The Casey Arborway is more than a crosstown thoroughfare. Jamaica Plain, and especially Forest Hills, are now recognizing that the Casey Arborway-completed after four years of work- is a neighborhood benefit, one it shares with thousands of daily commuters.

Where a bridge stood for 60 years is now nearly a mile of shade trees, bike and walking paths, pedestrian lights and wide crosswalks, none of which existed before 2015 and all of which recreates as closely as possible the parkway designed by Frederick Law Olmsted in 1892.

For the first time, the Arnold Arboretum, the Southwest Corridor Park and Franklin Park are now safely and logically connected for walkers and bikers.

The $40 million landscaping of the Casey Arborway was designed by Crosby, Schlesinger, Smallwood; a woman-owned firm that also redesigned the nearly completed Parkman Playground in Forest Hills. Six landscape designers were assigned to work in coordination with MassDoT.

In a statement to The Bulletin, Dineen Crosby said her firm recognized it was, in many ways, standing on the shoulders of Frederick Law Olmsted.

“We recognized the historic significance of the Casey

Council looks to seal eviction court records, fund senior programs

Jeff Sullivan

The Boston City Council called for a hearing on Jun 19 to discuss the possibility of sealing eviction court records for residents.

Hearing sponsor, District 1 City Councilor Lydia Edwards, who ran the Mayor’s Office of Housing Stability before being elected as a councilor, has a lot of experience in this and said the main reason for filing this is that now these records are readily accessible online for any landlord to find, and said that tenant screening services routinely recommend rejections of tenants who have appeared in courts, regardless of the outcome.

“There are a million people in Massachusetts with an eviction record,” she said. “Many

Junior's Automotive saying goodbye to Hyde Park

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

Junior Damato has been working on cars in Hyde Park for more than half a century, but now he said he has decided to close the business.

“And so now we’re on to our next venture, which is Middleboro, and the reason for that is, the only reason for that is, I can’t make the drive anymore,” he said.

Damato has been commuting from Lakeville to Hyde Park for about 35 out of the 55 years he has had the location in Hyde Park, and, at almost 70 years old, he said he can’t take the drive anymore. The new facility will have 60 used car spaces, as opposed to the four or five he has in Hyde Park, and 35 bays and 24 lifts to work on. He said he doesn’t want to take it too easy there. The time he saves from the 30-plus mile drive will be put to good use.

He said the business in Hyde Park is great, but he’s going to miss the community here most of all.

“It’s the people who come into the place and the neighborhood we’re associated with,” he said. “We’ve seen parents who had kids and then those kids became adults and now they have kids. So we’ve gone through three decades of folks here and we know everybody on a first name basis. It’s just not about the business; it’s about trying to do the right thing for the public and the community. It has been a great run, it really has.”

Damato said he started working on cars when he was very young, learning at a vocational school and with his father, who originally owned the shop.

“It was an easy way to get out of school,” he said. “I used to go to work for a week and go to school for a week. It was a vocational school in Newton that the Town of Dedham picked up the tab for because they didn’t have a vocational school.”

He said the work is always interesting in that it’s always something different. No car ever has exactly the same problem, and he said he likes having a brand new challenge every day.

“It’s been a very interesting career,” he said. “It’s not the same job over and over again.”

Damato said that in the 55 years, the job has become much more electronically and digitally oriented than it was before, as one might imagine.

amount of electronics in the business today versus the business of yesteryear,” he said. “Everything has to do with computers. Years ago we had to deal with points and plugs and stuff like that. Now, we don’t have that anymore. Everything is electronic and everything is fuel injected.”

Damato pointed out that when fuel injection became popular, for instance, it was only four or five pounds of fuel pressure. Now, it’s over 2,000 pounds of fuel pressure. He said new developments in gasoline production and motor oil production have allowed vehicles to live longer too.

“A car with 50,000 miles was pretty much junk when I was starting out. The engine had to be changed out,” he said. “Now, 150,000 miles is not unusual. That tow truck right there, I just bought that, and it’s a 2016 with 108,000 miles on it in just three years. That means the truck never sat around.”

Damato said he loves Hyde Park.

“It’s a really nice, diverse community. The people here are all just really great, the neighbors are good and the City of Boston has been great with the permitting and all that kind of stuff,” he said. “The new mayor has been very, very good. All the politicians have been very, very good, and it’s been a real long career here and a very bitter-sweet end.”

Damato has been running a weekly advice column about new vehicles and common repair issues in this newspaper and several others for decades.

“I still never got a website,” he said with a laugh. “I’m probably the only Italian guy who doesn’t have a website. They tell me websites are very, very important.”

Damato said he felt having a local guy writing a new column every week could be an asset to the community. He obtains a new car every week and goes through its pros and cons. He said at one time, he had a circulation of 4 million before the Internet started eating into news publishing.

“I was number three behind Click and Clack,” he said.

Damato said any customer who wants to make the drive for his services can go to 359 West Grove St. in Middleboro.

CONTROVERSIAL SHOPPING

Everything these days is political, even online furniture shopping. The commercial jingle may declare “Wayfair, you’ve got just what I need,” but when it comes to government procurement for the southern border, the Boston-headquartered online retailer’s employees are not sold.

The company, based in Copley Square, is under fire from within for its decision to sell beds to a government contractor overseeing border detention camps.

On Wednesday afternoon, many of those employees planned to temporarily walk off their jobs in protest. The stated objective: ending the contract and donating already-collected revenue to RAICES, a charitable endeavor advocating for immigrants.

We always support the rights of workers who feel compelled to speak out about disagreeable business practices. That sort of involvement, done properly, can benefit both the firm and its employee base.

We do confess, however, that the Wayfair situation isn’t entirely cut-and-dry along either political or moral grounds. Profiting off a horrible development is pretty easy to argue against. Is it equally prudent to block the delivery of much needed beds to provide at least some modicum of comfort for the young detainees?

Asking a for-profit company to forego revenue in support of a political cause can be a slippery slope. We are well aware that many do (especially since the Supreme Court’s Citizens United decision a few years back) but that doesn’t make any political stand by a mainstream brand any more sensible or productive.

From a purely business perspective, currying favor with one political viewpoint can easily backfire when confronted with an opposing ideology. Just look at how things have gone for the conservative viewpoints expressed by the religious owners of Chick-fil-a. It earned the chain, until recently, a Mayoral ban from Boston’s city limits by the Menino administration. Politics and poultry don’t play well together.

So too, we might argue, regarding Wayfair, but with one major exception. The retailer probably didn’t set out to take a pro-Trump or anti-immigrant stand. It was more likely just looking to make an easy sale. No more, no less. We don’t begrudge them their business.

One thing, however, does bother us. Should government contractors really just be ordering what they want online? Isn’t there a procurement process that should be legally followed?

We wonder if that question may outlive the current employee protest.

Revelations during an Allandale Woods clean-up

Thanks to the Boston Parks Department’s Paul Sutton, a number of volunteers found themselves involved one Saturday morning in a clean-up of a section of the Allandale Woods. There was also the eradication of an invasive species without the use of DDT or Round-Up, done the old-fashioned way: extrication.

Among the benefits to the wooded area were revelations by some of the volunteers to those of us willing to listen.

The Faulkner Hospital, currently called the Brigham and Women’s Faulkner Hospital, is envisioning a huge expansion on its Centre Street side. Hopefully the high-rise edifice, if such is the case, will not spoil the view from the Arnold Arboretum as the state laboratory near Forest Hills Station so tragically does. Boston already has at least two other high rises erected as variations to building codes that spoil views: the high-rise building at the corner of Perkins and the Jamaica way and the equally huge building near G and Columbia Road, the latter of which impedes the views of the ocean for many South Boston residents.

Another volunteer spoke passionately about the closing of the Lemuel Shattuck Hospital. Built on prime parkland usurped from the city, the state hospital has morphed from one of its original purposes—as a repository for patients with incurable diseases as well as a cancer treatment facility experimenting with mustard gas and laser treatment (my own mother was treated thus)—to a facility serving mental health and Department of Correction patients. It’s scheduled to close in 2021, but where to send its clientele is another issue. The South End, as evidenced from driving through Mass and Cass these days, has already got more than it can handle. She voiced a possible solution (if agreeable to abutters) for keeping the clientele in a nearby part of Jamaica Plain; to repurpose the abandoned, spacious MBTA building in the old trolley yard, as the neighborhood and the T figure out what to do with the rest of the large parcel.

Another volunteer, a recent graduate of an environmental program at Northeastern, insisted that his home country of China had stopped accepting plastic for recycling because it was not clean (I myself should utter a mea culpa here). He stated that China wants plastics categorized only as #1 and #2, yet the city on its website contends that plastics #1 through #7 are recyclable in our 96-gallon blue bins. Hmmmm.

My Kind of Town/

Most disheartening to many volunteers were the many deposits of dog feces in plastic bags. Evidently some dog owners think that feces will dissolve plastic: it doesn’t. Why go to all the trouble of repackaging dog excrement and then toss it into woodlands, where it will remain bagged and undissolved for years?

Anyways, thanks to all the volunteers for their time and efforts to beautify one parcel of woodland, as well as their thought-provoking conversations.

Letters to the Editor

REROUTING CARS INTO NEIGHBORHOODS IS RIDICULOUS

To the Editor:

Last week I attended a meeting at Holy Name Hall hosted by the City to discuss pedestrian safety on Centre Street. Instead I heard a platform seemingly espoused by the City and Main Streets to create bike paths for the benefit of a few bicycles to the detriment of vast majority in the Community.

The only study that the City did was the creation of these bike lanes. Why wouldn’t they study other options? The bicycle bloc, who seemed to come from Watertown, Jamaica Plain and Roslindale, naturally isn’t focused on the quality of life for families on the side streets in West Roxbury. Is the City setting public policy based on these individuals?

More to the issue: The two dangerous crossings are at Hastings and Centre, and at Holy Name crossing from Esther Road to the 7-11 Convenience Store. Let’s change those. The crossings at Corey, Park, Mt. Vernon and LaGrange Streets have pedestrian signals so they seem very safe.

The only solution that was offered was the reduction of Centre Street to only two lanes (one lane going in either direction) so that bike lanes could be created. There are other solutions; much simpler and less expensive solutions.

Why do a multi-million dollar project to solve a problem that could be much more easily rectified? Why do a huge project that will be lengthy and incredibly disruptive to residents and businesses for many years? Why do a project that could send 16,200 cars through our neighborhoods?

How do we correct this?

Well... we could do the previously mentioned lane reduction along with a litany of remedies like: raised crosswalks, brightly colored crosswalks, flashing warning lights, bright signage, yellow vertical car lane dividers, speed reductions down to 5mph, an intricate video monitoring system- and every other intricate and expensive idea.

Or we can put the safety of pedestrians in the hands of those very pedestrians.

At Hastings Street, install a pedestrian-controlled crossing signal. Period.

At Holy Name, remove the crosswalk at Esther because it is a blind spot close to the rotary. Then, we could install another pedestrian-controlled traffic light to cross at the Roche Centre.

Two very effective steps, instead of a huge community upheaval! The bicycle lobby has jumped on the pedestrian safety issue and is trying to leverage it to get to their real goals. It’s a shame that they want to re-route all these vehicles through our streets instead of suggesting that the bicyclists use our beautiful side streets.

A SINGLE LANE CENTRE ST. NOT THE ANSWER

To the Editor:

I do not believe that changing Centre Street from two lanes to a single lane in each direction will solve the problem of cars not stopping for pedestrians. A car coming from a single traffic lane can be just as thoughtless as a car coming from a double lane. Moreover, as a resident of a street that intersects the heart of the Centre Street business district, as one who observes Centre Street traffic on a daily basis at many different times of day, I predict that changing the pattern to one lane per direction will cause major traffic jams along the roadway. Even now, with the present two-lane configuration, traffic can back up significantly, particularly during peak hours. I can only imagine what will happen if the traffic throughput is halved. Such traffic tie-ups will affect businesses in the area as well as residents simply trying to get home. Drivers will likely go

Arborway within the Emerald Necklace...connectivity is of particular significance within the thoroughfare that supports pedestrians cyclists,transit users and drivers. The plantings take inspiration from the existing flora of Franklin Park and The Arnold Arboretum.”

Yet, for a neighborhood surrounded by parks, few in Jamaica Plain paid much attention to the landscaping of the Casey Arborway, in large part because MassDoT never convened any public meetings on the landscaping of the new parkway, treating it just as a highway project.

But Clay Harper of Hampstead Road was one who did. He admitted to The Bulletin his initial apprehension.

“As a close neighbor, I tried to follow the line of larger public good,” he said. “This required some level of trust that the professional engineers and planners were [working] in good faith.”

“Over 160 mature trees were lost out of necessity, but they’ve been replaced nearly four-fold with a wide variety of stately median trees and large landscape areas in the station plaza and upper busway.”

Steve McLaughlin was the project manager at MassDoT for the whole Casey Arborway, including the budgeting and planning schedule; the latter hampered by blizzards in 2015.

“There are three owners of the landscaping,” he told The Bulletin. “The Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR), the MBTA and the Boston Parks Dept. The transfer areas are pretty complicated.”

“For traffic signals alone we had one room of a hundred people from the three agencies,” McLaughlin said. “MassDoT owns the signals but DRC and the city operate them. We had a series of meetings just to break into who’s responsible for what.”

George Batchelder is the Supervising Landscape Architect and Robbin Bergfors is Senior Landscape Architect at MassDoT.

“We reviewed the plans and coordinated construction,” Batchelder said. “There are 560 new trees, 58 varieties. We expect all landscaping to be completed in July. All trees have a two year warranty.”

“We worked on the plant selection with the Arnold Arboretum. We wanted to match the Arboretum collection with a large number of species,”

Bergfors said. “Scarlet oak, pagoda tree, Princeton American elms, American beech. At the Stony brook plazas we have black gums and river birch.”

“Most of the plants selected are a wide variety that can be pollinated by birds and are also draught resistant.”

The Forest Hills Station and North plazas are dominated by blankets of ground covers and grasses, thousands of plugs; a puzzling choice given the high volume of foot traffic and the inevitable blowing trash the plazas get. These beds have been fenced off, presumably for two seasons, allowing them to get established.

Planting began as early as Sept 2016 when a row of Princeton elms was planted in the Casey Arborway median between Shea Square at Franklin Park and the courthouse. MassDoT explained at the time that it wanted to show even during construction what the new parkway would look like.

Bergfors said that normal maintenance for the next two years will be the responsibility of the contractor Barletta, who will subcontract the work.

“This is very unique,” she said. “But DCR insisted on this. A two-year maintenance of watering, weeding and replacement of trees and shrubs and groundcovers that did not survive was required.”

DCR Commissioner Leo Roy, speaking at the June 3 Jamaica Pond Association meeting, said that DCR has a 90 percent survival rate for all the trees it plants.

“Why? We get people to adapt trees for two years,” he said. “Removing the Casey Overpass, isn’t that a transformation? Stay tuned. The trees haven’t leafed out yet.”

Bergfors said the Parks Dept has limited jurisdiction largely at the entrance to Franklin Park along the old boundary wall.

“We had difficulties with the groundcovers,” Bergfors said, “It gets full sun so we’ve switched species, a sedum with pink and yellow flowers. The north and south plazas have purple flower angelina.”

Large areas of ground cover at New Washington Street and at the stairs leading down to Hyde Park Avenue were replaced by Gleason Johndraw landscaping in late May.

Since the day the Southwest Corridor Park opened on May 2, 1987, the Parkland Management Advisory Committee(PMAC) has been steward and advocate of that $19 million linear park.

Jennifer Leonard of PMAC said that the group welcomes the new greenspace and expects to be actively involved now that the North plaza –with its introductory sign announcing “Southwest Corridor Park”- and the walk/bike-ways to Franklin Park are in active use.

“We anticipate that DCR will be more in the forefront for managing daily use,” she told the Bulletin, “and therefore PMAC will get more involved.”

“PMAC had representation on the[Casey Arborway] Citizens Advisory Group at the beginning and we stayed involved and interested since then,” Leonard said.

According to Patrick Marvin of MassDOT, anyone with concerns and questions about maintenance during the two years of interim management before DCR turnover should go to mass.gov/forms/contact-massdot.

Harper said he is “highly optimistic” about the completed Casey Arborway.

“Without the overpass you can see why Forest Hills is called” Forest Hills”, he said referring to the tree line of Franklin Park from the veterans post.

nut Hill Ave.) from June 19 until Sept. 25, 3 -7 pm, except on July 3.

A few years ago, the Allston/Brighton Health Collaborative (ABHC) was spurred by results from the Food Access Committee's assessment, so they partnered with member organizations ABCD Neighborhood Opportunity Center, Brighton Main Streets, and PSF Community Center to develop and launched the farmers market.

"This is our first year on the Brighton Common. The market took place in Oak Square for three years," explained ABHC Director Anna Leslie. "We are newly rebranded. We are very excited to be in this location." Over the past three years, the market has generated 85 food vendors, 8,400 shoppers, and $24,000 committed from sponsors.

"Today, there are ten food vendors and half a dozen community partners," stated Leslie. "We have seen a broad range of people, from young kids to seniors." Leslie explained that the Brighton Farmers Market accepts a variety of payments, including SNAP, HIP, WIC, senior coupons, and food prescriptions. St. Elizabeth's Medical Center, a sponsor of the Brighton Farmers Market, was also present to share their resources with attendees.

For some vendors, this was their very first farmers market. Olivier Flagollet, of Hettie Belle Farm explained this was his "first time, first day, and first year" attending a farmers market. "We were very surprised to see how well attended this market was for the first month," Flagollet stated. "It is a very nice neighborhood market. A lot of people are here to shop for their fridge, they are not just here to check out the scene." Hettie Belle Farm is based in Warwick, MA and distributes meat shares, thanksgiving turkeys, and holiday geese.

Not all vendors were selling meat, fruits and vegetables - some were selling homemade and handmade products. Tatiana Olaru had a table for her new company, Earth in Bloom, which was founded in January. "This is our very first time at a farmers market. We are very excited to meet everyone," she remarked. Earth in Bloom sells skin care items, such as face masks, toners, facial scrubs, and hand cream. "Earth in Bloom is for everyone," explained Olaru. "The skincare industry loves to divide genders with specific marketing tactics such as packaging colors, buzz words and fragrances. We target men and women, our products are gender neutral." Olaru also discussed their natural ingredients, including coffee, peppermint, grapefruit, and matcha.

Ron Manseau of Sherman and Cherie's Beezy Bees (based in Longmeadow, MA) has attended many farmers markets in and around the Boston area - including in Cambridge, Copley and Westfield. Sherman & Cherie's Beezy Bees sells wildflower honey and products using honey and beeswax. These products include hand creams, lip balms, heel cream, and soaps. "We've had a very busy day today," Manseau stated. "I started selling a new flavor of honey sticks today - chocolate. Some people thought it was odd, but they tasted it and loved it."

2019 Jeep Cherokee 4x4 Trailhawk

I recently spent a week in a 2019 Jeep Cherokee Trailhawk. The Trailhawk, like all Cherokees, has three engine choices. The base is a 2.4 liter, 4 cylinder with 180 horsepower, next is a 2.0 liter, turbo 270 horsepower, and the 3.2 liter, V/6 with 271 horsepower. Our test Trailhawk had the 2.0 liter turbo that felt more like a high powered V/6. All are mated with the flawless shifting of the 9-speed automatic transmission. No matter what speed you are going, there is more than enough power at your command. Another nice touch is the quietness from additional insulation.

On cold mornings, you will enjoy the remote start and the heated seats and steering wheel that come on automatically when the temperature drops. Entry level has been lowered for us shorter people and seating has also been redesigned with lower bolster heights. Seats provide excellent support and comfort, there is room for two adults in the back. Fold down the rear seats and there is plenty of room for whatever you can throw in. As for the large touchscreen multi-function center display, it is simple to use. Heat and A/C controls can be operated manually with knobs, as well as the radio from knobs or the steering wheel.

In the old days, Jeeps had a hard ride and they were a guy thing. That was then – now I see many women buying Jeeps. In my own neighborhood, three women under the age of 25 bought Jeeps recently. Shift on the fly, 17-inch wheels and tires, anti-slip rear differential, and more are standard. The option list is long. The Technology Group brings in forward collision warning, rain sense wipers, brake assist, active cruise control, exterior mirrors with directionals, automatic high beams and more for $995. All Cherokees are available in either 2WD or 4WD. The base Cherokee 2WD starts out at $23,995; 4WD is $25,495 (destination fee: $1,195). The top-of-the-line 4WD Overland is $37,775.

The overall appearance is very modern looking and the signature front grille and bumper look great. The Cherokee rides smooth, can go off-road, and pull a small boat, etc.

Boston's own Junior Damato, "The Auto Doctor" has agreed to field auto repair questions from Bulletin and Record readers. Please forward your questions to news@bulletinnewspapers.com and we will do our best to get your questions answered.

Road Diet proposed for Centre Street

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Boston Transportation Department (BTD) held a public hearing on June 20 with more than 300 residents and stakeholders of West Roxbury to discuss plans to make Centre Street safer.

The proposal, according to Boston Chief of Streets Chris Osgood and BTD Transportation Planner Charlotte Fleetwood, was a version of the plan first put forth by Northeastern Professor Peter Furth years ago. It would reduce the number of lanes on Centre Street from four full travel lanes to two travel lanes with a third turning lane.

Fleetwood said their traffic engineers found that this reduction would only affect traffic during peak rush hour times, and during those times it would only increase travel time by two minutes. She said the idea was to allow traffic to make left turns more easily, and as such would reduce the number of slowdowns in the left lane from vehicles stopping traffic to make a left turn. The plan would also include dedicated and protected bike lanes, as the lane reduction would give more space for them to work with.

Fleetwood said the lane reduction would also more than likely result in speed reduction. She said reducing travel lanes to one lane would not allow vehicles to pass each other, requiring traffic to slow down. She said currently, the average speed on the 25 mph street is about 30 mph, with 85 percent of those going above that speed, at an average rate of 36 mph. She said at that speed, a cyclist or pedestrian has about a 60 percent chance of walking out of a collision without serious injury or death.

The road diet proposal comes after resident Marilyn Wentworth was struck and killed while trying to cross Centre Street in February. Fleetwood said reducing the number of lanes pedestrians have to cross from four to three would definitely decrease incidents like that of Ms. Wentworth's, and they would also look to install islands where appropriate to give pedestrians a place to stop in between lanes.

Fleetwood said this would also reduce the chances for pedestrian fatalities in another way, as many times what is called a multi-threat crash has resulted in pedestrian fatalities or injuries. That's when one vehicle in the right lane stops for a pedestrian but the vehicle behind doesn't see the pedestrian, assuming the vehicle in front was turning. The second vehicle then turns into the left hand lane to continue travel, striking the pedestrian.

Fleetwood said they are also looking to reduce the number of traffic signals on the street, as nine signals in a one-mile stretch of road is a very high number. She added that with daylighting – removing parking spaces from the curbs at intersections to give more visibility to pedestrians – would also result in the reduction in the number of public parking spaces by 16. She said looking at the amount of parking on Centre Street as a whole – there are currently 221 public spaces and more than 1,000 spaces for private businesses on Centre, in lots and on side streets – it's not too much of a reduction.

While the public feedback for the plan was generally positive, with 33 speakers in favor, three on the fence and five in opposition, the opposition spoke very strongly and to applause from about half the crowd.

"We all agree Centre Street is dangerous and something has to be done," said At-Large City Council Candidate and West Roxbury Improvement Association President Marty Keogh. "But reducing the lanes from four to three, that's not a good idea... This is too drastic and too extreme and the reconstruction of Centre Street is going to send all the traffic to the side streets. People like me and my neighbors avoid Centre Street right now. If people do that with the application Waze, they will avoid Centre Street and come down my street."

Keogh said previously the Waze application already is causing heavier traffic on the side streets, and many residents echoed his concern. Other residents said the city needs to look at creating more four-way stop sign intersections and one-way streets to calm traffic on the side streets, and Fleetwood said they would look into it. Resident Jen Hennigan said she's in favor of the proposal if they could reduce cut through traffic on the side streets.

"Right now these roads are designed for cars to zip through this neighborhood," she said. "We have so many cut through people, so I ask you to make it less appealing for people to cut through."

Hennigan also pointed out that Beacon Street had already experienced a road diet and that area has not seen a heavy increase in traffic.

"There was a lot of discussion on how that would never work too," she said.

Resident Nancy Pistero wondered if more parking could be made available to residents by allowing the "row of almost always empty banks" to lease parking to residents.

Resident Gerry Green said he's never had a problem crossing Centre, and said he is concerned that the basis of the BTD's recommendation to reduce the number of lanes was based on federal studies and guidelines.

"Frankly, I'm surprised you rely so much on studies by the federal bureaucracy," he said. "I am heartened that you will be seeking more public input. I just want to say that we need to focus on the root cause of the problem, and your solution should be devoted to fixing the cause of the problem."

Marilyn Wentworth's husband Al and her son Matthew both spoke during the meeting.

"First off, I am strongly in favor of the road diet," Al Wentworth said. "I also know someone made mention of the Beacon Street road diet, and I was driving on Beacon Street and I noticed it was one lane and it seemed to handle traffic very well. Why can't it be done on Centre? They have at least as much traffic there."

Al Wentworth also pointed out the city has been rolling out its Slow Streets program, which works on side streets to reduce speeds with stop signs, road narrowing and speed humps and suggested the city look into that for Centre's side streets.

Resident Bill House said he was opposed to the idea.

"You have 16,000 cars a day and there's only going to be more cars backed up, even though this is a conversation to lessen the traffic?" he said.

Both Osgood and Fleetwood said these are preliminary designs that would be worked on and they would most likely have a completed plan to show the community in the fall.

of them are women, many of them are people of color, but 80 percent of them were in eviction court because they didn't have the rent. That's really what has caused most evictions, and with our rising rents we're finding more and more people not being able to make them. So these records oftentimes are inaccurate and are used by third-party servicing companies to render automatic judgments to prevent landlords from even considering that person as a tenant."

Edwards said she is a landlord and she supports landlords being able to do background checks on tenants and finding out if they have eviction records, but she said it doesn't make sense to know that a person was evicted 20 years ago, nor is it helpful.

"These records from 20 years ago are permanently available and publicly searchable right now, and that's what we're trying to stop," she said. "It creates a Scarlet Letter E on a person and it creates a stigma, and what it really means is they just didn't have the money at one point in their lives. We're talking about seniors, many of them women, on Social Security now, and many of them have an eviction record. Some of them are facing displacement, already having low income or social security, and they now have also this Scarlet Letter from the 80s or 90s. The chances of them finding a new place are extremely low."

Edwards said the prevalence of these records is also concerning. She said even if the outcome of the court proceedings is favorable for both parties, it still goes on a permanent record.

"We just don't think tenants should be denied access or have a stigma for fighting for their rights, because what we've also found is that eviction records are created the minute a landlord files a case in court," she said. "At that moment you are a defendant and that's what's available to the public. Now, you may have actually worked it out with the landlord. A lot of tenants think they actually have by signing an agreement for judgment that they will not have a record, that is not true."

Edwards will be hosting a hearing in the coming weeks to try to seal the records or come to another solution.

The council also voted to accept and expend two grants awarded by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, passed through the Massachusetts Executive Office of Elder Affairs through the city's Elderly Commission. The first was $214,000 for the Title III-Ombudsman 2019 for volunteer training.

District 6 City Councilor Matt O'Malley said the grant will help fund services and advocacy around seniors and nursing homes.

"This grant is received by the commission every year, which then is put out to bid and the winning vendor runs the program, which recruits and trains volunteers who provide support for senior citizens living in nursing homes," he said. "The City's longstanding vendor for this program has been Ethos, an incredible multi-service agency in my district, which is one of the few certified to run the program."

The council also voted to accept and expend $124,263.36 for the 2019 State Elder Lunch Program, also from the Massachusetts Executive Office of Elder Affairs.

"The grant will fund meals for seniors in Boston, both through home delivery as well as 47 congregate meal sites, which I would encourage you all to visit these sites if you haven't already," O'Malley said. "They're really wonderful gathering spots, meeting places, they've really gone on to focus on cultural competency and have different foods. It's a great event."

O'Malley said residents over 60 can get a meal for free with the suggested donation of $2. For more information on these sites, call 617-635-4366 for a full list or go to boston.gov/departments/age-strong-commission/food-resources-older-people area, 110 of them home ownership units, 375,000 square feet of office space, 117,000 square feet of retail (including the new Stop and Shop) one acre of community greenspace, and 1.5 acres of public realm improvements.

The project would redesign the Guest Street and Everett Street intersection, adding traffic signals and improving the safety of the area. The project would also include millions in linkage fees to the City of Boston, but since those funds could not be outright dedicated to Allston, the developers, represented by John Twohigand and Mike Barelli from New England Development, proposed a $4.2 million neighborhood trust fund dedicated to local organizations.

Barelli said during the presentation that 17 percent of the housing in the complex, 152 units, will be designated as affordable as per the city's Inclusionary Development Policy (IDP) standards, above the 13 percent the IDP requires. Resident Chris Arena and others advocated for a full 20 percent, which he said he felt the city would soon require anyway.

"We need affordable housing in that area, that is the biggest interest," he said. "In that facility you added more parking and less housing which completely blows my mind, especially when you're right next to a Commuter Rail station."

Barelli pointed out that they are also including the largest single homeownership increase in units in the neighborhood in recent memory.

"We have committed to it and to a commitment of deed restriction to two thirds of those units to require they be owner occupied," he said. "I think one year will be the minimum lease term for these condo units."

Twohig said they have not yet filed an expanded Project Notification Form, the next step in the formal Boston Planning and Development Agency Process, so they can garner community support for the project. He said nothing is set in stone and changes can be made in the future.

In other news, development representative Ed Champy, architect Linda Neshamkin and owner Felix Shneur presented their plan to turn the Metro Cab building at 120 Braintree St. into 32 condo units with a small commercial space.

"Felix has been in the neighborhood for 17 years and has owned Metro Cab for eight years," Champy said. Uber and Lyft have recently taken over, and the cab business started to decline so he's looking for other opportunities. We did talk to a few people in the neighborhood and we decided that a condo play would be the better play than a rental play."

Champy said the complex will have 13 percent IDP units, which residents asked to up as much as they could. Residents also asked for fewer parking spaces than the one-to-one ratio of spaces proposed in the plan through a car lift system.

"There are many young people in the neighborhood who are not car owners and who are looking for more affordable housing," one resident said. "More parking incurs more demand for cars and divests from public transit. Could you go from one-to-one to one-to-half?"

Champy was a little shocked. "So less parking?" he asked. "We're perfectly comfortable for changing the parking... I feel like it was only yesterday people were asking me to reduce to one-to-one parking."

Neshamkin said the building will have two duplexes, 15 two-bedrooms, seven one-bedrooms with a den and eight conventional one-bedrooms.

"Our intent is to do owner-occupied and we will try to do deed-restricted units," she said.

Champy said they will be seeking variances from the Zoning Code on height restrictions, usable open space, minimum lot size and excessive floor-to-area ratio.

through side streets (such as Montview, Richwood, and Mt. Vernon Streets), drastically changing the peaceful nature of the neighborhood.

I believe that the best solution to the pedestrian safety problem is to install “on-demand” traffic lights at all crosswalks that do not have cyclical traffic lights. On-demand lights go red immediately upon a pedestrian pressing the button. Requiring cars to stop for on-demand lights is simply tantamount to enforcing the existing law that cars stop for pedestrians in the crosswalk, and will avoid the need to change Centre Street from its current traffic configuration.

As to the need for a better bicycle route on Centre Street, I feel that such a change – however well-intentioned and desirable under ideal circumstances – is not practical. Centre Street is simply not wide enough to accommodate a bicycle pathway given the current traffic throughput and need for the parking upon which businesses rely. As a bicycle commuter myself, I can attest that the side roads offer ample, relatively safe passage to those bicycles.

BENEFITS OF T EXTEND BEYOND RIDERSHIP

To the Editor:

Were all things equal, I would agree with your June 20th’s, “No Free Ride,” editorial.

I think MBTA riders, the vast majority wage workers or employees in some fashion, would be more than happy to, “shoulder the burden through fare increases,” if they weren’t so tightly bridled economically. Employers have the better end of the stick. Employers and society benefit much more from their labor force trudging to work by T than what what is reciprocated in wages and wage growth. And, I think it’s not morally sound to say that just because one doesn’t ride the T doesn’t mean they aren’t benefitting from the T. You can’t profit or create wealth in a vacuum. Value is added to society by the T. I don’t know what the solution is but, there is a connection between morality and taxes.

STOP THE NOISE IN HYDE PARK

To the Editor:

The city ordinance (16.26.1) on “Unreasonable Noise” begins: “No person shall make or cause to be made any unreasonable or excessive noise in the city, by whatever means or from whatever means or from whatever source.” The Boston Police can fine people who put loudspeakers in their yards and force people to leave their homes in order to keep their sanity. But, they don’t. It’s not a PRIORITY. The Ordinance goes on to state: “Unreasonable or excessive noise shall mean....any noise plainly audible at a distance of three hundred (300) feet or, in the case of loud amplification devices or similar equipment, noise plainly audible at a distance of one hundred (100) feet from its source by a person of normal hearing.” Clearly, without this rule, the city would be uninhabitable.

The main culprits are the ones turning Ross Field, a public facility, into a private party central. Then there are the cars that have been transformed into mobile sound systems, such as the one I saw near the Reddy Avenue entrance to Ross Field on 10-3-18 at approx. 1:17PM. It was parked where the old clubhouse used to be. Remember that? Players could change and take a shower there. I can still hear the sound of their cleats on the long cement stairs and asphalt track as they made their way to the main diamond to play Pop Warner baseball. The gold colored sedan had all four doors open and was blasting music that could be heard at Safford Street, blocks away. 911 was called. A police box truck responded at approx. 2:08PM and drove to the people who were outside the sedan. The cops never got out of their vehicle and then left the area. Maybe one or more of the partiers had active warrants, no insurance, expired license, guns. The cops just did not care. Maybe they had been told not to bother by someone up the chain of command, by someone who does not live in Hyde Park. No interrogation. No fine. Nothing!

On 9-22-18 at approx. 7:10PM I arrived home with music blasting next door. I observed a Police SUV parked across the street from the party. I thought that someone had called 911 about the noise. A little later I looked outside and saw that the cruiser had been moved in front of my house. I went outside to talk to the cop. Just prior to this I called 911. There was no one in the cruiser! The cop had joined the party! Hello! He must have heard the call on his radio, because shortly thereafter he took off. 911 had to be called again at approx. 8:05PM. No fine. Nothing.

I could fill a book with dates, times and sometimes incredible descriptions of events in the Ross Field area. Sgt. Macdonald can make suggestions and talk about fines, but nothing will be done. Nothing will be done until we get police who are willing to put in the work and show concern about more than getting off the clock and out to the next detail. NOTHING WILL BE DONE UNTIL THE PERSON IN CHARGE OF E-18 ORDERS THAT FINES BE ISSUED. Not warnings, FINES!

Nothing will be done until the Mayor’s Office gets involved. The problem is that this issue is not a priority for Walsh because he is too busy fattening up developers and the members of the Building Trades Unions like the group he ran: The Laborers Union of North America. This is one of those unions like the Teamsters, the Carpenters and AFSCME among others that have faced a host of legal problems over the years. In the process he is creating a noisy (more people, more noise), super dense, unbearable, bottle-necked environment that is being built supposedly in the interest of that fraud of frauds: Affordable Housing. Like the skyscrapers for billionaires downtown. The issue is not housing Martin, it’s RENT! And you will never build enough housing to reduce rents. NEVER! The town is just not big enough.

So I urge people to call 911 for noise. Fight for your quality of life! 911 will ask the nature of your emergency. Just say: “a loud party”. They will prioritize your call especially on Friday and Saturday nights when the lowlifes want to play all night all over. Wait a half hour and then call again and again and AGAIN! Remember, you are not alone.

A PICTURE TELLS A THOUSAND WORDS

To the Editor:

What to me is wrong with contemporary society was perfectly reflected in the picture of Boston’s valedictorians on Page 11 of the June 19 Bulletin: All the corporations and politicians brag of their importance, but the valedictorians themselves aren’t worthy enough to be named.

*David A. Mittell, Jr

FULLY SUPPORTS PROPOSED WEST ROXBURY CHANGES

To the Editor:

I love West Roxbury. It has great parks, great restaurants, a fantastic sense of community, and is an excellent place to raise a family. West Roxbury deserves a business district that fully matches the character of the neighborhood: a place where our neighbors, young and old, can gather, shop, dine, and go for a walk with their children and grandchildren, without fearing for their lives while moving from one side of the street to the other. We deserve a business district that prioritizes people, not cars. I fully support the changes to Centre Street proposed by the Boston Transportation Department at the June 20th meeting. It was great to see that the changes would mean massive improvements to walkability and safety in the business district, while having almost no negative impact on commute times and parking. We have the chance to help the business district reach its full potential: let’s not pass it up!

*Evan Judd

SUPPORT MAKING CENTRE STREET SAFER

To the Editor:

On June 20 I attended a meeting hosted by Boston Transportation Department regarding improvements to Centre Street in West Roxbury. I was impressed with the presentation’s quality and professionalism. I fully support BTD’s approach to making Centre Street a safer and welcoming place for pedestrians, cyclists and all users of a very important center of our community.

The proposed plan creates protected bicycle lanes and enhanced sidewalks. Based on traffic engineering studies, reducing the number of travel lanes from two in each direction to one in each direction with dedicated turning lanes, has a minimum impact on the volume of through traffic during rush hour. Rush hour only occurs during a short period of time in the morning and in the early evening. Also, since most stores, banks, and other businesses and services are not open during the morning commute, the so called “minimum impact” occurs for a relatively short period of time on just five of seven days a week. This seems like a very small price to pay for the many benefits these improvements will provide.

Since it is anticipated that the vehicular control measures may have an impact, albeit minimum, it is important to study potential impacts on residential side streets in the area. I have been to cities and towns in the area where rush hour traffic is controlled with oneway streets and street closures during key time periods. It is very important to study the potential impacts and propose mitigating solutions.

Lane reduction on Centre St is critical to a safer and more equitable Main St. that increases economic opportunities for businesses and improves the quality of life for residents and shoppers. I fully support the BTD plan for Centre Street.

TIME TO MOVE ROXBURY PREP FORWARD

To the Editor:

As a West Roxbury resident, Roxbury Prep alumnus, and current staff member, I am eager for Roxbury Prep’s high school facility project to move forward. Roxbury Prep has been patiently committed to accommodating and address community concerns through a longer than usual approval process. Across my experiences with Roxbury Prep, one consistent quality that I have found is the school’s willingness to work with local communities and neighbors in addressing challenges. You can find examples of this across all four of our schools. Roxbury Prep has been flexible and it is time to move this process forward.

At this point, we know that 85.5% of public comments submitted to the BPDA during the public comment period were in favor of the project. Many of the public comments by those opposed discuss traffic and congestion, which the school has addressed time and time again through the project process and 90% of our high school student body takes public transportation to school. Others are convinced we can move into the West Roxbury Complex, which Roxbury Prep has been told is not a viable option. The site at 361 Belgrade is already zoned for a school and is the best available option for us. This project deserves its due process having met all the requirements laid out by the BPDA. Elected officials should know that our community will not give up until our high school has one, permanent home.

Considering Roxbury Prep’s history in catering to the needs of its communities, I believe the school can be trusted to craft the kinds of operational policies that will best serve the greater Roslindale and West Roxbury communities. Over the last twenty years, I’ve seen Roxbury Prep partner with the people of Boston, always doing their due diligence to accommodate as necessary, and this project will not be an exception.

EDITOR IS OUT OF TOUCH... WITH EVERYTHING

To the Editor:

The 20th century mindset of the Bulletin editorial “No Free Ride” keeps showing how far out of touch the Editor is. The Boston area economy is built on the skeleton of a public transportation system; unfortunately, the skeleton has severe arthritis and the growth of population and a strong economy are breaking it down. It is nearly impossible to imagine the level of congestion and economic loss that would occur without this system but we can envision how much more robust the economy and stressless life would be in greater Boston if we had a modern, expansive and well functioning system. There are many examples of this such as Montreal, which is equivalent to Boston, and the Netherlands, which is equivalent to Massachusetts. Both have exemplar public transport systems, little congestion, high life quality, and thriving economies. Fare revenues never account for much of the cost of a system; most of the money must come from general or targeted taxes as Councilor Wu proposes. Just as road construction and maintenance are similarly funded. The economic benefits of a well functioning public transportation system rebound to all regardless of where they live. Shared benefits require shared costs. It’s past time for you to shed your out of date thinking.

*Hyde Park Bulletin, 06/27/2019*Mayor Walsh
Signs Home
Rule Petition
Establishing A Fire Cadet
Program

Mayor Martin J. Walsh today announced he signed a Home Rule Petition to establish a cadet program at the Boston Fire Department (BFD) and provide a stable pipeline of diverse young people for future firefighter classes. As part of his legislative agenda, Mayor Walsh filed the proposal as a Home Rule Petition in January 2019, and it was recently approved by the Boston City Council, and now moves to the Massachusetts Legislature for final approval.

The Massachusetts Legislature must approve the City's ability to create a cadet program, which they did for the Boston Police Department (BPD) in 1979. Since Mayor Walsh reinstated the BPD cadet program in 2016, there have been two classes that have embodied the diversity of our city. In both classes, more than 60 percent of the cadets have been people of color and more than 30 percent have been women. Aspiring cadets have also represented Boston's linguistic diversity, collectively speaking Spanish, Haitian Creole, Vietnamese, Cantonese and Cape Verdean Creole, among others.

BFD's newest recruit class of 53 was sworn in last week, marking the most diverse class since 2003. Of the 53 new firefighters, 20 are people of color, including seven Asians, seven Latinos, and six African Americans. At the same time, the class consisted of 52 males and one female (BFD's first Asian American female firefighter), reinforcing the need to further diversify recruitment efforts. BFD has twice applied to the state for a Selective Certification List to include a targeted number of female firefighters in new recruit classes; both of these requests were denied, most recently as October 2018.

While the City needs State law to be changed to begin the program, Mayor Walsh's FY20 budget includes $175,000 for a fire cadet class. Mayor Walsh has prioritized outfitting the Boston Fire Department for the 21st century and has committed more than $92 million in his FY20-FY24 Capital Budget for infrastructure improvements. The Boston Fire Department will soon rebuild two fire stations, and has received 40 new fire trucks, replacing 50 percent of its entire fleet in the past four years alone. In addition to infrastructure investments, BFD leadership has undergone extensive workplace training every year, including 30,000 hours total in training which includes anti-harassment, discrimination and respectful workplace training in the last year alone, an over 300 percent increase in training hours compared to four years ago.
