The Jamaica Plain Progressives Group held a candidates forum for the upcoming preliminary election on Sept. 12 for the District 6 City Councilor Seat.

On the ballot this year is incumbent Kendra Lara facing off against challengers William King and Benjamin Weber. The forum was moderated by former Bay State Banner Editor Yawu Miller and WGBH City Hall Correspondent Saraya Wintersmith.

Weber and King expressed their reasons for running during their opening statements. Weber said his career as a workers' rights attorney for 18 years provides an excellent foundation for the position.

"My wife Sandy and I have lived in Jamaica Plain for the last 15 years," he said. "As an attorney, I often fought for justice for workers who didn't have a voice. I spent two years representing migrant farm workers in the south, four years working the Massachusetts Attorney General's Office for Martha Coakley, and I spent the last 11 years working with Shannon Liss-Riordon representing low-wage workers all across the country."

Weber said he was also part of a lawsuit against the Boston Police Department for discriminatory promotion practices. He wants to run for the council in part because of his family's experience with the Boston Public Schools (BPS) system. Both his children attended the Mission Hill K-8, a school among others closed under recent policies, and said the school did not provide education at the level it should have and did not provide necessary services to the children attending.

He said public funds should stay with public schools and wants to keep BPS accountable.

"To make sure every student has the resources and qualified teachers they need," he said.

King said he is a lifelong Boston resident and a BPS graduate and first got involved

Group formed to protest Shattuck development

An ad hoc group calling itself CORE, "Coalition for Region-wide Services Beyond Franklin Park" – has emerged to oppose the development plans of the Shattuck hospital grounds.

The group held what it advertised as an emergency meeting on Aug. 2, two weeks after the development plans were first described at a virtual meeting by the consortium led by The Boston Medical Center (BMC).

CORE described itself in its July 26 press release as a "diverse coalition of over 30 neighborhood and community organizations."

Signed by Louis Elisa and Rory Coffey, the press statement said, "We are unhappy with the July 20 BMC webinar."

"[We] decided to host our own community meeting to allow residents a chance to freely speak up."

The press release also included a statement from Renee Stacey Welch, an Egleston Square resident:

"The coalition of more than 30 neighborhood organizations may be one of the most diverse gatherings.... we've seen in a long time. I'm proud to stand with my neighbors from JP, Roxbury, Dorchester

The Massachusetts Department of Transportation (MassDOT) met in a hybrid format and discussed the most recent changes to the Allston I-90 Multi-Modal construction project.

The project is aimed at taking the now defunct CSX Rail Yard and repurposing the area to improve transportation – both for I-90 and the nearby rail corridor – and to make infrastructure improvements to the surrounding neighborhood.

The I-90 and rail corridor improvements would include realigning the highway, realigning the rail corridor, installing a commuter rail station and bus hub, giving express rail rights of way for certain trains and creating more space for Allston in the process.

The meeting focused on several aspects, but mainly on early in public service working at BPS.

“Now I’ve decided to run because I love this city; this city raised my wife and I and now I want to give back,” he said. “District 6 wants a councilor that is going to work for them. I will bring that new energy. Over the last two years not much has been getting done on the council. I will lead with integrity and responsibility. We are all in this fight together for a better Boston, but how you fight and what you deliver is what I will always be conscious of.”

Lara touted her record during her introductory statement, saying she has been able to secure $94 million in new investments for District 6, including $22 million for a new library in Egleston Square and $6 million for the City’s Youth Jobs Program Expansion. She said she also worked to help along the process by which the city’s Inclusionary Development Policy (IDP) was recently updated to require that now 20 percent of units in an applicable new development have income-restricted affordable units, up from 13 percent previously. She said she’s also fought to expand access to voting by re-instituting the ability for immigrants with legal status to vote in municipal elections, worked to reduce building carbon emissions and is working to create a civilian flagger program in the city.

The elephant in the room was Lara’s recent legal issues. In July, Lara allegedly crashed her car into a house in Jamaica Plain and was charged with driving without a license, driving an unregistered vehicle, an expired inspection sticker, child endangerment and several other charges.

Wintersmith asked, “The case has caused some portion of your constituents to question your judgment and whether you’re still fit to be the District 6 City Councilor. Do you believe you can still be effective on the City Council and how do you plan to gain back any possible lost trust of voters in this campaign?”

“I’m holding myself accountable, and right now that means engaging fully with the legal process that’s been outlined by the courts,” she said. “I am committed throughout this process to remaining transparent as everything develops, and I’m really happy to have any one-on-one or private conversations with constituents who want to hear from me directly as I’ve been doing for the last month.”

Lara said she’s aware that some residents might see giving her a vote as a tall order at this time.

“I know for a lot of folks, grace is a lot to ask for at this moment,” she said. “The seriousness of this matter is not lost on me at all. But my hope is that my worst moment won’t overshadow what are two years of a perfect progressive voting record on the City Council and policies that center on working people every single day.”

Wintersmith moved on to King, and questioned him about his apparent conservative leanings, as it was a Progressives forum. She said he’s fundraised with officials she called “the most conservative members of the council,” which she said included District 3 City Councilor Frank Baker and At-Large City Councilor Erin Murphy. She also said he did not fill out the JP Progressives Questionnaire and declined to attend the last JP Progressives Forum. She asked him how the group could be sure he would represent his progressive constituents.

“Especially those in Jamaica Plain who have had less exposure to you,” she said.

King said during a previous run for an At-Large seat on the council he had attended forums held by the Progressives and said he “shares progressive values.”

“I get support from all over the district,” he said. “Anyone I’ve had conversations with, whether or not I agree with their positions on things, I always have been clear on my positions, and they know that before they support me. I will definitely fight for the people of District 6. As a Black man, I understand the struggles of everyday people growing up in the city. We have to make sure we have affordable housing and make sure we’re not pricing hard working residents out of the city. We need to make sure we have high quality education, we have to make sure students are prepared to go to college.”

As far as the questionnaire, King said he would fill it out, “if I have the opportunity to do so. I don’t remember receiving it, but I’m all about transparency and letting the voters know what my candidacy is about.”

Wintersmith asked Weber why he has just recently gotten involved in local politics, joining the Jamaica Plain Neighborhood Council (JPNC) only three months ago. She asked him about his understanding of the disparate needs in the district and to confirm that he would not take legal cases while in office, staying focused on serving the city. Weber reiterated that the impact of the closing of Mission Hill K-8 was what made him first get involved politically, but said he’s been working within the community for 15 years, and his experience coaching youth soccer at JP Youth Soccer helped him see what is needed in the neighborhoods.

“My being in the community for 15 years, being a part of the Mission Hill School community and coaching kids in soccer, I think I’ve learned a lot about the needs of the community and the people in it,” he said. “I want to be able to use my skills to help people in my community. I’ve helped people all across the country to get the wages they were owed, and I think my skills working with people and in complex situations and finding common ground even with attorneys that I’ve been battling for a decade or more, I can use that on the City Council to get things done for the district.”

Also, Weber said he would “wind down his legal practice” and not take any new cases to be a full-time city councilor.

WRBPA D6 Candidates Forum on August 23

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

Fresh off the heels of the Jamaica Plain Progressives District 6 City Council candidates' forum, the West Roxbury Business and Professionals Association (WRBPA) is hosting its forum on Aug. 23 at the Corrib Pub in West Roxbury at 8 a.m.

Incumbent Kendra Lara will face off against challengers William King and Benjamin Weber in just a few short weeks.

The preliminary election is Sept. 12 and the general election is on Nov. 7. WRBPA President Jim Hennigan said originally they were going to do a forum closer to the election, but decided it was necessary sooner. The preliminary election takes place if a race has more than two candidates to reduce the count to two. Hennigan said because of Weber's relatively recent campaign, they had to get in gear earlier than expected.

"It's right around the corner," Hennigan said. "As soon as there were three candidates, when Ben Weber got into the fight – and he really did it on the last possible day – we chose the August date," he said. "Usually the WRBPA doesn't have a summer meeting, but this year we're having one."

He said the organization is hosting the forum alongside the Ward 20 Democratic Committee.

"And so I think we'll have a great showing of people," he said.

Usually an incumbent has a distinct advantage in that they are already working the job full-time and know pretty much what the day-to-day entails. However, Councilor Lara may have lost the incumbent edge after recently crashing her car into a Jamaica Plain house and is now facing charges of driving without a license, registration, inspection sticker and a booster seat for her son, among other charges, that could change the dynamic.

"There has been some controversy, which will be addressed I'm sure during this whole thing," Hennigan said. "Councilor Lara has had to explain, not only in other candidate forums but also in court, what happened in July, and that will be something that will be discussed. William King and Ben Weber are also both strong candidates too. William has been campaigning for several months now and Ben is very well spoken and

Let's try some TEAMWORK

Vote on Tues. Sept 12

From our schools, to housing, to safety on our streets, our communities have real challenges that need to be addressed – issues that impact our lives every day.

Unfortunately, our City Council has been dysfunctional. This has to stop.

For years I have coached my kids' youth soccer teams, and I teach my players the value and importance of teamwork. When we come together and find common ground, we can make this City a healthier, more equitable, and more affordable place to live. That is exactly what I want to achieve on the Boston City Council.

This election is too important to leave things to business as usual.

On September 12, I respectfully ask for your vote.

Thanks,

Ben Weber FOR BOSTON CITY COUNCIL, DISTRICT 6

PAYING THE CITY TO MEET AT OUR MUNICIPAL BUILDING?

To the Editor:

District 5 voters assembled at the Hyde Park Municipal Building on August 3 at 7 p.m. to meet and ask questions to our District 5 City Council candidates. The problem is the Hyde Park Neighborhood Association (HPNA) which organized the event was charged $ 468 to keep the building open to 8 p.m. to accommodate it. This money comes from the dues paid by taxpaying citizens. Does it make sense that citizens need to pay to hold a meeting at their primary public building? This upcoming election is unusually important with all the current publicity and the controversy surrounding the City Council. Additionally, the primary for the City Council is September 12... less than a month away.

The reason for the charge is the Municipal Building is on summer hours and was scheduled to close at 7 p.m. HPNA always holds its meetings there at 7 p.m. as most of our conscientious voting members and neighbors have jobs, child care and supper commitments. Keeping a meeting at 7 p.m. is the right thing to do and not a lot to ask of local government.

HPNA is the primary neighborhood group whose members freely devote many hours to make Hyde Park a great place to live. This evening's priority was to ask City Council candidates questions and to assess positions on very relevant issues. HPNA and its members were providing a much needed democratic forum for all residents of the entire District 5 area. If overtime is needed, the city should have a staffing alternative or some other kind of mechanism that supports voters using their community center for free for an important purpose such as this.

Will the city and/or the candidates please reimburse HPNA?

Weber announces candidacy

Drawing on his own experiences raising a family in Boston and protecting workers' rights in the courtroom for almost two decades, Ben Weber is running for the District 6 seat to represent West Roxbury, Jamaica Plain, and parts of Roslindale and Mission Hill on the Boston City Council.

"District 6 deserves a local government that delivers the first-rate constituent services our families need," Weber said. "I am running to bring the City Council's focus back to the issues that matter to our neighborhoods: truly high-quality BPS schools for all our kids, better youth sports and park facilities, housing affordability, fully funding public safety, and supporting workers to build Boston's middle class."

Weber and his wife Xan have lived in Jamaica Plain for 15 years, raising their son Noah, 16, and daughter Hannah, 11. Both children were students at the Mission Hill School, where Weber's family and their close-knit community of MHS families suffered the turmoil of last year's alarming report and sudden closure. Noah is now at Boston Arts Academy and Hannah at the Curley School, but the experience showed Weber the need to ensure BPS keeps track of every student's academic progress, makes decisions that are in the best interests of all of its students, and raises every school option to world-class. Weber, whose mother was a special education teacher in New York City for 30 years, said "I'm committed to Boston Public Schools, so I'm running to make sure that we learn from the Mission Hill School situation to guarantee every BPS student an excellent education."

Weber has devoted his legal career to protecting workers from wage theft and other forms of corporate greed. He represented migrant cotton workers in the Mississippi Delta, learning Spanish to better communicate with his immigrant clients, then moved to Boston in 2008 to join the Massachusetts Attorney General's Office. As Of Counsel at the law firm Lichten & Liss-Riordan, Weber has advocated on behalf of hospital workers, firefighters, police officers, wait staff, and delivery drivers. As a Councilor, he will lead the fight through city ordinances and political advocacy to strengthen the rights of Boston's workers and expand their opportunities.

A college athlete himself at Brandeis University, Weber believes in the value of youth sports. He has served as a coach to Hannah and Noah's teams in both Parkway Soccer and Jamaica Plain Youth Soccer, and has seen firsthand Boston's great need for improved athletic facilities. Weber strongly supports capital investments such as the proposed renovation of White Stadium to finally provide BPS track and field athletes with the updated facilities they deserve. Weber is also a member of the Jamaica Plain Neighborhood Council, where he is dedicated to working together to achieve affordable housing solutions that preserve diverse neighborhood character and tackle the housing crisis burdening so many of Boston's working families.

Since opening his campaign account just earlier last month, Weber has raised over $20,000 so far. His campaign has been endorsed by IBEW local 103 and Iron Workers Local 7.

Weber is running for the seat currently occupied by Councilor Kendra Lara. The preliminary election will be held on Tuesday, September 12. For more on Weber's campaign and to get involved with his campaign, visit: www.weberforboston.com or follow him on social media: @ben4district6

CITY of BOSTON

Affordable housing grants announced

Mayor Michelle Wu and the Mayor's Office of Housing (MOH) announced the launch of a grant program aimed at supporting deep green energy retrofits (GERs) and decarbonization efforts in existing affordable housing buildings.

Mayor Wu initially announced her intention to launch this program in March. The City now has established funding for energy assessments for income-restricted residential buildings, which is the first step in facilitating significant reductions in energy consumption and carbon emissions. This initiative, supported through ARPA (American Rescue Plan Act) funding, aligns with the City of Boston's commitment to the Building Emissions Reduction and Disclosure Ordinance (BERDO), which sets requirements for large buildings to reduce their greenhouse gas emissions gradually to net zero by 2050. Through this grant program, the City is seeking to further the Mayor's Green New Deal by creating cleaner affordable housing units to enhance the climate, livability and justice of Boston's communities.

"Creating clean homes and improving the health of our communities must be at the center of our climate action," said Mayor Michelle Wu. "I'm grateful to the Mayor's Office of Housing for their leadership in our Green New Deal efforts to make Boston's buildings greener and more energy efficient."

"By supporting comprehensive energy assessments, we are

RRRd hosts block party to engage neighborhood

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Ruskindale Rosebery Road Neighborhood Association (RRRd) met for an informal block party this past Saturday to enjoy some catered food, listen to some music and organize with neighbors and elected officials.

Several city officials and elected representatives came out and RRRd Co-Chair Lokita Jackson said it was a great time and that they managed to discuss a good number of items.

“Everyone was very engaged; we talked with City Councilors and the fire department,” she said. “It was great to have those officials there as well as the police to read out the police report.”

Jackson said transportation and safety were major issues for the neighborhood.

“We’re now going to be having meetings with the Boston Transportation Department (BTD) leadership, District 5 City Councilor Ricardo Arroyo and At-Large City Councilor Ruthzee Louijeune, as well as the surrounding community,” she said. “So that includes RRRd, the East River Street Neighborhood Association and the Belnel Family Neighborhood Association. We’re going to have a community-wide conversation around what we want to see regarding safety and we want the BTD and the councilors to work with us.”

Safety became an acute topic after the tragic July hit-and-run collision involving four-year-old Ivan Pierre. Olguens Joseph was arrested and charged for the incident.

“With the recent death of Ivan Pierre on Wood Avenue and other incidents in the neighborhood, and people constantly disobeying the stop signs, we have a big problem” she said. “I’m sure they think this is a slow and sleepy kind of neighborhood and they just go flying through the street. It’s, unfortunately, accidents waiting to happen.”

Jackson said they just want to make the neighborhood safe.

“That’s what it’s all about, make the neighborhood safe both for those who live here and Residents gathered to have some good food and work on issues facing both the Ruskindale Rosebery neighborhood and Hyde Park at large.

those coming through,” she said.

Resident and member Larry Byrd said he wants to help, and he’s in favor of one plan to make Ruskindale Road a one-way during certain peak traffic hours.

“There’s speeding, and you got cars on both sides of the road trying to get down, and you just can’t squeeze through a lot of times you know?” he said. “They’re all commuters, and we don’t want to knock the businesses out there, but we got kids around here. My kids are grown, but I’m looking out for other people’s kids. I just don’t want the same thing to happen as what happened on Wood Avenue.”

RRRd Treasurer Milda Pitter said she’s been a member of the group for about 25 years now.

“That’s why I’m here, to support the neighborhood, as usual,” she said. “It’s important because we need to love each other and look out for each other and support each other. And we need to work together to make a better neighborhood, and that’s what we’ve tried to do all these years.”

A resident who went by the name Shelly said she really thought the party was helpful.

“I wish there was a bouncy house for the kids but you know it’s definitely good,” she said.

Jackson said this was the first time they had done such a block party, but added that she definitely wants to make it an annual event.

“Years ago, when the former co-chair Valerie Almeida was here, there was a kind of yard sale and bazaar, but this was the first time we’ve done this,” she said. “But we still got to work hard and really engage more neighbors not currently engaged.”

and Mattapan to make clear this is not a NIMBY issue," Welch said.

As reported by The Bulletin on Aug. 3, the BMC plan includes a campus of three, six-story buildings; a clinical and outpatient services building, a supportive housing building of 200 apartments, and a family supportive housing building with 205 apartments.

The Aug. 2 meeting was held at the Brooke Charter School auditorium, ran for 2.5 hours and was moderated by Diane Wilkerson and was both in person and on Zoom; about 100 people were in the auditorium and Wilkerson said over 100 more were online.

"Here's what everyone agrees on," Wilkerson said. "This [plan] is a bad idea. We can unify around that, unity that defies race. Take advantage of that opportunity."

The format of the hybrid meeting was testimony from the in-person audience, including three city councilors and two council candidates.

Coffey, who lives on Forest Hills Street, gave the introduction. He said the hospital was "built in 1949 for polio patients." "Since 2022 there has been a dramatic increase in drug use at the Williams Street entrance to Franklin Park," he said. "This is a direct connection to the [supportive formerly homeless] cottages put on the campus [in Dec. 2021]."

Summing up the redevelopment plan by the BMC for 405 housing units, Coffey said, "We're against very high density. It's not good for recovery. It's not good for us. Treat it like a disease. It can spread."

Another CORE leader, Louis Elisa, who lives on Seaver Street stood up to speak.

"This is a scam," he said, "It has nothing to do with healthcare. Some genius from BMC is clustering 800 people in one place.

"We don't want a concentration camp in the Shattuck," Elisa said.

Wilkerson asked elected officials to come to the microphone "and state a position: This is bad idea. This is good idea," she said.

District 6 City Councilor Kendra Lara came up first.

"Boston's Black and Brown communities are being asked to saddle a regional problem," she said. "The Shattuck is a good place to use, but 800 beds is excessive in an environmental justice community."

Wilkerson posed a question. "If the state thinks that a public park makes sense for all these beds then the Boston Common makes more sense. It's in the center of the city."

Caliga, who lives on Burnett Street, said she was a nurse for 45 years and predicted "the failure rate will be astronomical." "More is coming," she said. "They're moving Mass and Cass into our community."

A speaker named Marie took the microphone and said she was formerly homeless at the Shattuck.

"I lived in unit three in one of the cottages," she said "It was a disaster. It was frightening."

Derrick Evans took the floor and said the BMC plan is "a horrible idea. It will bring in a community of users. But this has accomplished something I thought would not happen. It's brought together a diverse community," he said.

City councilors Tania Fernandes Anderson and Julia Mejia both testified.

"Where do I stand?" Mejia asked. "We have to slow things down. Stop, Pause."

Bob Biggio, director of sustainability and real estate at BMC, apparently sat through the entire meeting but Wilkerson did not introduce him until almost the end.

"I do appreciate you coming here and staying for the entire meeting," Wilkerson said, "when you could have just signed in."

Biggio took the microphone. "This is truly the start of the process," he said. "We don't intend to overwhelm the community. We will meet with the community and see how we can adjust and make changes to the plan."

"Let's schedule a meeting right now," Wilkerson said. "You want to meet with us. Let's schedule."

The meeting closed out with Renee Stacey Welch asking people to sign the petition which wants the state to revise the Shattuck plan.

"We're trying to get 2,000 names," she said. "We have to stop speaking in silence."

Speaking with The Bulletin the next day Coffey talked about next steps.

"We will likely be planning a second meeting soon," he said. "We are advocating for spreading the services out throughout the state in order to reduce the recovery concentration in Boston. The state has a lot of land not being used."

A second BMC consortium webinar on its Shattuck redevelopment plan was scheduled for Aug. 15, after The Bulletin's deadline.

Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine, splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in this necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my mother. Oh Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth, I humbly beseech thee from the bottom of my heart to succor me in my necessity (make request). There are none that can withstand your power. Oh Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (three times). Holy Mary, I place this cause in your hands (three times). Say this prayer for three consecutive days and then you must publish and it will be granted to you. —V.C.

Street sweeping, needles, and confusion

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

At-Large City Councilor Erin Murphy filed a hearing order at a recent regular meeting of the Boston City Council to discuss the dangers to residents and city employees of street sweeping in areas where used needles are being dropped and other contaminants are, reportedly, on the streets.

The hearing order mentions the Massachusetts Avenue/Melnea Cass Boulevard area (aka Mass and Cass) specifically, but Murphy said the issue is a problem all around the city.

“It has come to our attention that the City of Boston and our contractors are using the same street cleaning equipment in the South Hampton Street, Topeka Street and Atkinson Street areas that are in neighborhoods nearby in the South End, Back Bay, Beacon Hill and Downtown,” she said. “Recent reports show the runoff from catch basins at the Mass and Cass area has raised concerns in the community about public health and welfare due to the emergency at Mass and Cass.”

Murphy noted two recent releases from the Boston Public Health Commission (BPHC) regarding instances of sewer discharge into the harbor, which generally happens during heavy rain events such as those the city has experienced in the past few weeks.

“The Massachusetts Water Resource Authority (MWRA) grades for the water quality in the Fort Point Channel were an F and a D these past two years,” she said. “I’m looking forward to working with my colleagues and state officials to ensure that if there are ways to eliminate any health risks for any of our residents, that we need to make sure we’re doing everything possible for them.”

Murphy did not say during the council meeting how these two issues are related, however the hearing order itself stated that, because of the “hazardous and infectious substances that are prevalent in the area,” specialized cleaning equipment is needed and using the same equipment to clean up around Mass and Cass where used needles from presumed drug use are being found is unsafe.

District 1 City Councilor Gabriela Coletta said that while she thanked Murphy for, “Always centering the needs of folks at Mass and Cass,” the cleaning issue down there is being handled differently than for the rest of the city.

“I do just want to encourage my council colleagues to just proceed with caution when emphasizing a correlation versus a causation on any health matter for public consumption without the endorsement of public health experts, data or scientific backing,” she said. “The BPHC, when talking about relative risks, placed the spread of infectious diseases by Public Works vehicles as ‘low-to-negligible.’ There is a higher risk of infectious diseases spread from neighborhood to neighborhood through direct use of needles. They don’t diminish one for the other; however the overall harm to the public that is purported in this order is not one that should cause alarm to residents. The Fort Point Channel numbers, I’ve seen them and I reviewed what they were dating back to 2015. They’ve always been at an F or D level and that is something to monitor and something that the MWRA and City of Boston should be looking into.”

Coletta said Public Works has not send a street sweeper down Atkinson Street in several months.

“They’ve instead sent what they call a ‘flusher truck,’ that sprays a solvent or detergent, similar to what they spray around Sissy K’s, the Black Rose, or Faneuil Hall after horses are stationed there,” she said. “There is also a high pressure wash of any and all street sweeping apparatuses after every use.”

At-Large City Councilor Ruthzee Louijeune said she wanted to make sure when the council is talking about the use of equipment in some neighborhoods and the use of “special” equipment in others that councilors try not to create an “us versus them” mentality.

“Especially when we talk about Mass and Cass,” she said. “I think what is important to realize of course is the public health crisis, and we need to make sure that folks are getting all the attention they need and I look forward to the hearing to actually determine whether there needs to be separate equipment in Mass and Cass than in other neighborhoods.”

The day after the City Council meeting, Boston Mayor Michelle Wu’s Office released a statement detailing that the city had received permits to start rebuilding the Long Island Bridge and the Long Island Treatment facility. The hope is that reopening the facility will at least alleviate the pressure for services at Mass and Cass.

Residents wary of Baker St.
Market condo proposalJeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

About 35 residents attended a virtual abutters meeting with the city and the owner of the Baker Street Market and Deli at 419 Baker St. regarding a proposal to turn the one-story commercial entity into a four-story condo building.

Nicholas Zozula, a development attorney from McDermott, Quilty & Miller, represented the owner and developer of the proposal, Louis Dakoyannis.

Zozula said the proposal is for 14 condominium units with just under 1,200 square feet of commercial space on the ground floor, which is about a third of what's there now (the market and a nail salon). He said 12 of those units would be two-bedroom and two would be one-bedroom. The plan includes 23 parking spaces, 14 dedicated to residents and nine for commercial use.

Zozula said the building would be just under 20,000 gross square feet and has fewer than 15 units, so they are do not fall under the Boston Planning and Development Agency's (BPDA) Article 80 Review Process. The proposal will be presented at the West Roxbury Neighborhood Council on Aug. 22 at 7 p.m. at the District E-5 Station of the Boston Police Department at 1708 Centre St.

Zozula said the project was first presented back in 2020 as a rental property with an additional floor and and 10 more units. He said that at the time, residents had empowering building owners to make informed decisions and take meaningful steps towards a sustainable and healthier future," said Sheila Dillon, Chief of Housing. "This program aligns with our commitment to BERDO and reinforces our dedication to equity, affordability, and environmental stewardship. We are excited to partner with building owners and continue our efforts to create a more sustainable and healthy Boston."

As part of the support for deep energy retrofits and decarbonization efforts, building owners of affordable housing now have the opportunity to apply for grants of up to $10,000. These funds will be allocated towards comprehensive energy assessments, which will enable building owners to evaluate the current performance of their buildings and develop strategies to achieve substantial energy savings and carbon emission reductions. This initiative will also allow the City to gain more insight into the specific measures that can be taken to significantly reduce energy consumption and carbon emissions in affordable housing.

By completing these comprehensive energy assessments, building owners will not only contribute to a greener environment but also enhance the safety, comfort, and sustainability for residents. Moreover, these assessments can serve as a roadmap offering building-specific strategies to comply with BERDO while providing building owners with valuable guidance. Building owners who complete the assessments will be well-positioned to apply for additional funding from MOH and other sources to implement the identified GER measures.

The City anticipates that the comprehensive energy assessments can be scoped, completed, and with funds disbursed within 3-6 months of the grant award. After a thorough evaluation process, including eligibility confirmation under ARPA guidelines and suitability assessment, MOH received a total of 20 applications representing 56 buildings and 2,078 units across the city. After review, the Office of Housing will be awarding grants to all 20 applicants. The exact amount of funds to be disbursed will be determined based on the approved scopes of work. The Office of Housing will continue to accept applications on a rolling basis. To apply, please visit this link.

It is important to note that while not all the buildings represented are 100% affordable, MOH's grant funds will be proportionally allocated to each comprehensive energy assessment based on the number of eligible affordable units (affordable to households at or below 100% of the Area Median Income).

The City is embedding the Green New Deal throughout City initiatives, making healthier and cleaner communities for all of our residents. In July, Mayor Wu signed an Executive Order (EO) Eliminating the Use of Fossil Fuels in New Construction and Major Renovations of City Buildings. While the EO exempts projects already in procurement, design, or construction, it requires all new municipal buildings and major renovations to operate without fossil fuel usage.

action items. Tetra Tech Project Manager Jim Keller said these are items that could get done first, which would mean they would be completed much earlier than the bulk of the project, which currently has a six-to-10-year construction schedule.

These potential early action items include changes to Cambridge Street and the rehabilitation of the Franklin Street Pedestrian Bridge. But Keller and the project team said several other items considered for early action were put on hold for being cost prohibitive, and those included the complete replacement of the Franklin Street Pedestrian Bridge, the construction of the Paul Dudley White Path under the Grand Junction Rail Bridge, the Agganis Way Connection to the Charles River and noise barriers at the Beacon Park Yard.

Regarding the full Franklin Street Pedestrian Bridge replacement, a discussion on the process and how MassDOT and the project team have been meeting with the public came up. There was confusion when the discussion turned to a proposed noise barrier on Lincoln Street. At first, the project team said it was feasible for an early action plan item which residents seemed to approve. Then, the team said they were unsure and could not answer at this time. This did not go over well with residents.

“We have a lot of development taking place; we have some serious traffic calming efforts we’re trying to implement on Lincoln Street and, indirectly, the exposure of the Mass Pike along that stretch is encouraging people to go awfully fast, like their counterparts on the pike, and so we think some solution in that stretch would be a noise barrier,” said Allston Civic Association President Tony D’Isidoro. “We have a lot of development going on, and we’re hearing a lot of concern about the noise being bounced around these new developments. It would render that space beautiful if people could sit at that stretch and just have a conversation with one another.”

The scope of work for the Cambridge Street Bridge in Allston over the Mass Pike.

D’Isidoro said he wanted to know if the barriers were coming early or not and why, either way. The Project Team apparently could not answer.

“That’s a fair question; we can bring that up at the next task force meeting,” said MassDOT Office Chief Susan Harrington.

A Better City’s Glen Berkowitz seemed nonplussed as to why the question could not be answered.

“Is it prohibitive?” he asked. “Yes or no? It’s a simple question.”

D’Isidoro said this was a symptom of a larger problem.

“This has been out there forever; it’s been promised to the people of Allston Brighton and there has been no progress,” D’Isidoro said. “And not to get territorial or anything, but there are a lot of people in a lot of rich communities that got their noise barriers. Isn’t that shocking? Isn’t that surprising? Allston has been getting screwed for years on this. The residents in this established community deserve a better solution. We had the Mass Pike cut through our community in the 60s and there’s still work to be done to mitigate the impacts of that, and this is a major component of that. I echo Glen’s thing, I don’t know what the big deal is.”

D’Isidoro also called for more design meetings and interaction with the public to get this project done.

“More interaction between the task force, the public, and the MassDOT team,” he said. “I think we’re spreading these things out too much and what we end up having when we have a meeting is a packed agenda and we don’t even have time to get into the details. We need to meet more often.”

The project team said this was to keep the project “competitive” for the numerous grants available to help fund it. While these items are not getting done in the first phases of the project, Keller said they may be tackled at a later date or as separate projects. They said the size of the project appears to be key, at least at the starting stage, and so they’ve trimmed down the initial scope of work to try to get more grant funding to lessen the burden on the state.

VHB Engineer Mark Shamon also discussed a change to the rehabilitation of the Cambridge Street Bridge (at the intersection of Linden Street, not the one over the overpass of I-90). He said this part of the project is being considered for an early action item. It’s not on the docket right now, but Shamon said rehabilitating the bridge now would likely make it easier for the rest of construction to take place, and therefore is somewhat likely to be picked.

“The scope of the Cambridge Street project is the bridge superstructure, a new deck – the deck currently is in very poor condition and something needs to be done with that,” he said. “You can see some sections are plated over, it’s spalling (pitting and flaking) in some areas, and if you look underneath there’s shielding there to prevent a lot of the concrete that falls off there from falling on the road, cars or passersby. And you can see some parts of the underside of the deck have significant corrosion with some joint leakage. Basically, the bridge is not getting any better over time and there is a need to do something fairly quickly.”

Shamon said the design for the rehabilitation is at 75 percent now, and currently includes a slight narrowing to accommodate bike lanes and is being prepped for the future Cambridge Street Bypass Road.

concerns about the height, the number of units and the fact that the units were rentals. He added that two of the units will be designated affordable under the city's Inclusionary Development Policy (IDP) and will have income restrictions and price controls placed on them.

The project will go before the Zoning Board of Appeals (ZBA) this fall or winter if there are no further changes, as this current design will likely need several zoning variances to proceed. Those variances include excessive building height (38 feet proposed, 35 allowed), insufficient side yard and rear yard, no loading area provided, traffic visibility across the corner is limited and the entrance does not face the street address.

Dakoyannis said he and his wife are at the dry cleaning business across the street from the proposed building – which he also owns – and would be happy to sit with residents and discuss their concerns over a cup of coffee..

Resident Andrew Porter said he was opposed because of the number of variances and felt there was not enough parking. Several residents agreed with him.

Residents also asked about the commercial space. Dakoyannis said the goal for this space would be for a similar convenience operation, with some sort of alcohol available for purchase.

"It will be hopefully beer and wine, what we have now," he said. "We're not changing anything we just want to make what's there better."

Resident Kelli McDermott said reducing the retail space was trying to be pitched as an argument that there would be fewer cars going to the shop.

"A smaller space does not guarantee less customers and parking," she wrote in the chat.

Zozula pointed out that in most cases residential use would have less traffic because residents are not coming and going dozens of times a day to and from their residences, while a business wants to see more people coming and going. Dakoyannis even floated the idea of some day turning all of his commercial enterprises into residential use.

Resident Jennifer Hegarty said she was opposed to the project. "This structure is too big for the lot and the neighborhood," she wrote in the chat. "There should be more accurate and realistic renderings that show how this will truly fit in with the current surrounding landscape."

Residents also asked about parking for the adjacent Baker Street Cleaners, which Dakoyannis also owns. He said there's no requirement that one business provide parking for the other.

"I do own both, but parking is street parking for Baker Street Cleaners, as it is for other retail stores in the area," he said. "That's a city thing; it's a retail area and there are retail spots on Durant Street and there are some on Baker Street that are retail spots."

Resident Tricia McMahan asked about condominium owners who opt to have more than one car at the site.

"Each unit would have a deeded parking space, and if one unit didn't want a parking space, one of the one-beds for instance, the condo association could work to lottery that to another unit that does have two cars," Zozula said. "Each unit would know coming in that if they bought a unit, they would only have one space. "I would think that if somebody's buying here and they know they only have one parking spot, if they had two cars, they would perhaps not want to buy here or make other arrangements, whether that be parking elsewhere or on-street parking what have you," he said.

McMahon said on street parking on Vermont Street is already "very tight" and parking would be an issue, in part because of the bus stop on the corner. Resident Nancy Cellucci said she felt that maybe making the nearby Durant Street a residential parking-only area could help with the parking concerns, since the dry cleaning crowd would then be limited to Baker Street.

Resident Arielle Segall said she was concerned about the meeting notification requirement only being 300 feet from the property. Office of Neighborhood Services West Roxbury Liaison Dan Hudson said that it is a radius the city uses for all such abutters meetings. He admitted that while 300 feet in a place like East Boston or the North End could be an entire neighborhood and have hundreds of residents, for a place like West Roxbury it's not a lot of people. He emphasized that no one was disinvited or barred from attending the meeting and the regular WRNC meeting next Tuesday is also open to the public.

I think they're all going to have a lot of issues to talk about."

Hennigan said they've hosted several forums before and he believes there shouldn't be any problems.

"We've done several different forums in the past few years, with the State Rep. seat up this year and we did one two years ago for the mayoral election," he said. "In the preliminary there were five mayoral candidates and so this one should be good too. It's a morning meeting but a lot of people plan on attending."

Hennigan said they are bringing in community members to direct questions to the candidates, including West Roxbury Safety Association founder Steve Morris, Bellevue Hill Neighborhood Association President Ginny Gass, the Highland Street Neighborhood Association, and others.

"We will have three or four people asking questions and there are three candidates, so it should be a busy hour or hour-and-a-half," he said.

Wu lays out Long Island plan

Mayor Michelle Wu recently announced that the City of Boston has secured its Chapter 91 License from the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection (MassDEP) to reconstruct the Long Island Bridge. With this long-awaited license in hand, the City has secured the most significant state approval required in its years-long efforts to rebuild the bridge and restore access to the 35-acre public health campus on Long Island. With $81 million already available in the FY24 capital budget for the bridge, Wu announced that the City would accelerate progress on construction immediately and set a goal that in four years the bridge would be rebuilt to a campus with a first phase of buildings ready to reopen for programming.

“With this major state approval in hand, our work to rebuild the Long Island Bridge and bring back this critical health care campus can truly begin,” said Wu. “This is a transformative opportunity to support families and meet the needs of individuals and communities across the region. We’re ready to move forward in partnership with health care, recovery, and housing providers, alongside our governmental and philanthropic partners, and the many community members who believe in the enormous potential of this unique resource to help meet our most urgent challenges.”

“We believe that the Long Island campus will be a first-of-its-kind resource that will provide a broad continuum of care and innovative programming for people living with substance use disorders and co-occurring mental health illness in Boston and throughout the Commonwealth,” said Dr. Bisola Ojikutu, Commissioner of Public Health for the City of Boston and Executive Director of the Boston Public Health Commission. “We look forward to continuing to work with our partners and the community to plan and build a campus that will promote health, well-being and recovery for all whom it will eventually serve.”

With receipt of the Chapter 91 License, known as a Draft License until the resolution of any administrative appeal, the City can now proceed to the final two reviews required for the Long Island Bridge project: a federal consistency review by the Mas-

Ford Lightning

Electric vehicles, you like them or have no use for them. I had the Ford Lightning for a week and made a couple of 100 mile trips. I did charge the battery every other night with a regular 110 outlet. This was a pre-production truck with all possible options. The truck looks like a regular F150, open the hood as we know it and there is a big empty space for storage—they call it a frunk. Power comes from a large battery located under the truck bed and there is an optional battery for longer range. The all wheel drive is a need for this super fast truck—without AWD the rear tires would spin like crazy at 1/2 throttle from a stop. It is very smooth and of course, quiet. The interior is amazing with a large multi-function touchscreen. The more you drive it, the more you learn about the truck. There is leather throughout, the front seats are heated and ventilated as well as have massage features. There are also many plug outlets for both 110 and 220 volts. Electric is not for everyone but, with that said, recharging time is faster as is longer driving range. The Lightning is not the truck to tow a large camper or boat any distance over 50 miles. Our test truck had a MSRP just under $100,000. Ford also just announced a large price drop on the Lightning. For my commute of less than a 100 miles a day, this Lightning works for me.

VACCARO

John F., August 11, 2023, 98, of Dedham, MA, passed away peacefully, at home, with his beloved wife of 72 years, Grace, at his side. He was surrounded by the love of family and close friends. John was the proud father of Karen Vatalaro and husband Vito of Brockton, Cheryl Galvin and husband Joseph of Canton, Janice Donovan and husband Christopher "Jimmy" of Sharon. Cherished grandfather of Robert, Alicia, Joseph, Matthew and Charlie. Adoring great-grandfather of Mia, Joseph, Jillian, Haley, Matthew, Theresa, CJ, Myles and Sophia. John leaves behind sisters, Elizabeth Cook of Westwood and Barbara Attaway of Dedham. He was the brother of the late Leo Vaccaro, Domenic Vaccaro and Rose Balmain. He was also survived by many nieces and nephews and lifelong friends who were chosen family. John was born July 1, 1925, in Dedham, MA, to Giuseppe and Philomena Vaccaro. From a very early age, John learned the value of helping family by devoting himself to a strong work ethic. He enlisted in the Navy and served in World War II. After returning from the war, John established himself back in the Dedham/Hyde Park area by meeting the love of his life, Grace. Once married, he began working at Marascio's Market in Hyde Park, where he ran a successful business for 60 years. He was known as "The Sausage King" and his business received great accolades in the community and was featured on Chronicle and the book, Sometimes They Sang With Us. His generosity extended far beyond the scope of his work, making sure those in need never went without groceries. Every child that walked in the store walked out with a free ice-cream, slush, lollipop or treat! John was also a proud member of the VFW, Bocce Club, American Legions, Sons of Italy and Italian American Club, where he served as President for many years. He also belonged to St. Anne's Church and devoted much of his time and financial support, helping with collections every Sunday morning. His greatest accomplishment was his family! He had a magnanimous personality that drew people in and kept relationships thriving. He leaves a legacy of love, laughter and long-lasting relationships! A Funeral Mass will be held at St. Anne's Church, 90 West Milton St., Hyde Park, at 10:30 am on Thursday, August 17th. Relatives and friends are kindly invited. Burial and Interment to follow at Fairview Cemetery, 45 Fairview Ave., Hyde Park, MA. Please, in lieu of flowers, all donations can be made to St. Jude Children's Research Hospital (www.stjude.org)

sachusetts Office of Coastal Zone Management (CZM) and a bridge permit from the United States Coast Guard. The Coast Guard has previously issued favorable preliminary determinations on the navigational and historic preservation elements of the City's bridge design.

With bridge permitting in its final stages, the City of Boston is now accelerating reconstruction of the bridge and the island's public health campus, more than 350,000 square feet spread across 11 buildings. The City's next step on bridge construction will be issuing a Request-for-Proposal (RFP) to contract for a bridge project management firm that will provide the City with the additional expertise and capacity to oversee the project. Once secured, the City will bid the construction project itself. The rebuilt bridge will be restored on top of the existing piers, which will be refurbished during construction. Designs are already completed.

In the recently-approved FY24 Budget, Mayor Wu allocated $38 million to repair and stabilize the existing buildings on the 35-acre public health campus. These improvements are expected to be bid later this year with construction, via barge, anticipated to start in the spring of 2024 and completed in 16-24 months. Efforts to prepare the buildings to host public health programs would follow, with services coming online after the bridge reopens.

As envisioned, a restored public health and recovery campus on Long Island would be a regional asset to respond to the intersecting crises of substance use disorder and mental health. Mayor Wu recently hosted a meeting with providers, many of whom had operated on Long Island prior to closure, to discuss plans to rebuild the bridge and begin a planning process for the campus. Mayor Wu has spoken with Bill and Joyce Cummings of the Cummings Foundation about the potential on Long Island who have indicated their support of the project.

Long Island is a sacred space for Native American and Indigenous people, and it is part of the Boston Harbor Islands Archaeological District, which is listed on the National Register of Historic Places. As more detailed plans for potential uses on Long Island are determined and developed, the City will prioritize outreach to, and engagement with, the first peoples of that land as well as environmental and other state regulators, including the Massachusetts Environmental Policy Act Office. The City is excited to explore how these relationships can help inform Mayor Wu's vision for recovery and supportive housing on Long Island.
