeting.

84 Stonley Road is tight against the plot line of the fully-approved but yet un-built 76 Stonley - a 28-unit, four-story building - that tormented the SNA for more than a year.

Moloney and O'Shea bought the 50-by-80 foot blue metal box earlier in 2017 for a reported $900,000. Built in 2000 by Richard "Dickey" Spears of Union Avenue as Squid Hell recording studios for $500,000, Spears razed the former Beacon Paint Manufacturing Company building

Oak Square gets cleaned for winter

Members of the Friends of the Oak Square came out to give the area a spruce up on Saturday.

While the Friends of the Oak Square Common usually only do spring cleanups, Charlie Vasiliades, president of the Friends and board member at Brighton Main Streets said the community came together and stuck through it to prepare the square for the winter.

"It was like a SWAT team down here, it was fantastic," he said.

The cleanup spanned four hours, and residents came out as they could to help out. Vasiliades said this cleanup was different, as it was spearheaded by a local mainstay.

"Michael Dwyer, the president of the Brighton Marine Health Center, he and his landscaping crew from Unisource formed kind of the core for the four hours, and they were fantastic," he said. "We provided additional bodies, and over the course of

Council accepts $1.5M fund from Massport for South Boston

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Boston City Council voted unanimously last week under a rule suspension to accept and expend $1.5 million from Massport for the South Boston neighborhood.

The funds will be divided up for $150,000 each year for the next 10 years as a payment in lieu of taxes (PILOT) program for Massport. The funds will go to what will be called the South Boston Foundation Declaration of Trust, which will figure out how to disperse the funds.

District 2 City Councilor Bill Linehan said that he was very happy to bring the matter forth as what would become his last action as a city councilor in Boston. Linehan elected to leave the office early and not finish his term in De-

Cops for Kids with Cancer donates $5K

Last week, retired Captain Paul Ivens presented a check of $5,000 on behalf of Cops for Kids with Cancer to 2-year-old Michael Bergin who was diagnosed with Leukemia about two months ago. Michael and his two older brothers, who love cops, were escorted with their family from Dana Farber to Boston Police Headquarters where they were greeted by a host of uniformed officers. Michael's family is one of six families a month that benefits from the generosity of those who donate to Cops for Kids with Cancer.

Boston School Committee Chair named as finalist for National Education Award

On Thursday, Oct. 19, 2017, The Council of the Great City Schools announced that it has selected Boston School Committee Chairperson Michael O'Neill as a finalist for its 2017 Green-Garner Award.

O'Neill, who is among 11 finalists vying for the nation's top award in urban education, has made closing opportunity and achievement gaps and creating a more equitable school district for all students the focus of his nearly decade-long tenure on the School Committee.

A product of Boston Public Schools (BPS) and proud graduate of Boston Latin School, O'Neill was first appointed to the Boston School Committee by the late Mayor Thomas M. Menino in 2008. After serving one year as vice-chair, he was elected chair in 2013 and has been unanimously re-elected.

O'Neill, a lifelong Boston resident, serves on the executive committee of the Council of the Great City Schools, which is the main governing body of the group that represents the nation's top 70 urban school districts.

In his role as Chair, O'Neill has driven the strategic planning process for the School Committee and the development of the Opportunity and Achievement Gaps Task Force, which has led to the committee's approval of key new policies designed to close achievement gaps. He has also led efforts to: Develop a School Quality Working Group to create a better framework to measure what school quality really means to families., Write a new Code of Conduct that focuses on restorative justice practices, leading to a large reduction in out-of-school suspensions, Sign two successful contract negotiations with the Boston Teachers Union, including one that extended the school day for the first time. Bring unprecedented transparency to the 2015 superintendent search process by holding eight public forums throughout the city, including public interviews of the four finalists that were live-streamed.

Keondre McClay, the student representative to the School Committee and a member of the Boston Student Advisory Council (BSAC), commended O'Neill for empowering students to be advocates for their schools and their education.

"He has publicly championed the importance of student voice in decision making at the district and school-based level," said McClay, a senior at the Edward M. Kennedy Academy for Health Careers. "He continues to support not just BSAC but other student groups in the district, helping cultivate the leaders of tomorrow."

O'Neill himself gratefully accepted the nomination.

"I am humbled by the support for this nomination that was shown by my fellow members, district and school leaders, community partners and our student leadership. I know being a finalist is a reflection of the high regard in which the Boston School Committee and the Boston Public Schools are held by our peers in urban education on a national level".

Martin Luther King Jr. mural presented to the city

Museum of Fine Arts, Citizens Bank and Artists for Humanity presented a mural of Dr. King to Mayor Walsh. The mural, designed by Artists for Humanity, depicts an iconic photo taken during King's historic 1965 march from Selma, Ala. to Montgomery, Ala.. TRUE PATRIOTS, FOOLISH DEBATES

It is time to pull the plug on the ridiculous wave of fake patriotism and what Senator John McCain calls “spurious nationalism.” This is especially true when it comes to the men and women who valiantly serve in our armed forces. Frankly, their noble sacrifices have been reduced to political fodder. Democrats and Republicans are, of course, to blame, as are far too many of us.

First, a civics lesson: this country was created by—and survives and thrives under—the Constitution. It is a document that, it seems, few these days have read and even fewer understand. Liberals want to carve the Second Amendment to their liking. Conservatives seek to undermine the precious protections of the First Amendment and freedom of the press.

Peaceful assembly? Not when you are a sports figure apparently, given the furor and overreactions to NFL players kneeling during the National Anthem. No folks, kneeling is not akin to burning a flag. You are free to hate the current protest. Fair enough. We just hope you keep those lofty standards and resist defaming our national heritage with a cheap flag made in China or by wearing that ill-fitting American Flag t-shirt you bought at Wal-Mart. We are also looking at you, Mr. and Mrs. Had-a-Flag-Tablecloth-For-The-Fourth.

We live in a distressing moment where even patriotism is politicized. The soldiers who protect our Constitutional rights are dragged into it.

The latest example of this distressing debate is whether past presidents personally called grieving families of those killed in Action.

There are certainly plenty of things our President can be both praised and chided for depending on your level of objectivity. We have made it a habit of neither boasting nor lambasting him in this space. We are after all a local newspaper, not a national and partisan journal. We draw the line and break that practice over recent remarks. In a nutshell, the President nearly broke an arm patting himself on the back over phone calls made to the families of soldiers killed in action, inferring of course that past residents of the White House (notably Obama and Bush) made little effort to do so.

Set aside the current President’s ongoing mission to undermine the Obama legacy. There is plenty to dislike about “W” and the wars he launched, but his heartfelt agony when it comes to military sacrifice is undeniable. For Pete’s sake, the man spends most of his free time these days painting the visages of lost soldiers, an act of heartfelt penance and remembrance.

There is never any reason to drag these brave folks who defend our freedoms and way of life into the muck of politics. Yet, the partisan dolts among us are happy to do so and call themselves patriots while doing it.

No matter your political beliefs, knock it off. You want to prove your patriotism? You want to “support the troops” and their mission? Stop worrying about who gasp stands or kneels before a game. Focus instead on our still-failing VA system. Seriously confront the ever-increasing suicide rate among those who have served or remain deployed. Provide them better pay and benefits. Train them better, mentally and career-wise, for post-military life. Demand that they have the resources and equipment needed to keep them as safe as possible, rather than feeding big contractors with big checks for unnecessary, multi-billion-dollar weaponry. Make sure the children of our military are taken care of and that their widows lack nothing that is essential and necessary.

Don’t just thank soldiers for their service, fight for them as they fight for you. Contests about who is more patriotic than the other do nothing of the sort.

May you be so fortunate as to have him on your route

Wednesday might be a favorite day of the week for some people.

Barbers used to be closed and some doctors used to play golf. Perhaps it’s still an important day for people who work Monday through Friday because it’s mid-week, hence “hump” day; after Wednesday, less than half a week’s work is left.

In my section of the city, Wednesday is also trash day. The city contractors do an excellent job hauling away trash. When trash day occurs, it is also yard-waste day, sometimes once a month, sometimes twice, or in November, four times. The guys also do a great job, as does the conscientious Public Works guy driving the street sweeper who comes by on the next day.

Wednesday in my neighborhood is also Recycling Day. It’s on this day that Matthew White, a seven-year driver for Capitol Waste Services, takes great pride in maneuvering through our neighborhood his huge truck with its automatic extender for grasping, lifting, and inverting 97-gallon blue containers. This large bins offer Boston residents single-stream recycling - everything but plastic bags, which can be brought to Roche Brothers or Lowes for recycling.

This congenial driver, with the inverted baseball cap and occasional sunglasses, has to jump out of his truck frequently to manually lift the little blue pins put out by residents who for one reason or another eschew the Boston Public Works Department’s free 97-gallon bin to families.

Locals know him by his courtesy, efficiency, and upbeat attitude. Indeed, he would make a great straight man if television’s Undercover Boss wanted to film a show with him as he goes traverses his route while offering suggestions on how to improve this city service.

But White is no fool. Nor does he suffer fools gladly, as St. Paul says in his Second Letter to the Corinthians. He is not happy when his recycling truck has its contents contaminated by dead cats and dogs, car batteries, and car parts hidden in the blue containers. His truck is equipped with cameras so that he can detect when something “foreign” is hidden in the huge blue bin. Fortunately, he’s never seen a dead body dumped into his truck.

One of his worst days took place in Hyde Park when after the extender inverted a large blue bin, an explosion occurred, showering debris on him. Some maladjusted person had put several quarts of used oil in the bin, which for some reason exploded. As he tried to clean himself, he noticed a resident hiding behind some window shades. Radioing for help, he and the inspector asked the resident about the jettisoned oil, only to hear the lie that some passer-by must have inserted it. Right. But, hey, what about all those oil cans stacked by the side of his driveway?

of Town/

Every city resident needs a Matthew White to come into their life every Wednesday. And everybody needs to realize how much we need to recycle: when a load is contaminated, as described above, the entire contents will be put into a landfill rather than recycled for their next use for all of us, our children, and our grandchildren.

Letters to the Editor

MAYOR WALSH: A MAYOR FOR BOSTON’S FUTURE

To the Editor:

Boston is a great city. I grew up here and I’ve worked my entire life trying to make it better. I am always proud to see the collective spirit that brings Bostonians together to make sure our young people have pathways to success, our schools work for all children, and our city is united in opposing the divisive work of Donald Trump.

Together, we’re making great strides towards becoming an even better place to live. That is why I am proud to endorse Mayor Walsh for a second term. No one has fought harder to create a better tomorrow for Bostonians.

Education has always been the key to success – here and everywhere. I am proud to see Mayor Walsh leading the fight to improve our school, dedicating his administration to supporting our students from Pre-K through college. Our high-school graduation rate is at an all-time high, and we have more high-performing schools than ever before. He’s leading the charge for universal free pre-kindergarten at the State House, and has added 725 seats in the Boston Public Schools already. Mayor Walsh understands that the most significant barrier to higher education is cost, so he worked to launch free community college for Boston Public Schools graduates, so that every eligible Boston student has a pathway to higher education. There is still work to do, but Mayor Walsh has put our students first every day, and he is the right person to lead this work for our City.

In order to have a thriving city, everyone must feel safe. The Mayor has worked hard to make Boston welcoming and safe, encouraging smart and comprehensive policing strategies and creating a fairer criminal justice system. Crime is down 9 percent, and the Mayor’s policies led to police taking 1,000 guns off the street in a single year, while reducing arrests by 37 percent. Community-driven training and body cameras for police help make our city stronger by building trust between our citizens and our officers, and we have seen com-four hours we had the skeleton crew was the staff that Dwyer provided and people came and went as they wanted.”

Vasiliades said the effort was definitely collaborative and a great little face lift for the park.

“Dwyer himself was here cleaning, as well as Dick Mulligan, the president of Brighton Main Streets and Liz Sullivan the director, so you could say it was a combination of folks,” he said.

Vasiliades said the Boston Parks Department provided the mulch for the project, Unisource provided the heavy labor and residents helped out where they could.

“What’s great about this cleanup is that I had frankly not planned to do one until the spring, but Dwyer, I cannot sing his praises enough, he’s done a lot for Brighton Center,” Vasiliades said. “He’s adopted some of the traffic islands at the Center, so he’s kind of adopted us, too.”

Vasiliades added that Dwyer’s help was greatly appreciated.

“It’s nice for us because usually we have to go through the city to get our trash picked up after a cleaning,” he said. “So we’ve been piling clippings and mulch, and they come through with their paid staff and do it.”

Vasiliades said the usual duties of the Friends group is to water and maintain the plants during the spring and summer months, and they go on a weekly rotation of volunteers.

“Every year, we have about 20 volunteers who water, and the idea is that people would sign up for one week from June to September,” he said, adding that if any resident wants to sign up for watering duties, to email him at Charliev57@aol.com.

Vasiliades said the park was originally redone through the Brown Fund, which was set up in the 1800s to help fund projects in the city for public beautification.

“This park itself was redone in 1989, we got $300,000 from the city and one of the requirements was that you have to have a Friends group, and we’ve had that for about 30 years, and we come out, we trim and water and all that stuff,” he said.

Elderly Commission readying for winter

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

Winter is sometimes the toughest season for many seniors in Boston, but the city's Elderly Commission says it's here to help.

Elderly Commissioner Emily Shea said that the department is focused during the fall months on freeing up income from other areas in seniors' lives so that they can spend the necessary money on fuel to keep warm during the winter months.

"We're encouraging everyone to prepare for the winter and we know that one of the biggest expenses for folks is fuel," she said. "So, we're constantly encouraging people to apply for the Action Boston Community Development (ABCD) fuel assistance program. We help them here at the Elderly Commission, and we work with the ABCD to make sure people can get fuel assistance, and that's related in a lot of ways to the benefits we help people with. What we find nowadays is that it's important to access all of the benefits during the rest of the year to free up some money in the winter for fuel."

Shea said that the Commission provides help to seniors with a multitude of programs, particularly for those needing it the most, and suggested anyone interested to go to bostonabcd.org/fuel-assistance-liheap.aspx for more information on ABCD's program.

Shea said they provide residents with discounts on everything from medical transportation to tax exemption.

"So, for example, seniors can get a 30 percent discount with the Boston Water and Sewer Commission, so we try to make sure that everyone is applying for that discount," Shea said. "There's also property tax relief for older adults, whether it's the residential exemption or there's a seniors tax exemption or the vet exemption. We encourage people to call 311 at the city to get information about any of these things. We know that every dollar saved in the pocket really counts."

Shea said they also help residents gain SNAP benefits, and access to food pantries and the city's Two Dollar a Bag Food program, which can be found here: fairfoods.org/dollarbag.html.

"We're also working with the MBTA to make sure that seniors can access Charlie Cards when they're out in the neighborhoods for their senior discount while riding," she said. "We process that application with the MBTA so they don't have to come downtown. It's one of the action items in our Age Friendly Action Plan."

Shea said the plan contains 75 action items that they plan to tackle over the course of the next three years. One particular point of action in the plan is a home-share program.

"It matches older adults with extra space in their home with college students," she said. "They help with expenses and do things around the house too. We're working with the Parks Department to make sure that we're setting a standard process that older adults are a part of and participating in park redesigns to make sure they're not just good for kids but for all ages. For example, making sure there are walking paths lighting and seating. We're also working with the Vision Zero team to look at redesigns of different areas like sidewalks as well."

Shea said the city is also repainting all the crosswalks in the city to help ensure pedestrian safety and will be looking at things like lighting to make sure that areas are good for walking when you're older.

City Council looking to help seniors avoid scams

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

Last week, the Boston City Council voted unanimously to host a series of community meetings to help educate Boston's seniors and to protect them from scammers.

Scams have been prevalent for years, but many residents in community meetings have said they have seen more and more sophisticated illegal activity, activity that targets some of the city's most vulnerable population.

"At community meetings, neighbors and community service officers warn each other about various companies and individuals that are knocking at their doors," said At-Large City councilor Annissa Essaibi-George. "Jamal Crawford, a constituent of ours who has reached out to a number of us on this issue, told me about saving his grandmother thousands of dollars when he found out she had fallen victim to one of these scammers. We all know this is happening and the time to act is now."

Essaibi-George said the need was great and would only grow as time goes on.

"Boston is expected to have approximately 125,000 residents aged 60 and above by the year 2030," she said. "Everyone has the right to age in place, feel safe in their homes and remain in the neighborhood. Everyone has the right not to be taken advantage of, and it's our job to protect them."

In the past, dozens of residents have reported scammers coming up to their doors wearing uniforms and pretending to be from a utility or phone company. They then try to get identity information, issue fake bills or try to access credit card information.

"We know the reality is that our seniors are vulnerable, vulnerable to these companies and individuals for a variety of reasons," she said. "Maybe their home value has multiplied 20 fold since they purchased it, or maybe there is a language barrier or are living in social isolation. I believe with more outreach and resources, we can empower our seniors to avoid these scams."

District 6 City Councilor Matt O'Malley said he wanted to make sure there are some Boston Centers for Youth and Family representatives at the meeting, as many BCYF centers host computer classes that can help with such scams.

"We've been offering some really popular and effective senior online training and classes to make sure that we can close the digital divide that is often exacerbated by age as well," he said. "This has been something that I have heard from a number of constituents who have fallen victim to phishing schemes."

According to the Boston web site, the Jackson Mann Community Center, the Menino Community Center, the Nazzaro Center, the Condon Center, the Ohrenberger Center and the Hyde Park Center all have such courses available.

Some of the best ways for seniors to protect themselves from online or in person scams is to always ask for identification and/or a supervisor. Always be suspicious of correspondence that states you won money or prizes. One scam that has been popping up in the city recently has been the hostage scam, in which a caller states they have a family member in captivity – when in reality they do not – and demand a ransom be paid for the kidnapping. The Boston Police Department has advised all residents to call the relative in question, and then to call the police.

SSI Announces 2.0 Percent increase

Monthly Social Security and Supplemental Security Income (SSI) benefits for more than 66 million Americans will increase 2.0 percent in 2018, the Social Security Administration announced today.

The 2.0 percent cost-of-living adjustment (COLA) will begin with benefits payable to more than 61 million Social Security beneficiaries in January 2018. Increased payments to more than 8 million SSI beneficiaries will begin on Dec. 29, 2017. (Note: some people receive both Social Security and SSI benefits) The Social Security Act ties the annual COLA to the increase in the Consumer Price Index as determined by the Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Some other adjustments that take effect in January of each year are based on the increase in average wages. Based on that increase, the maximum amount of earnings subject to the Social Security tax (taxable maximum) will increase to $128,700 from $127,200. Of the estimated 175 million workers who will pay Social Security taxes in 2018, about 12 million will pay more because of the increase in the taxable maximum.

Information about Medicare changes for 2018, when announced, will be available at www.medicare.gov.

The Social Security Act provides for how the COLA is calculated. To read more, please visit www.socialsecurity.gov/cola.

Avoiding Medication Errors: Everyone's Responsibility Since 2000, the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) has received more than 95,000 reports of medication errors!

These reports are voluntary, so the actual number may be much higher.

A medication error is defined as being any preventable event that may cause or lead to inappropriate medication use or harm to a patient and can occur for a number of reasons including miscommunication of drug orders, confusion with similarly named medications, poor package design, confusion of dosing, taking the medicine at the wrong time, wrong dose, or wrong person.

Before you leave the doctor's office, ask all of your questions! Before you leave your pharmacy, be sure to read the name of the medicine, directions on the bottle and how many pills and refills, so you know you have your correct medicine. If you need help asking these questions or understanding the answers, bring a trusted relative or friend to the doctor's office or pharmacy. It is your responsibility to be in charge of your care.

built in 1948 for his state-of-the-art sound and recording studio, which closed in 2015.

Scales said the plans will insert nine units on three floors into the existing metal frame. The blue metal siding will be removed.

"In order to put in windows, we would have to cut the steel panels which would be difficult," Scales said.

Already two stories, Scales is adding a third floor within the box and below grade parking for five cars.

Scales design shows some façade variations - notably shallow bay windows - but it still resembles an industrial building. He admitted that the lot is tight; there will be no porches, balconies or open space. The metal bents hold up the roof at 33 feet high and the existing elevator will be reused.

The new façade materials will be board and batten on the lower story and metal panels on the top stories for variation.

In explaining the challenges of reusing and adapting an existing steel frame box, Scales begged the question of why which Jennifer Urhane of Rossmore was quick to ask.

"Why not take it down?" she asked. "Isn't it more expensive to work within the existing walls?"

Pat Moloney agreed but added, "We may take it down but right now we feel we can make it work."

O'Shea and Moloney also lease the contractors yard at the end of Stedman Street behind 84 Stonley Rd. This is adjacent to the auto garage at 50 Stedman St., the proposed redevelopment of which was a topic of discussion at the June SNA meeting.

Fred Vetterlein owns property on Plainfield Street.

"We're impatient about closing down all the industrial buildings and uses at this corner of the neighborhood but this process is going on is haphazard," Vetterlein said.

"76 Stonley is on hold because the fire department said it can't get its trucks to the site and they're demanding street changes," Scales said. "Do we want another building that big?"

Urhane pointed out the Plan JP Rox guidelines which call for artist studios in that corner.

"Can't you do something different than housing?" she asked. "There is a need for open studio space in the neighborhood."

Speaking after the meeting, Urhane said that the Plan JP Rox guidelines should be followed.

"The mayor's office said they would enforce the guidelines of the plan," she said. "This doesn't comply with any of the plan as far as I can see."

After the development team left, SNA chair Alex Ross of Brookley Road asked for comments.

"The developers didn't come prepared," said Vetterlein. "There's been no abutters meeting; no effort to talk with the 76 Stonley people. There was just this one meeting with the SNA subcommittee last April."

One SNA member was annoyed that the developers didn't know the zoning variances required.

"Moloney and O'Shea filed with ISD in August," said Alex Valdez of the mayor's office. "But I haven't received the refusal letter."

"We need to push back on this," Vetterlein said. "Give them some guidelines, some of our recommendations to work with on their building."

"It's a shame they're dismantling what is essentially a maker-space to create more apartments," Urhane said after the meeting. "It's a perfect sound-dampening space for a wood shop or even another recording studio."

The cul-de-sacs of Stonley Road and Stedman Street are clearly in the bull's-eye of development since they are right on the edge of the Arborway Yard which will eventually be subdivided; for now they remain congested industrial dead ends.

Prayer to the Blessed Virgin
(Never known to fail!)
Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine, splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in this necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my mother. Oh Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth, I humbly beseech thee from the bottom of my heart to succor me in my necessity (make request). There are none that can withstand your power. Oh Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (three times). Holy Mary, I place this cause in your hands (three times). Say this prayer for three consecutive days and then you must publish and it will be granted to you.
Grateful thanks. —K.B.

Linehan said that after the funds have been gathered, the city will work with the neighborhoods of South Boston and the associated community groups to figure out how to effectively spend the money over the next 10 years. He said youth activities will be the priority for the funds.

“A local board will be instituted to direct these resources to youth, to sports, to recreation and open space initiatives,” he said.

Linehan said this was a great matter for him to push forward and he was happy to end his time at the council, for which he was elected more than 10 years ago. He has since served as the chairman of the City of Boston Economic and Planning Committee and served as the Chairman of the Redistricting Committee. Linehan formed and chaired the Special Committee for the 2024 Olympics. He also served as City Council President for a time before At-Large City Councilor Michelle Wu stepped into the position.

“For me, my last day, my last matter, it’s something sustainable for the district and something important moving forward,” he said.

Linehan said last week he wants to pursue a career as a private consultant, which is why he’s not continuing his term to close in December. He has not said as of the date of publication whether or not he will support candidates Ed Flynn or Mike Kelley.

The PILOT program for the city usually handles nonprofit or businesses for the public good, and for the fiscal year 2017, these entities gave out $32.4 million in PILOT payments to the city. This represented a 1 percent increase in PILOT payments from the previous year. About 49 institutions contributed to the fund. In 2015, Massport gave out $20 million to Boston and Winthrop for the program.

“The FAA had no interest in meeting with the lowly councilors, but we got updates from both congressmen,” he said.

This is not a new issue to McCarthy’s district, or the rest of Southwest Boston for that matter. Recently, City Point Neighborhood Association President Joanne McDevitt said though jets coming over South Boston have been a mainstay of the neighborhood, she said they can now see the landing gear of incoming planes. That was not always the case.

McCarthy said he wants to work on the issue from an equity perspective. He said it’s not fair that certain areas now bear the heaviest burden of noise pollution from the airplanes, and they are working to fix that.

“It’s really about sharing the load,” he said.

In July, Lynch filed legislation to require the FAA to conduct studies on the health effects of increase noise from airplanes. Republicans in the House removed such provisions when the H.R. 598, the Airplane Impacts Mitigation Act, was passed in its final form.

A local MIT study has been released (which can be found here: <https://goo.gl/AU8SVP>) that details the issues surrounding all of Logan’s runways, and clearly shows that flight paths have been heavily concentrated. The study also suggests ways of mitigating that concentration, such as instituting new way points and alternating approaches to runways.

McCarthy said they will be working with other municipalities to go through that study and figure out an equitable solution for all communities.

“We’ve broadened, we’re working with Dedham and Milton and Quincy officials, everybody having this problem and we think most people agree that planes are going to fly over our head but it can’t be the same quarter mile over and over and over,” he said. “Honestly this has become a social justice issue, you’re flying over Mattapan, Hyde Park, Roslindale and Milton and those are the neighborhoods that don’t have high-powered lawyers or the ability to fight the FAA or get involved into a Massport battle. Those are people who are more easily accepting of quality of life issues and I don’t plan on letting that slide anymore.”

Boston South Fair Skies member Alan Wright said the upcoming meeting will be somewhat like a working session and will help community members to get involved and figure out what can be done. He said it will work to break down each issue into a small part so that each can be tackled individually.

He said, for instance, they will be figuring out their media strategy, political strategy, social media strategies, possible legal strategy routes and data analysis strategies.

“That’s the main thrust of the meeting after updates and political peaches, we’re going to ask people to break into the groups with issues they’re interested in and people will brainstorm and take on tasks to develop these strategies,” he said.

Wright also said that the Massport Citizens Advisory Committee (MCAC), which replaced the Logan Airport Citizens Advisory Committee, is also working with MIT on its study to reduce noise and noise concentration. Go to facebook.com/groups/BostonSouthFairSkies for more information.

Ask The Doctor

Junior Damato began servicing vehicles in 1969. He owns a 10-bay auto repair service center in Hyde Park and an 8-bay center in Middleboro. Junior is an ASE-certified Master Technician, ASE-certified L-1 and ASE-certified Natural Gas.

To the Doctor: I am interested in buying a new Jeep Wrangler and would like some advice. I saw a Rubicon and liked almost everything except the all-terrain tires. They seemed like they would be noisy and ride rough. What are your thoughts?

From the Doctor: You are correct – the Rubicon is a serious off-road Wrangler. If you do not plan on driving off-road, move on to the Sahara. I have owned many Wranglers over the years and they have great resale value. There is an all new Wrangler due out in early spring, but there is not much information available as of now on the new vehicle.

To the Doctor: I have a 2000 small Ford box truck purchased from U-Haul and it is driving me crazy!!! When I go to start it and turn the key, if the “check engine light” does not come on, it turns over but will not start. If I turn the key off and on until the “check engine light” comes on, it will start. Sometime this takes 15 Or 20 minutes, but eventually it does start. I took it to a Ford dealer and they said they replaced the ignition switch and fixed some broken wires in the dash. It seemed all right when I drove off, but started having the same problem a couple of days later. Any help you could give me would be greatly appreciated.

From the Doctor: For any engine computer controls, the “check engine light” has to illuminate when the key is turned to the “on” position. If the check engine light does not come on, the computer is not energized and the engine will not start. The technician should look on Alldata and Identifix for common faults and the wire diagram. There is no easy fix without the needed information that is found at both sites.

Boston’s own Junior Damato, “The Auto Doctor” has agreed to field auto repair questions from Bulletin and Record readers. Please forward your questions to news@bulletinnewspapers.com and we will do our best to get your questions answered.

plaints decline significantly. BPD leadership is more diverse than ever before, and Mayor Walsh has introduced innovative approaches, like the Boston Police Cadet Program, to ensure that our departments reflect the communities they serve.

Education and safety are key to making this a strong, and functioning city – but we also need a Mayor who will stand up for our values in a time when they are under attack from Washington. When Donald Trump threatened to end sanctuary cities, Mayor Walsh stood up for Boston families and said they would be protected on his watch. When the administration announced that it would be ending DACA, Mayor Walsh stood with our DREAMers and said that they would also be welcome in Boston. It's a difficult, unprecedented moment for our country. I have been proud to see Mayor Walsh take on this challenge with strength and leadership.

Boston has been succeeding and that is in large part due to Mayor Walsh. He has put Bostonians first and has never forgotten about the people of this great city. He's worked hard to make sure everyone, no matter what neighborhood you live in or where you come from, has a chance to get ahead in Boston. On Nov. 7, join me in voting for Mayor Marty Walsh.
