DCR discusses Centre and Walter St. intersection improvements with community

More than 100 residents came out to hear the plans for the intersection at Centre Street and Walter Street on the JP/Roslindale line.

Around 100 community members gathered at Sophia Snow Place to discuss Centre and Walter St. intersection improvements with the Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR). The Feb. 13 meeting was attended by West Roxbury, Roslindale, and Jamaica Plain community members, Sophia Snow residents, and Boston cyclists. Representative Ed Coppinger and City Councilor Matt O'Malley were also present at the meeting.

At the public meeting, the DCR provided information and obtained public input on the proposed design concepts for improvements at the intersection of Centre Street and Walter Street. The DCR is working with Transportation Engineers at Howard Stein Hudson to study and redesign the intersection.

The agenda included a presentation by DCR Deputy Chief Engineer Jeff Parenti, Howard Stein Hudson Traffic Engineer

Bob Stathopoulos, and Howard Stein Hudson Manager for Public Involvement Nate Cabral-Curtis.

Cabral-Curtis gave a little bit of history and background on Centre St.

"Centre Street was formerly designated as US Route One. The designation was removed in the late 1980s', but Centre Street's role in the regional roadway system has not changed," he explained. Cabral-Curtis also explained that DCR's limit of jurisdiction for Centre St. is from the back of one sidewalk to the back of the sidewalk on the other side of the street.

Stathopoulos discussed the multiple issues for pedestrians, drivers, and cyclists at the Centre St. and Walter St. intersection.

"The intersection may feel unsafe for many people," he remarked. Multiple meeting attendees audibly agreed with this statement.

For pedestrians, issues regarding the intersection include lack of sidewalks, lack

The Rotary Club of West Roxbury and Roslindale volunteered on Friday, Valentine's Day, to head into the Deutches Altenheim Senior Living Center in West Roxbury and distribute Valentine's Day flowers to the residents there.

Rotary member Adrienne Ulrich said the idea was the first in what hopefully will be many service projects for the senior community. She said mostly they have been focused on helping out at the Rose's Bounty Food Pantry with several of their service missions, like packing lunches for elementary school students at the Hyde Park Chittick School, but she said they want to branch out and start helping as many populations in need as possible.

"Most of our projects so far have been focused on kids and Rose's Bounty, so this is our first attempt to do senior work in the community and really reach out to ad-

Rep. Elugardo discusses housing, rent control at JPA meeting

Richard Heath
Staff Reporter

Rep. Nika Elugardo (15th Suffolk District) has been in office one year and two months.

She came to the Feb. 3 meeting of the Jamaica Pond Association to talk in part about her housing policy agenda.

She said her housing policy hasn't changed, "it's just moving more slowly."

Elugardo remains optimistic but blames housing inertia on the fact there is not a housing hero at the state house.

"Nobody is advocating for a well thought out strategy," she said. She gave Rep Kevin Honan, the long-time chair of the House Housing Committee, a lot of credit, but added, "it's all piecemeal."

"Housing Committee chair Honan doesn't want to put out a housing finance bill that will fail," she said.

"He does think that tenant protection is going to happen."

She said, "most housing bills are created to make sure they don't fail."

What Elugardo wants is an omnibus housing bill that will work, not a bill that gets amendments tacked on later.

"Right now the negotiation of my life is to convene house leadership to have debate on housing. I've been talking to my colleagues about this."

Elugardo said she's part of a "band of bandits" which has grown from four to about 20.

"They really want a debate on housing," she said, "Break open the culture of 'we're going to give you a hard time' debate until a good bill is made."

"It's really going to be hard to convince the Speaker [Robert De Leo] to agree to this strategy."

In January, Elugardo and Rep Michael Connolly (D. Cambridge/Somerville) filed the Tenant Protection bill (H3924) that includes rent control.

"Put rent control in the debate," she said, "instead of putting it in later."

Elugardo admits that rent control will not make rents cheaper or create new housing and said she doesn't know much about the 2 percent transfer tax for housing that Mayor Walsh favors.

"Rent control," she said, "You'll laugh when you read it [the 1994 bill]. It says market rate is in the best interest of all renters. That's an outdated concept. Strike that out."

"I'm in favor of local option. Let municipalities figure it out. They can pick it up or not do it at all. We can't return to the rent control of the 1980's."

Speaking on BNN after her bill was filed, Elugardo said, "We need all hands on deck with housing. Stop the rapid rise in rents. Rent control can help rents move up more slowly. It doesn't make rents cheaper but it recognizes that housing is a problem."

The Rep. wants a housing bill "for all ends of the spectrum".

Elugardo - whose district includes Mildred Hailey and Heath Street Apartments- is critical of public housing.

"Public housing was created at a time when the federal housing policy was poverty-oriented, charity-oriented. That mindset has to change. We can't be satisfied with creating ghettos, and putting subsidies here and there."

Centre Street Partners is going to replace all 253 subsidized housing units one to one and add new mixed income housing on the site in five phases over ten years. A public meeting on this work was held three days later on Feb. 6.

Mildred Hailey Apartments -which is in the neighborhood where she lives- was nevertheless on Elugardo's mind and she came to the Pond Association with a purpose.

"I'm focusing specifically on Mildred Hailey. There's a lot of issues going on there. It needs more help from the community if these issues are important to you."

Elugardo said she's changing her priorities in her second year to include youth.

"We've opened up a little youth center at Mildred Hailey," she said. "We'd like to match the Jamaica Pond Association with the Mildred Hailey Tenant Task Force, Coordinate the Association with Wendy Polanco, she's the best person on the Task Force."

Elugardo gave out Polanco's cell number.

"Unlike 20 years ago, the task force is not paid for," she said. "I want to reach out to our

Rev. Robert Jones brings blues stylings to Theodore Parker Church

Mary Ellen Gambon
Staff Reporter

People's minds may have been on their beloveds in West Roxbury on the evening of Valentine's Day, Feb. 14, at the Theodore Parker Church parish hall. But the music of veteran blues singer, musician and educator Rev. Robert Jones, Sr. had their hearts pumping, toes tapping and voices joining in harmony as he encouraged the 75 audience members to take part in the two-hour performance.

Jones, a Detroit native and 2018 Kresge Arts Fellow, performed as part of the 2020 Winter/Spring Music on Centre concert series at the church. Now in its fifth year, it serves to bring the community together to hear a variety of cultural styles of music as well as a fundraiser for the church.

Past fundraisers have gone toward getting an accessible bathroom with a lift for the hall, which is in the works, and lighting for the stage, according to originator Carol Allen. A future goal is an improved sound system.

"We have blues, we have jazzy folk, we have traditional folk, we have Latin music," Allen said. "It's all soul-stirring and beautiful music. My mouth hurts from smiling so much, and that's not a bad thing."

Allen was instrumental in connecting with Jones, who had performed at Haverhill High School earlier in the day. In addition to being a renowned singer, songwriter and performer, he is also an educator who is as comfortable in a classroom as on a stage. The full-time Baptist minister has taught at Wayne State and other universities. He wove lessons about the history of blues, R&B and gospel music, as well as African culture and slavery throughout his set, making it especially impactful during Black History Month.

Music on Centre is an all-volunteer organization of about a dozen people who help sell and make baked goods and set up and break down the hall.

"It's a win-win for everybody," Allen said. "The community gets to see nationally known musicians, sometimes internationally known. The church gets some money for the operational programs. It's also been fun to get to know our neighbors. It's a labor of love."

"It's good to be in the land of parked cars," Jones quipped, putting extra emphasis on the "ah" sound as he smiled.

Jones has been performing around the country, Canada and Europe for the past three decades. Primarily self-taught on "about seven or eight instruments," he said he first picked up a harmonica at age ten or 11.

"I was a nerd," said Jones, an only child. "My grandmother, who loved many kinds of music, came home with a record by a blues duo named Sonny Terry and Brownie McGhee, who were really icons in the folk circuit. They rediscovered blues. They played together like hand in glove."

Jones began playing along with Terry on the harmonica. After saving up for a couple of years, he bought a guitar and began playing along with McGhee. One of their most famous compositions, which he sang, was "John Henry." After college, he became a deejay on a Detroit radio station, which cemented his passion for music.

Bluesman Rev. Robert Jones took Valentine's Day to a new level last week at the Theodore Parker in West Roxbury.

Some of his other influences, he said, are Mike Seeger and Willie Nelson.

During his performance, Jones played the guitar, fiddle, harmonica and banjo – sometimes two at a time, taking a pause on one only to sing. He said that, although he is more accomplished on the guitar, his new love is the fiddle because of its significance in African American culture.

"It's such a historic instrument," he said. "Even slave narratives talk about the fiddle, because there was always a fiddle on the plantation. The master liked it, it was portable, and it was good at dances."

Jones's theme for the evening was celebrating diversity. The song that best exemplified that was "3 Chords, 5 Notes." It was a historical journey transporting listeners through nearly a century of music from the Delta blues to boogie-woogie and onward to gospel. Next came a modification of the three chords and five notes to bluegrass to Ray Charles to Elvis and Chuck Berry through to Motown, topping it off with Son House's "Death Letter Blues," which he called a foundation for rap.

"The idea of celebrating diversity is something I've been blessed with to do in schools for 20 years, to talk about the African and European influences we have in American culture," he said. "It's a message

The ultimate reminder

We all have our reminders—what groceries to pick up at Roche Brothers, what thing-ees to purchase at Al’s Hardware, what kind of plant-related items to buy at the Allandale Farm.

None of these matches the ultimate reminder that is coming next Wednesday.

Preceded by Shrove Tuesday, also called Fat Tuesday because for centuries Christians prepared for the season of Lent by using up valuable meat from which they would be abstaining in the days to come, Ash Wednesday marks the beginning of Lent. The solemnity of the day reminds tens of thousands of Bostonians that sooner or later, perhaps at a day that we never expect, biblically acclaimed as coming as “a thief in the night” and caricatured as the Grim Reaper, death will befall all of us. Perhaps someday city real estate taxes may be lowered (undoubtedly not in my lifetime) or even eliminated (maybe in your lifetime), but death will never be avoided.

My Kind of Town/

In this day and age of being proud of affiliations—political parties, sports teams, alma maters, positions such as pro/anti-charter school, pro/anti-death penalty, pro/anti-abortion, pro/anti-road diets—many proudly wear their ashes on their foreheads all day long, this year on the last Wednesday of this second month, February 26.

For centuries the imposition of ashes was contemporaneous with the priestly articulation of “Remember, (wo)man, thou art dust and unto dust thou shalt return.” Indeed, it was a stark reminder, even to children not even in their teenage years when their bodies would be near their best in terms of beauty and strength, that the proverbial hour of death could never be avoided.

Nowadays, the masculine-based assertion about dust has been altered to be much gentler, “Go and repent” because we’re all sinners. Nevertheless, the ashen cross on the forehead, made from burning last year’s palms from the Sunday preceding Easter, is worn proudly, not necessarily because we’re all sinners and need to repent our failings with justice and morality, but to show that, “Hey, I might not go to church much, except on Christmas and Easter, but I did go today to join the crowd of believers.”

So when we’re tempted to tell acquaintances that they have some dirt of their forehead, just as we do when they have food particles on their lips, chin, or moustache, ignore that urge on February 26, this year’s date of Ash Wednesday: they want to wear it proudly, if not humbly, the entire day.

Women Amongst Us celebrating 10 years, 100th anniversary of 19th Amendment

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

Hyde Park-founded Boston Women Inc. will be hosting its 10th annual Women Amongst Us Tea to celebrate the accomplishments of local women and celebrate the 100th anniversary of the success of the Suffragette Movement in the United States on March 21 this year.

The group will be honoring Sally Glora, the First Woman Auditor for the City of Boston, Suffrage100MA Founder and President Freddie Kay Esq., World War II Marine Alice Palumbo and Monalisa Smith, the Presidents of Mothers for Justice and Equality.

Boston Women Inc. Founder Patrice Gattozzi said the night was started just a decade ago when she was the Hyde Park Main Streets Executive Director.

“We just wanted celebrate women’s history month as an event, and we have so many women from our history here in Hyde Park,” she said. “We have famous abolitionists like the Grimke Sisters, Temperance leader Mary Hannah Hanchett Hunt also lived in Hyde Park. We have such a rich history of women who did just some great things.”

She added that in 1870, a full 50 years before the 19th Amendment, a group of 50 women led by the Grimke Sisters, paraded through the streets in Hyde Park (not yet a part of Boston) to cast ballots.

“I mean it didn’t count, but it was a huge deal and they were really trying to make a stand,” Gattozzi said.

Gattozzi said that about 10 years ago, women’s history wasn’t a huge focus in Boston.

“Now there are a lot of other events going on, which is awesome,” she said. “People have started to recognize women’s history and our movement. For our event, we’ve honored Angela Menino, women in the media, women in the trades, we’ve honored first responders and other people who have really made a difference in our local community.”

She said now that they are a 501c3 Company, they have community sponsors helping them to host the event, including Rockland Trust, Blue Hills Bank and of course, Hyde Park Main Streets. They are also being supported by Effie’s Homemade Specialty Food, out of Westinghouse Plaza in the neighborhood.

“It’s an amazing women owned business in Hyde Park, and every year they give us a little bit extra for the Tea,” she said. “We have a local photographer, a young woman from Hyde Park named Nicole Curran. We try to use woman-owned businesses in our celebration whenever possible. Blue Hills has always supported us, as well as HPMS and we’ve had a host of City Councilors support us, as well as State Rep. Angelo Scaccia and State Sen. Michael Rush. We’ve given them the Good Guys Award once or twice.”

Gattozzi said the event is at the Granite Links Golf Course in Quincy, and admitted while it’s not technically in the city, the soil is direct from the city.

“The Granite Links was built on the dirt from the Big Dig, so we’re still in the city limits,” she said. “We’ve really tried to make it a community event and we’re always reaching out to different women in Boston. It’s a really fun time and people really enjoy themselves. Women can get together and men and it’s just a time to really enjoy one another and celebrate the accomplishments of so many amazing women. Every sometimes we don’t recognize the efforts of each person, so we use that time to celebrate each other.”

She added that Riverside Theaterworks usually provides the entertainment.

“And we always have people come back year after year after, year and we’re hoping to continue that,” she said.

The event is scheduled for March 21 starting at 12 p.m. to 3 p.m. for tickets and more information, go to <https://www.bostonwomen.org/buy-tickets>

MHC reviews redevelopment with Home for Little Wanderers

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Mount Hope Canterbury Neighborhood Association (MHC) met last Thursday and spoke with representatives from the Home for Little Wanderers about the group's proposed redevelopment of its Roslindale building.

The building, for which the MHC currently uses as its meeting place, is old, to say the least. The basement, which has usable rooms, floods easily, the heat is centralized, meaning you can't turn it down or up for any individual room and the foundations are becoming a problem, at least according to Home for Little Wanderers Program Director Matthew McCall and Chief of Staff Sonia Pullman.

"This building project we're helping to oversee has apparently been going on for at least seven years," she said, noting she just joined the Home a few months ago. "It's difficult, and it's a very expensive proposition and as a nonprofit we don't have unlimited funds, so we have brought in a partner to help with that. But I want to emphasize there is nothing written in stone just yet. We're very interested in hearing your thoughts and concerns and really having an open discussion, as this project affects us all."

McCall said they are running out of the useful life of their current building on American Legion highway.

"For those of you who remember, this building used to be a hospital many years ago," he said. "We hear a lot of 'my mother was born here,' when people come in every so often."

McCall said the hospital construction kind of puts them in a strange place as well because, for instance, there is a lot of unusable space in the extra wide hallways designed for accommodating hospital beds on rollers.

"And we have bathrooms in between every room in here," he said. "There are a lot of inefficiencies in the space and the building is just very old and it's falling apart."

Pullman and McCall discussed the programming that would be taking place at the new building at 780 American Legion Hwy. The project is being funded by 93 units of housing, currently slated for the location of the building now, and the new Home building will go slightly north of where it is now to a current parking lot.

Residents have been historically contentious when it comes to the kind of density 93 units in five or six stories would bring to the neighborhood. Residents Nancy and Agostino Balzano pointed out for instance that the shadow of the new Home building would affect their greenhouse just north of the building, which in the project notification form said was defunct. The couple pointed out that they have brought youngsters from the Home to the greenhouse to interact with the plants before, and yet the developer put that greenhouse down as defunct.

The developer, Four Oaks, was not present during the meeting and the discussion focused on what the Home's building would be used for if and when it was constructed.

Twenty-two units of housing are slated for the Home building, which would be supportive housing for youth aging out of the foster care system and need a little helping hand. McCall said there would definitely be roommates, and about 38 residents would be living full-time at the Home. McCall said the young people in these programs, at least in his 20 year experience, are very goal-oriented. He added to be a part of the program one has to have at least taken steps to find a job, increase their education or enroll in vocational training.

"There are no parties either," he said, adding the Home has video surveillance. "But in reality we don't get a lot of alcohol in our programs. We get a fair number of kids who get caught bringing weed into the program, and we talk to them and say, you can't do that sort of thing, knock it off."

McCall added that most interactions involving physical violence get one kicked out of the program immediately, but he said that is also very rare.

"Many of these kids understand how lucky they are to be in these kinds of programs, because there really aren't a lot of them," he said.

Residents were extremely concerned about the density in the neighborhood. MHC Chair Rick Yoder said he felt it was just too big for the neighborhood.

"This is not the first time we're being asked to take on a burden that nobody else wants into our neighborhood," he said. "It's zoned for two-family, 2.5 stories, and I will bet you that everyone in here would be okay with going just a little bit more than that... They'll be more okay with a project that will not seriously impact 100s of neighbors."

Breadon looks to tackle housing affordability for families

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

District 9 City Councilor Liz Breadon called for a hearing at the most recent regular meeting of the Boston City Council looking to increase affordable housing options for families in the city.

“Community is our common unity that binds us together, that supports us, and makes our city stronger, more resilient, inclusive and sustainable,” she said.

Breadon said this is the city that established the first public schools and libraries, helped to proliferate the abolitionist and later the suffragette movements in the United States and more.

“And more recently for equal marriage rights,” she said.

Breadon said that the city seems to lead the world in medical, technological and biotechnological achievements and companies, and real estate development is off the charts, but something seems to be missing in the City on a Hill.

“This is not a tide that lifts all the boats, especially all the boats with families on them,” she said.

Breadon pointed to an increasing wealth gap in the city, widening education achievement gap and an increasing displacement of families that have been here for generations.

“For decades, citizen activists have raised the alarm about the need to attract and retain families in Allston Brighton, and 15 years ago this issue was the driving force to establish the Presentation School Community Center in Oak Square, and the campaign to save the Faneuil Branch Library from closure,” she said. “Those campaigns were shining examples about how a diverse, multi-generational community came together to fight for the public good that would strengthen and sustain our neighborhood.”

Breadon said that housing for families of middle to low income is a citywide issue, but for her district of 70,000 people, there have been numerous examples of problems arising from the lack of affordable housing.

“Our community’s been impacted by unbridled development, and untethered speculative investment, which is incentivized by a lax enforcement of zoning policy and the lack of a comprehensive planning approach,” she said. “It is a great concern that we’re not building housing that is affordable or meets the needs of our families. We’re building thousands of new units in Allston Brighton, but most are unaffordable and inappropriate for our families. In 2016, a household earning a median income would have to pay 63 percent of its income to rent a three-bedroom apartment in Allston Brighton. The neighborhood has witnessed all this development, but recent figures confirm the fact that we’re just not building enough for families. Of the 2,100 recently-completed or approved units, 62 percent were studios and one-bedrooms, 31 percent were two-bedroom but only 7 percent were three-bedroom units. I’m sorry, but you can’t raise a family in a studio apartment.”

District 9 City Councilor

Breadon pointed out that the median income in Allston is $26,000 and in Brighton its around $50,000, and said that most of the new studio and one-bedroom units, which are sold to the community during the planning phase as for young professionals, go unoccupied because those young professionals simply can’t afford those new units and prefer to live in older housing stock with roommates.

“I’m calling for a hearing to investigate affordability and availability of housing for families, and I call on my colleagues, the administration and all of Boston to work together to keep families in our great city,” she said.

At-Large City Councilor Annissa Essaibi-George said while this issue affects residents in Allston Brighton, it is a citywide and statewide crisis of affordability.

BPDA approves senior living and multi-family projects in Brighton

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Boston Planning and Development Agency (BPDA) voted to approve two projects in the Brighton neighborhood at its Board of Directors meeting last week.

The projects were those slated for 100-110 Lincoln St. and 130 Chestnut Hill Ave., also known as the J.J. Carroll Redevelopment.

The redevelopment consists of 142 affordable rental units, 7,000 square feet of a common space, an 11,000 square foot program for "All-Inclusive Care for Elderly Center," 1,000 square feet of commercial space and 70 off-street parking spaces.

BPDA Project Manager Lance Campbell said the site was formerly the Jewish Community Housing, and the site contains 180,000 gross square feet of housing. There will be 18 two-bedroom units and 124 one-bedroom units.

Project Architect Jonathan Evans gave an overview of the project. He said the Elderly Care Center offers services tailored for older residents who will be, hopefully, living in the development. He also said there will be 15,000 square feet of open space for residents of the facility and the public. He added that because of community feedback, the development team at 2Life Communities and the Boston Housing Authority reduced the massing of the project for better sight lines.

"We're really excited about the 15,000 square feet of open space on Chestnut Hill Avenue, which will feature an inter-generational play space for seniors, and neighborhood kids could utilize to come out and play," he said.

For 100 Lincoln, the project consists of a five-story building

Campbell. "The project contains 32 homeownership units, as well as four (Inclusionary Development Policy income-restricted) units. In addition, there's $50,000 committed in community benefits and mitigation funding for improvements to the Portsmouth Street Playground, located near this project in Brighton and funding for the Boston Transportation Department and the Boston Public Works Department for the Attorney representing the proponent Greg McCarthy, John Pulgini, said the idea was to replace an underutilized commercial/industrial site with housing.

"It's no longer in use, it was a shipping and transport company, and we want to transform it into 32 residential condominium homeownership units," he said. "We went through a robust community process, meeting several times with direct abutters to get their support."

Pulgini pointed out that the street has several housing developments already even though the area has not been zoned that way. Pulgini said there will also be about 50 construction jobs created for the project, and mentioned that the location is a short walk from the Boston Landing Community Rail Station.

"That makes it perfect for residential," he said.

The new development at JJ Carroll will cater to hundreds of elderly residents.

with 32 two-bedroom units, 27 total parking spaces and 54 bike spots.

"The project site consists of one parcel, approximately 13,382 square feet, and currently contains a one-story building that is being used for light industrial purposes," said BPDA Project Manager John Allston Brighton Mobility Study."

Campbell went on to say that the project has support from the BAIA as well as from residents who came out to meetings.

"The development team was also very responsive to staff recommendations throughout the review process," he added.

Miracle Prayer
Dear Heart of Jesus, in the past I have asked You for many favours. This time, I ask you this very special one (mention favour). Take it, dear Heart of Jesus, and place it within Your own broken heart where Your Father sees it. Then, in His merciful eyes, it will become Your favour, not mine. Amen. Say for three days, promise publication and favour will be granted.

2019 Toyota Crewmax Pickup
Its been a long time since I had driven a full size Toyota pickup. This pickup is the real thing. This is a large, heavy duty pickup as well as factory Toyota performance parts and lettering. The truck built to work or play. Our Toyota pickup has very helpful side steps with an additional drop step for us short drivers. Unlike Toyota trucks of yesteryear, Toyota built this truck with the American buyer in mind.
Power comes from a 5.7 liter V/8 381 horse power via a 6 speed automatic with a performance/towing 4:30 rear gear ratio. Toyota Trucks were never in the horse power race, until now. Hit the accelerator and the Tundra gets up and moves. Transmission, engine coolers, heavy duty battery, and alternator. As for performance, rear dual exhaust low back pressure mufflers that are louder than one would think, open performance air filter and yes, a hood scope. The rear window is operational, as is the moon roof. Entune high power audio 7 inch multi function touch screen. This full size cab seats 4 with comfort, 5 when needed. The ride is smooth quiet except for the performance exhaust. The truck feels solid, large tires and suspension work perfectly together. The white paint and black alloy rims go very nicely together. TRD PRO lettering really stands in a good way, to let others know what kind of Tundra this is. There are protective skid plates to protect the engine and transmission. LED lighting, air bags, and automatic high beams are all the Toyota safety features offered in this model. The hard tonneau cover keeps every thing weather tight. EPA 13 city 17 highway combined 14 MPG. Base price on the TRD PRO $49,645.00 destination $1,395.00. There are many options available that put the TRD PRO at $55,000.00.

of marked crosswalks, and long walks to nearby crosswalks. There are no lane markings and long queues turning in and out of Walter St. for drivers. For cyclists, there are no westbound connections from Walter to Centre St. The lack of crosswalks was one of the main concerns for meeting attendees.

“What is the DCR’s priority with this project?” questioned one community member. Parenti explained that safe access is their number one concern. He also read the DCR mission statement: “To protect, promote and enhance the commonwealth of natural, cultural and recreational resources for the well-being of all.”

After the presentation, meeting attendees split up into “breakout groups” to view and discuss three proposed design concepts. Cabral-Curtis met with community members to explain the street redesign concepts, answer questions, and listen to feedback. Meeting attendees were also encouraged to write their feedback on sticky notes and post them on the design concept posters. Stathopoulos explained that the designs/ideas are “not set in stone” and the DCR “wants to get community input”. All three concepts included more pedestrian connections and crosswalks.

One of the Centre St. and Walter St. intersection alternatives presented was a “roundabout alternative” - this design includes a rotary, rectangular rapid flashing beacons, and crosswalks. Pros of this design include the shortest crossings for pedestrians and bicycles, improved pedestrian and bicycle connectivity, an off-road bicycle facility through the intersection, separated bike lanes, and reduced vehicle speeds. However, there are many cons of this design - it is the most expensive alternative, it requires a large amount of earth work to build, it includes the least amount of usable green space, it could confuse users who are unfamiliar with roundabouts, it could cause difficulty to exit the Sophia Snow driveway, and the multi-lane roundabout creates a “multi-threat” scenario for pedestrians and bicycles at crossings.

Most of the meeting attendees were not happy with this plan. “A rotary is the least friendly to pedestrians,” commented one community member.

“Please, no more rotaries!” stated a West Roxbury resident.

Another meeting attendee stated that “rotaries in Boston are horrible and dangerous for everybody!”

The second design concept included 2 two-stage bicycle left-turn boxes and a buffered bike lane. Pros of this concept are staged crossings for pedestrians, least delay for vehicles and bicycles, and pedestrians being able to cross one leg of travel lane at a time. Cons of the design are greater impacts to parking and no vertical separation for bicycles. One meeting attendee commented that this design was the “best option”. Another meeting attendee remarked that the concept is “poor for parking”.

The third design had the most usable green space, the least complicated intersection, separated bicycle lanes, and an exclusive pedestrian phase that would remove conflict with turning vehicles. This option would also most likely be the cheapest alternative. Negatives of this design concept are impacts to traffic operations, delays for bicyclists, and longer crossing distances for pedestrians. A few meeting attendees believed the lanes were too narrow.

The information presented at this meeting, including the concept diagrams, are posted on the DCR’s website at www.mass.gov/dcr/past-public-meetings. The public is invited to provide feedback about the designs, with a deadline of Mar. 5, 2020. Comments may be submitted online at www.mass.gov/dcr/public-comment or by writing to the Department of Conservation and Recreation, Office of Public Outreach, 251 Causeway Street, 6th Floor, Boston, MA 02114.

For questions, concerns, or to be added to an email list to receive DCR general or project-specific announcements, email Mass.Parks@mass.gov or call 617-626-4973.

pointed out that they had just received $2.7 million from the Mayor’s recent allocation of affordable housing funds, but Pullman pointed out it’s somewhat of a drop in the bucket just for their building. The idea is they’re using the 93 units of housing to fund the new building for the Home. The Home’s new building, she said, is expected to cost around $30 million.

McCall and Pullman said the current programming is funded through endowments and trusts that the Home has accumulated over the years, but also said they almost never dip into the principles of those funds; just take out interest. McCall said some actually require that the principle stay untouched, as one woman’s bequest to the Home did (as well as requiring that the Home place her oil portrait somewhere prominent on the property). They said they would be very reluctant to dip into the principles, since later they would not have the funding for their current programming.

“We can only build this building once, and we won’t get another for 100 years,” McCall said.

McCall said much of their current programming is dedicated to Boston Public Schools, serving as the outpatient clinic for community mental health for local individuals and more than 100 BPS school programs.

“By many magnitudes, we are the largest providers of those services in the city and the vast majority of BPS services come from us,” he said.

He said they also provide preschool services throughout the city.

“That’s when you see the itty bitty’s here,” he said.

McCall said they have preschool placement programs, community trauma programs, Community Service Agency programs, supportive housing, therapeutic after school programs, and mental health programs as well.

“You can tell I’ve been here a long time,” McCall said.

McCall said the new building is designed to more efficiently provide space for those programs mentioned above, as well as a community space for neighborhood associations like MHC to meet, and the addition of a medical outpatient clinic, which would be an additional service. McCall and Pullman said that that provider was originally going to be the Dimock Health Center, but as of last week they had to pull out. McCall said they have several other interested providers, however.

Hyde Park Youth Basketball Week 9

The Hyde Park Youth Basketball Association (HPYBA) season is in the final stretch. With only two games left it is crunch time as teams prepare for the playoffs. The two divisions seem to have a big gap between the top of the standings and the bottom. The players of the Instructional Division for 6-9 year olds at the Ohrenberger Community Center are sad that the season is almost over but have all agreed to keep working on their game until next season. The Ray Foley and Craig Curran saw some exciting, high scoring games. We are excited to see what these last two weeks will look like for the teams.

Foley Division Results

Darkside 50 - 3-Pointers 49

What an incredible game this was, especially for the five players that showed up for the 3-Pointers this week. The first seed Darkside went out to an early lead but it was the drive in the 3-Pointers that left the score so close. The 3-Pointers were led on offense by Freddy Johnson and Andrew Igharo who scored 15 and 14 points respectively. They were able to control the pace of the game in the second half. It was the defensive effort of Alex Francios who kept the team in the game. Alex got into foul trouble in the first half but was able to keep composure while Nathaniel Bodden stepped up to help in the second half. The Darkside were able to pull off this win behind the leadership of Jay Jackson who scored 24 points and directed his teammates on offense and defense. He was able to find Justin Elow on some give and gos to the basket and Phalen Browne played a huge role on defense again this week with a handful of blocked shots and some forced turnovers.

The 3-Pointers hope that this drive will continue as they prepare to face the Hoyas next week, and the Darkside are one step closer to finishing in first and will keep those dreams alive with a win against the Cowboys next week.

Cowboys 55 - Hoyas 50

It looked like the Hoyas had this game in the bag but the Cowboys had something else in mind. The Hoyas went out to an early lead behind the scoring of Louis Gerrado who had 19 points and Corey Cunnif who had 11 points. Barron Langston played tough defense for the Hoyas holding off the fast breaks of the Cowboys. The fourth quarter was like a whole different game for the Cowboys who scored 23 points. They were able to find Christopher Martinez in the paint and he scored 23 points for the game. Isaiah Figueroa also found his shot in the second half scoring 12 points for his team. It was a team effort on defense to keep the Hoyas off of the free throw line while forcing turnovers that sealed the deal for the Cowboys. The Hoyas hope they will have a different result next week against the 3-Pointers and the Cowboys hope they can keep this momentum going as they prepare to take on the Darkside.

3-Pointers 28-Blue Devils 12

Another tough match for the Blue Devils this week against the 3-Pointers. Even though the score did not end up in their favor, they played extremely as a team. Yamil Araujo led the team in scoring with 6 points with JeymiGuirado, Jayden Omoruyi, and Jaden Pinet all scoring 2 points. On defense it was Vasani Figueroa who had another week of exceptional play, making it difficult for the 3-Pointers to drive the ball on his defensive side. The 3-Pointers got out to an early lead and never let up behind the orchestration of Desmond Monterio and Jayden Raymond who scored 8 and 6 points respectively. The other four players this week were also able to score points showing the diversity of plays that the 3-Pointers have in their book. On defense, it was Jeremiah Andrade who made the baseline impossible to get to and Joshua Torres who was able to get a few steals in this game. The Blue Devils look to regroup as they prepare to take on the Raptors next week, and the 3-Pointers will keep this momentum going as they practice for their game against the Sonics.

Sonics 14-Raptors 13

What a way to end this weekend's basketball games. Neither team could buy a basket and this game came down to the final two minutes and an extremely clutch basket. The Raptors had the lead for almost the entire game. They were led by BJ O'Neil who scored 9 points and Alex Diaz who ran the offensive plays from the top of the key. On defense Isaac Joseph and Nathan Etienne stopped the Sonics from driving to the hoop. This was an uphill battle for the Sonics. Quinton Avevor took the reins for the team developing plays and leading the team in scoring with 8 points. Defensively, it was RichmarchExantus and Gideon Egbon who kept their team in this game. The game was decided by Gideon Egbon who got an offensive rebound and put it right back up scoring the game winner with less than a minute to go. The Raptors look to work on their two minute drill this week in practice as they prepare for the Blue Devils, and the Sonics will ride this high through to their game against the 3-Pointers.

community for help."

"One of the big problems there is hunger," the Rep said. "Give them Stop and Shop cards to the mothers and grandmothers."

Pond Association member Micah Sachs said he would call Polanco and see what she needs.

Another member David Moir advised caution.

"The Association needs more research," he said. "Let's meet again and prepare a report."

Board member Kevin Moloney made a motion that "not more" than $500 go to the task force; the motion passed 11 to 1.

Elugardo said this is an election year.

"I don't know if I have an opponent yet," she said. "If I do I'll replace meetings like this with door knocking in the neighborhoods."

Thanking everyone, she excused herself to speak at the Ward 19 Democratic meeting at Roslindale House on Poplar Street.

vanced aged seniors and do something wonderful for them," she said.

During the event, she said it was an amazing experience.

"It's been wonderful, everybody's really excited to see us and happy we're here and delighted to have us as a community group do more for the community here," she said.

Ulrich said she comes to the Altnheim as an audiologist, and when she floated the idea to the German Centre's leadership they were all in.

"I'm here pretty regularly and I'm a doctor of hearing and imbalance disorders, so I have a pretty good relationship with the staff here and so this seemed like a logical place for us to start," she said.

Ulrich said it was fun for their membership as well. Member Arlene Hanafin said she grew up in volunteer service, and this was a great way, she felt, to pay off the debt younger people owe to seniors.

"I grew up doing some type of service. I was the general manager for my kids T-Ball for years and when my kids got to a certain age, I stopped volunteering," said Hanafin. "I knew I needed to give back, I have a great life and I should help other people. I think today is a fabulous idea, and I think our seniors are underappreciated. They took care of us and now it's our turn to take care of them."

Deutes Altenhiem CEO and President Michael Lincoln said when the Rotary came to him with the idea, they were excited.

"It's fantastic, it's community outreach that the German Centre has integrated into," he said. "It's really nice."

Lincoln spoke as he helped Rotary members carry the gallon buckets with water and flowers to more than 200 residents.

"I knew they were coming and I just wanted to greet them and say thank you, but Rotary being as active as they are, they just started going on their own," he said with a laugh. "I just had to corral them and say, 'ok, this is the way to go,' and I just didn't want them to get lost."

Lincoln said he would definitely be open to hosting this event and others like it in the future.

"It is a good community organization, and we already have members from the St. Theresa School come in once a month, and we'd obviously welcome the Rotary to come more often. I think we had somebody from Rotary come in last year to talk about a book he wrote, so we'd be more than happy."

Lincoln said any other organization looking to help out is more than welcome to contact the German Centre.

Resident Peggy Marino said she loved getting a Valentine.

"They're beautiful, the flowers are good and I love the idea," she said.

Rev. Jones continued from page 3

that people need to hear, so it's my job to let them know."

One African influence Jones educated people about was an instrument he played called the banjar, a precursor to the banjo. Part drum, part string instrument, it was used to send messages that white people could not understand during slavery.

Another way slaves communicated escape routes was through spirituals, he said. Canaan was a disguise for Canada, while the Jordan was the Mississippi River.

Jones wove a historical tapestry through his music, bridging diverse musical styles with inflections of humor. He also did impersonations of Elvis, Ed Sullivan and a stirring rendition of how Aretha Franklin could turn the word "Amen" into a two-minute melodic voyage that nearly raised the rafters.

Jones engaged the audience throughout, encouraging them to sing along to "My Girl," "Amazing Grace" and "Oh, Irene."

He also was not afraid to get political. One of his most popular compositions was "Lightin's Barack Obama Blues." While it celebrated the first African American president, it lamented that no matter what he did, "somebody's still gon' be mad at you."

Rev. Anne Bancroft, pastor of the Theodore Parker Church, said she was thrilled to have the concert series, and Jones in particular.

"One of my goals is to help this congregation be a resource to the community that's beyond who we are as a church, that really draws people in for all kinds of things," she said. "We center around spirit, justice and arts. I really think it's great that we are bringing in people to learn stuff that they wouldn't otherwise see or hear."

Bancroft thanked Jones for "bringing the spirit a little bit east."

"I think these days, we could all use a little uplift," she said.

She added that the Sunday service, which Jones attended, celebrated the 15th and 19th amendments and particularly honored African American women who have influenced history.

"Music is a universal language that deepens communication," said Roslindale resident Joanne Prince. "And he gave us a history lesson."

"I just thought the depth and breadth of the whole historical story and the way he put it into context was awesome," David Holzman of Roslindale said. "The music itself was great. And it was really fascinating the way he could impersonate so many different styles and people. It was a great way to spend an otherwise cold night."

TERRY KITCHEN JOINS RIOT IMPROV FOR SONGS TO SCENES

Saturday February 29 at The Rozzie Square Theater

Award-winning singer/songwriter Terry Kitchen will join Riot Improv for 'Songs to Scenes' on Saturday February 29 at the Rozzie Square Theater, 5 Basile Street, Roslindale. Kitchen will be performing songs from his new CD Next Time We Meet, which will then be turned into scenes by Riot Improv. The show begins at 8 PM and admission is $15 ($10 students). Tickets are available at www.theriottheater.com or at the door.

Riot Improv is a hilarious improv comedy group produced by the Riot Theater Company, one of the co-owners of the Rozzie Square Theater in Roslindale. The veteran comedians of Riot Improv perform weekly shows at the Rozzie Square Theater and present Songs to Scenes the last Saturday of each month. This month, Riot Improv is teaming up with award-winning singer/songwriter Terry Kitchen to create improv comedy inspired by the emotions, images, lyrics, and rhythms of Terry's musical performance.

Called "one of New England's best songwriters" by The Boston Globe, Terry Kitchen creates songs that are portraits of ordinary people and emotions, captured with extraordinary compassion, honesty and humor. He's been performing on folk stages across the country since the 1990s, releasing 12 CDs, including his latest, Next Time We Meet, which is already being heard across the US and Canada on folk radio. His songs have won the Mid-Atlantic and USA Song Contests and been runner-up in the John Lennon Song Contest, and have appeared in numerous films.

In the 1980s he was the leader of the groundbreaking Boston band Loose Ties, whose experiences he recounts in his novel Next Big Thing, called "a great debut novel" by The San Francisco Book Review.
