The BPDA Small Project Review for 50 Stedman Street, a three-story, twenty-one unit apartment house, was fraught with frustration in the back room of Doyle's on Oct. 29.

Mary Rigo, of 48 Brookley Road, was frustrated that the developers hadn't contacted her and, Jay Walsh, representing the Helm Investments, developers of the project, was frustrated that Rigo had not answered her door bell when he called on her several times.

Eva Kaniasty, who chaired the Stonybrook Neighborhood

Association subcommittee on 50 Stedman, was frustrated that support she had built for the project wasn't respected; Jennifer Uhrhane was frustrated that no shadow studies had been done.

Union Ave resident Fed Vetterlein was frustrated that there were too many meetings; Sean Morrissey and Michael Forde of Helm Investments were frustrated that after negotiating for eighteen months there will be more meetings.

Walsh said that 50 Stedman apartments represent a trend

The Allston Brighton Youth Hockey organization held its fourth annual Youth Hockey Jamboree on Saturday, Nov. 3 at the Reilly Memorial Rink.

The event is only the fourth Jamboree, but according to organizers, the game has been going on for more than a decade under different names to help raise funds for the program. Organizer, coach and aide to State Rep. Michael Moran, Craig Cashman said it's integral to keeping the program affordable for residents in the neighborhoods.

"It's going great, there were a couple of no-shows and a lot of people have things going on, but there's a lot of people who keep coming back to give back to the program. A lot of them grew up here or now live around here," he said. "It's awesome to see consistently year in year out people come

Election a good day for incumbents

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

This year's midterm election for 2018 saw some of the highest turnout in the country for such an election, with 114 million votes cast as of the date of publication. That's compared to 83 million in 2014.

For Massachusetts, more than 2.4 million people came out to vote and the ballots are still coming in as of publication. For the actual big elections, not much has changed on the political landscape. Elizabeth Warren is more than likely to keep her U.S. Senate Seat against Republican Geoff Diehl with 1.3 million votes against Diehl's 812,052 (60.8 percent to 35.8 percent) with 85 percent of precincts reporting with independent Shiva Ayyadurai coming in at 75,834 votes (3.3 percent).

In a showing of bipartisanship, more than 1.4 million voted (66.5 percent) for Massachusetts Gov. Charlie Baker with 85 percent of precincts reporting against Democratic Challenging Jay Gonzalez, who tallied 749,548 votes (33.5 percent).

West Roxbury's State Rep. Edward Coppinger and State Sen. Michael Rush both ran unopposed. Hyde Park's

State Rep. Angelo Scaccia and the State Sen. Sonia Chang-Diaz, who represents Dorchester, Jamaica Plain, Hyde Park, Mattapan, Mission Hill, Roslindale, Roxbury, and the South End also ran unopposed. State Rep. Nika Elugardo beat out Rep. Jeffrey Sanchez in the primary and ran unopposed to now represent Jamaica Plain.

For the Massachusetts State Senate, 29 democrats won their elections while Republicans won three, with each currently leading four other races currently too close to call.

Boston City Councilor Ayanna Pressley will be taking her seat as the first African American woman to represent Massachusetts in the U.S. House of Representatives. The only really close race for House race in Massachusetts was between Bill Keating, currently coming in with 60 percent of the vote and Peter Tedeschi, currently polling with 40.4 percent of the vote, with 86 precincts reporting.

Seth Moulton beat out Republican challenger Joseph Schneider easily with 65.3 percent of the vote versus Schneider's 31.4 percent with 77 percent of precincts reporting. Democrat Katherine Clarke beat out Republican John Hugo with 171,935 votes (75.3 percent) and Hugo's 56,471 votes (24.7 percent).

Democrat Lori Trahan won against both her Republican challenger Rick Green (33.9 percent of the vote) and her independent challenger Michael Mullen (4.6 percent of the vote) with 61.6 percent of the vote with 79 percent of precincts reporting. Richard Neal, Joe Kennedy, Ayanna Pressley and Stephen Lynch all ran uncontested.

Attorney General Maura Healey beat out her challenger James McMahon 70.3 percent to 29.7 percent with 86 percent of precincts reporting and 1.6 million votes. The voters also rejected the limit on nurse-to-patient ratios put forth by Ballot Question 1 in a surprising landslide with 1.5 million votes for no and 675,018 for yes. Question 2, the question to create a commission to look over Citizens United passed with 1.59 million votes against 632,996 votes and Question 3 for transgender equality won out in a yes vote with 1.54 million votes to 722,289 votes.

Secretary of State Bill Galvin, State Auditor Suzanne Bump and State Treasurer Deborah Goldberg all kept their seats in the election.

Editorial

IMPORTANT, BUT NO SURPRISES

To be perfectly honest, Massachusetts is a state that, especially in this year's mid-term elections, ignores that old adage about every vote counting. Aside from ballot initiatives, watching ice cubes melt offers up more suspense than watching Tuesday's vote totals roll in.

As expected, Gov. Charlie Baker was resoundingly re-elected. Other state posts went as expected to Democrats and incumbents.

Elizabeth Warren trounced underpowered challengers to retain her Senate seat. Beyond that race, the state's various federal posts had a shocking dearth of challengers daring to challenge incumbents. The most surprising upset, in fact, was not on election night at all. It was Ayanna Pressley beating popular incumbent Michael Capuano in the Democratic primary for his seat in the House of Representatives.

Don't get us wrong. We are blessed to live in a state that can resoundingly elect Baker, a moderate Republican, and Warren, an increasingly left-leaning progressive. Their common denominator isn't rhetoric, although Warren resorts to invective ever more often as she mulls a presidential run. Both officials excel when they do their jobs outside of the public eye.

Baker, one of the nation's most popular governors, exudes a quiet confidence. His job is to get "the job" done. He is hardly a perfect governor with an unimpeachable record. Case in point: the horror show that is the MBTA. In most instances, however, his instincts are sound, his work ethic is admirable and the results are measurable.

Let's also praise Baker's political instincts. He managed the tough trick of rejecting President Trump, while still being (in most instances) an in-state party stalwart.

What appeals most to voters may be his approach to the job. Even his distaste for Trump was never over-the-top. Baker walked the walk with his pledge of seeking bipartisan solutions, as well as talking the talk (as evidence by his gentle, sincere praise of challenger Jay Gonzalez).

"Here's the good news, [a] collaborative, purposeful and humble approach to governing is exactly what you're going to get from us and from our team for the next four years," Baker said, addressing a crowd at the Hynes Convention Center during his post-victory speech. He later spoke of fiscal discipline "a reform-minded approach to governing, and a commitment to bipartisanship to state government."

Those messages are why Baker won and why voters should be thankful that he did.

As for Warren, set aside her often divisive rhetoric and instead look at the work she has undertaken in the Senate. Many of those efforts are less politically charged than critics are willing to admit. She has forged bipartisan consensus and fought for veterans, quality healthcare and the financial security of middle class Americans.

A consistent theme: battling big banks and corporations that abusively grow their profits on the backs of common folk. Yes, her message can sometimes be Sanders-like in its liberal extremes, but they do have a necessary place in our national dialogue.

If this Tuesday's election revealed one weakness in our state's political system, it is that we still seem to have a hard time getting quality candidates to run. The surprising number of unchallenged Democrats means that, no matter how popular Baker may be, the local Republican Party still has plenty of work ahead if it seeks to be a ballast to an otherwise solidly "Blue" state. In the interest of democracy, we hope they can someday get their act together.

The Bulletin

Back in the 1950's when Ted Lepcio was playing for the Red Sox, most baseball players had to work in the offseason to augment their meager salaries. They worked as insurance salesmen and car salesman. (Ted Williams, earning an unheard of more than $100,000 annually, could enjoy fly-fishing in his offseason.)

Now professional players, regardless of their sport, draw such high salaries that they are not forced to work in the offseason. Their multi-million-dollar contracts are way beyond the average Bostonian's ability to comprehend.

Furthermore, a huge number of Bostonians are in awe of those making more than $100,000 annually—well below the pay scale for profession baseball, basketball, football, and hockey players. While the average cop, firefighter, and public school teacher make this as an average, the tens of thousands of urban residents earning below some sort of Mendoza line cannot aspire to ever reap this type of paycheck.

The ongoing lockout by National Grid, now extending beyond five months, could have a happy ending right away. It would be interesting to hear United Steelworkers Locals 12003 and 12012-04's side of the salary dispute.

National Grid currently has made an offer via a 5-year agreement of compounding increases totaling almost 15% that will elevate the current average employee salary to $120,000-$137,000 annually by 2022 (the salaries include an amount of overtime not specified). With no lay-offs coming to employees with five or more years of service, the offer also includes an 80% company contribution to premiums and an increase of pension benefits for current employees by 10% immediately.

There is also a newly defined 401(k) plan for new hires with a company contribution ranging from 3% to 9%. Furthermore, there will be increases in shift differentials for evening /weekend shifts, meal and clothing allowances, and off-hour coverage pay.

Working in the trenches, literally, for National Grid is not without frequent and imminent danger. It would be nice to hear if the injury/fatality packages for workers killed during work rival the generous ones accorded police and firefighters.

In the meantime, as the lockout continues, questions remain for those of us who are National Grid customers. May both sides come to an agreement soon—an agreement that also serves the needs of us paying National Grid's high fees.

Thanking Veterans Today, and Every Day

Every year on November 11th, we remember the armistice, signed on November 11th, 1918, that ended the First World War. One hundred years later, it can be easy to forget why we celebrate this day of all days, as the living memory of that war fades. The fact is, thousands of young men from Boston's neighborhoods, and from all across our country, put their lives on the line to defend our allies in the Great War. Today, the legacy of that courage and sacrifice is alive all around us—in the men and women in our neighborhoods who continue to serve our country; the families who continue to sacrifice; and veterans who continue to make Boston the great city that it is. It is essential, this year and every year, that we acknowledge and thank these honored members of our community.

More than 22,000 veterans call Boston home. They embody a commitment to service that doesn't disappear when they hang up their uniforms. When they come home, veterans continue to serve their community as leaders, parents, teachers, mentors, first responders, and more. Their valuable contributions make Boston a better place, and we should be thanking them each and every day for that.

It's also important for us to remember that veterans and their families often face unique challenges. Many deal with deep wounds, both visible and invisible. Since I was elected Mayor, I have worked hard to make Boston a city where veterans truly thrive, personally and professionally, throughout their lives. I believe that we need to show our veterans that we are grateful every single day. And one of the most important ways we do this is by showing vets that they can ask for help, and that they will receive it. It's what we owe them in return for all they have given us.

Mayor's Column

Martin J. Walsh

These are the values behind some of our most ambitious work in the City of Boston: from ending chronic veterans homelessness to improving access to supportive housing, healthcare, recovery services, employment programs for vets with and without PTSD, and much more. A question I hear all the time from residents is, "How can I help?" One of the simplest, and most powerful ways that every member of the Boston community can help support our veterans is simply saying "thank you." And that's exactly what we do through Operation Thank a Vet. Over the last few months, our goal has

Gas companies no show at city council hearing

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Boston City Council met last week and discussed safety measures taken by gas company National Grid after two incidents in the state.

The first incident, which did not take place under National Grid's watch, was an over-pressurization of pipes in the Merrimack Valley that led to several homes exploding and at least one death. The second incident did occur on National Grid's watch, in which a worker over-pressurized a line in Woburn, but no explosions or injuries took place. After that, the state's Department of Public Utilities has put a moratorium on all non-emergency and non-compliance work in National Grid's territory, pending results of the department's review of National Grid's safety practices.

The hearing began with a statement given to the City Council by National Grid, but the company did not send a representative to the meeting.

"We remain committed to keeping an ever-vigilant eye on safety, continuous improvement and best practices," hearing cosponsor and District 6 City Councilor Matt O'Malley read from National Grid's Director Joseph Carroll.

It should be noted that that phrase has been used in several other statements released by National Grid in those exact words, but from National Grid Spokesperson Christine Milligan.

"It's disappointing, but it's also unsurprising that National Grid has declined to join us today," O'Malley said. "They offered to meet with city councilors to discuss gas safety, but apparently not in this forum."

However, National Grid's locked out workers did come to the hearing. After negotiations between the United Steelworkers Union and National Grid failed to come up with a new contract before the old expired, National Grid locked out about 1,100 workers on June 25.

Joe Kirylo, President of USW Union Local 12003, said he feels that the biggest obstacle to gas safety is the state's DPU. He said he and other members of his union have sent hundreds of what they believed to be violations and the response was slow to nothing from the agency.

"I don't state this lightly, but the DPU is a joke," he said. "They have a lot of problems and we went to the DPU week after week demanding a meeting so we could tell them about the safety problems throughout Boston and other communities, and it wasn't after three hours and 18 minutes after the Merrimack explosions that we got an email saying, 'we'll meet with you.'"

Kirylo said they had sent numerous violations to the DPU as far back as 2011.

"We are not here over a contract," he said. "We are here over public safety... We did not start our campaign for public safety on June 25, and this is important, I don't want people to think in any way shape or form that we just brought up safety because we got locked out. This has been going on since 2011, and I have sent 101 pages of safety incidents or things that needed to be discussed across the board to the Governor and the DPU and, more importantly, from 2011 to 2015 to two CEOs and two presidents of operation, so there's a long history of National Grid not working safely."

Kirylo discussed the city's gas safety problems, mainly having to do with what he believed were out-of-date computer systems on many National Grid trucks. He said the systems allow workers to locate and mark gas mains and distribution lines for construction workers or gas utility repair teams (so they can fix a leak).

"If you get out in front of someone's house at three o'clock in the morning to mark a gas main, house gas service or multiple gas mains and the computers are down, like they have been for one hour, two hours, two days, three days or more, you are literally in the dark," he said. "Because you don't know where the gas main is, you don't know where the service is, and you do not know where to mark. And if you're responding to a gas leak, and you show up with a crew that has to bar out the main and excavate, you are also without information. It is almost impossible to find and fix a leak when those computers are not working."

Kirylo also pointed out that there is a level one gas leak (being the highest in severity out of three levels) found near the Haynes Early Education Center that he and his team logged on Aug. 23. He said National Grid went out and tried to fix it, but he said after they went back to the site to check, that as of Oct. 23, the leak was not fixed and showed 3 percent gas reading on their flammable gas detecting machines.

He said they have brought up numerous complaints of level 1 leaks with the DPU, and the response from the DPU was to ask where they got their readers.

On Jan. 1 of 2017, the City Council approved an ordinance brought forth by O'Malley to require that any time the city's streets were to be dug up, either for water main repairs, electrical work, construction, etc., the respective gas company in the area would have to fix any leak if it was detected there. National Grid sued the city and the courts repealed the ordinance based on a previous law that dictates only the state can create or enforce laws regarding gas infrastructure. Chris Osgood, the city's Chief of Streets, said the city actually has a very limited authority when it comes to gas infrastructure.

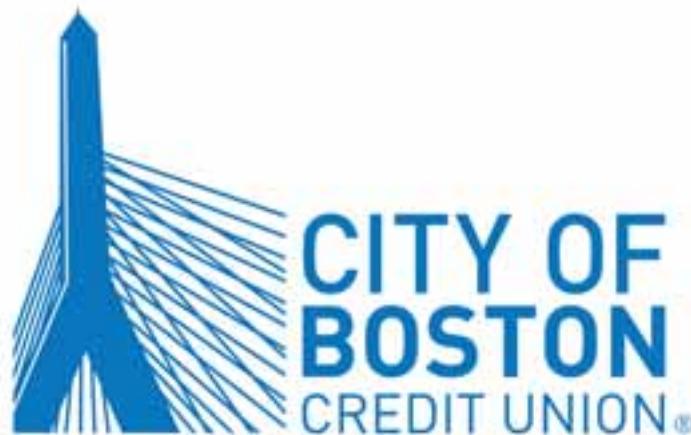

"Our focus is really limited to the worksite itself, the work they are doing to the street and that's sort of our span of control," he said. "There are things outlined in Massachusetts General Law that are out of our control."

He said there are four roles the Public Works Department (DPW) plays in gas infrastructure development and repair, the first of which is grant of location so as to make sure that any installation of gas infrastructure does not conflict with other public utilities or private property. The second is permitting, which allows for excavation.

across the city of light industrial areas are changing over to residential.

"Industrial real estate is changing," he said. "The world is changing. We don't have light industry any more. We're getting more distribution facilities like Amazon. Those are heating up."

"We've kicked this project around the neighborhood," Walsh said. "The same investors are building 76 Stonley. A lot is going on. The thoughts are what's the future of the Stonybrook neighborhood. That's why we worked with the [SNA] subcommittee."

"We've made every attempt to reach everybody, to try and meet all the abutters," said Walsh.

Lucio Trabucco is the architect, but before he could begin his presentation a resident spoke up about Wentworth Auto Service which 50

Stedman will replace.

Wentworth Auto Service relocated to Stedman St in 2003 after its original location at 541 Huntington Avenue was acquired by Wentworth Institute for a dormitory and classroom building.

"Where will the owners find a new location?" the neighbor asked. "This process has taken so long. Bill [Micelli, the station owner] is not getting any help from anyone. He's had this weight on his head. He's under heavy stress. He's not a young man. He hasn't a clue where he's going to go."

Michael Forde disagreed.

"We've owned the property for three years," he said. "Bill's under no pressure. Relocation is part of the development process."

Trabucco described the project. It was filed with the BPDA on October 4 as "a gateway project for the Stedman neighborhood."

Stedman St elevation of the proposed apartment house.

It's a long building with separate rhythmic bays of different colors and high stoops that make it appear like townhouses.

"It's 34–35 feet high." He said. "The same height as the three decker next door [41 Brookley]. It will have twenty-one below grade parking spaces. Four feet below the sidewalk. We will build a new sidewalk seven feet wide out to Brookley Road. There's no sidewalk now."

The first, second and third floors will each have five, two bedroom and two one bedroom apartments."

"There will be small roof decks that the tenants can use with planters and vegetation. There will be bay windows and the building will be faced with clapboards."

Walsh said that 50 Stedman is in compliance with the JP/Rox guidelines using the density bonus for increased density that it exceeds by 60%.

Four apartments—nineteen percent, will be affordable at 40% AMI, also in JP/Rox compliance.

Andy Rigo spoke on behalf of his mother Mary who lives at 48 Brookley Road.

"My mother is 85 years old," he said. "Not one member of the [SNA] subcommittee contacted my mother. This is overwhelming to her; she's trying to process this."

Rigo owns a 4000 square foot vacant lot at 43 Brookley Rd. directly behind 50 Stedman, suitable for two, three-family homes.

Rigo's complaints caused Walsh to repeatedly claim for over an hour that he made every effort to contact her, but that he will now make every effort to include her in the process.

"We want to move this conversation to the next level," he said.

Chris, who owns one of the condominiums at 41 Brookley Road, is in support of this project and said he spoke with Mary Rigo about the Stedman St. plans back in August.

"In December 2016 we were told there was going to be a development there," he said. "and the developer approached us. We live the closest; twelve feet from the new building. All five of us [at 41 Brookley] are in full support. The developers are not trying to hoodwink us."

Eva Kaniasty, of Plainfield St., chaired the 50 Stedman St subcommittee at SNA and for over a year briefed the SNA at its monthly meetings on her talks with the developers ironing out details.

"This is supported by seventeen people," she said. "It doesn't displace residents. It provides twenty-one units of needed housing; people are returning to apartments. It meets JP/Rox guidelines."

"As an abutter and a neighbor I've suffered a lot of stress in this process. I'm asking for your support," Kaniasty said.

Jennifer Uhrhane of Rossmore road could not support it.

"Regardless of whose fault it is, you've lost at not talking to the neighbors," she said. "We've had a year of negotiation. Where are the shadow studies we asked for?"

Forde was confused.

"What good is a shadow study?" he asked. "The height is the same as the three family next door. Its thirty-five feet. That's in the zoning code."

Fred Vetterlein owns property on Plainfield Street behind the proposed building and although he supports Mary Rigo, he also supports the project.

"Mary and Andy came in late," he said. "Mary's been a neighbor for twenty-five years. I don't want to see her investment lessened. She has a right to develop that parcel. It's a two family lot. I feel I can support this project."

"Help Mary develop that land," he said turning to Forde and Morrissey.

Alan Ihrer lives on Williams St and he would have none of that.

"You don't live in the neighborhood," he told Vetterlein. "We voted to stop this process. This process has to stop."

"You've got to help people," Ihrer said to Forde and Morrissey. "Make a commitment tonight."

Vetterlein was upset.

"I chaired the SNA for four years," he said. "I'm tired of hearing you ranting. I'm tired of neighbor against neighbor splitting the SNA. It's been thirty meetings. The process is too long."

The SNA has been involved with Forde and Morrissey for over four years, beginning with 76 Stonley Rd. a four story, twenty-eight unit building on the next street also designed by Trabucco. It received a building permit that day. Some residents were critical that the building has begun construction before a permit was issued.

Morrissey was impatient with that question. "I don't know why you're talking about Stonley Road," he said. "We're talking now about 50 Stedman Street."

"What are the next steps for Mary and her family?" asked one resident.

Morrissey said they will talk with Mary Rigo and then go forward.

"We felt that we could start the [BPDA] process now after eighteen months of negotiation."

The end of the BPDA comment period is November 7. 50 Stedman St will also be on the agenda of the JP Neighborhood Council housing committee later in November.

tion and construction within the city. The third is inspections, which is overseen by Katie Choe and Mark Cardarelli, and they inspect the excavation work on city streets. The fourth area of work is capital coordination.

"It's to make sure we are investing the city's and taxpayer's dollars in resurfacing roads in a way that also is in coordination with all the utility work that happens," he said.

Osgood pointed out that O'Malley's ordinance was actually helpful for the city, in that it required gas companies to share their work plans and information with the city, which allows the DPW to schedule excavation work in coordination with the gas companies for repair and leak fixes.

Choe said the information based on specifically gas leaks has been very helpful. She said they have the locations of all grade 2 leaks in the city as well as any grade 3 leaks in school zones in the city.

"Grade 1 leaks, we know them through emergency notifications," she said. "We do have the location of all the grade 2 leaks, all of the emergencies that have been worked and any grade 3 leaks in school zones. We are getting the grade 2 and 3 leaks in real time as they are reported to us, and also any grade 3 leaks that are scheduled for repair."

Hyundai Kona Ultimate AWD

Hyundai rediscovered itself a few years back and is now building some of its best cars, either here in the U.S. or like the Kona, overseas. The base Kona SE starts out as a FWD, with a 2.0 liter, 4-cylinder, 147 horsepower engine and an Atkinson dual cycle CVVT transmission. Yes, CVVT is correct. Unlike the conventional CVT, the CVVT is much different in its design and its function.

Now to the feel of this Kona Ultimate powered by a 1.6 liter, turbo-charged 175 horsepower, 4-cylinder engine, via a 7-speed dual clutch automatic that feels just like a manual transmission when starting from a stop. The engine RPM rises up before the car moves, just like driving a manual transmission. The shifts are very smooth and seamless under normal acceleration. That all changes when the accelerator is to the floor – the shifting is firm and precise, the engine revs to the red line and sounds great.

The Kona is a four-door, small crossover wagon. Fold down the rear seats for additional cargo space. Before this car was dropped off to me this week, I had not heard about it. It is a multifunction vehicle that is available in FWD or AWD with a center differential lock button. The top-of-the-line Kona Ultimate is a fully equipped fun, practical, and affordable car with NO excuses. The Ultimate has a long list of standard equipment that is usually optional on other vehicles. Power driver's seat, heated front seats, large sunroof, 18-inch tires, steering hub controls, 8-inch color multifunction touchscreen, auto dimming high beams, heads-up display, leather interior and steering wheel, blind spot monitoring, forward collision alert, rear cross traffic alert, lane keeping assist, plus more is available.

EPA: 26 city, 29 highway, 27 average combined MPG. The Kona FWD starts at $19,500 (destination fee: $980). Our Ultimate Kona, as tested, was $28,700.

Boston's own Junior Damato, "The Auto Doctor" has agreed to field auto repair questions from Bulletin and Record readers. Please forward your questions to news@bulletinnewspapers.com and we will do our best to get your questions answered.

Cashman said this year was slightly less attended than previous years, but he knows the program itself is growing, and he said he felt that was the important thing.

"The numbers are down a little bit, usually we're around 50 to 55; we're around 42 or 43 right now, but we'll get back there, we understand people are busy," he said. "Next year is the 15th year that it's been going on in different capacities and it's a really great time."

Cashman said he played in the league and comes back every year to help give back to those who gave to him. He added that he's gratified he's not the only one.

"Hockey back then had three different programs and I think, in 1983, they all combined and it's been going on strong ever since," he said. "I played in it, my brother played in it, all my friends who played are here now, so I think it's great and our program has grown a lot. Allston and Brighton have a lot of changing demographics and families come and go, but I think it's trending in the right direction. Our program is as big as it was in the 90s, so because of that and demographics we have to raise money, and this is one of the few fundraisers we have to keep youth hockey cheap in the neighborhood."

State Rep. Mike Moran used to play in the league, and he said he's very happy to see it grow and see the support from the neighborhood grow as well.

"I played here when I was a kid, as did my brother, and I coached for 13 years in this program and now my two daughters are in the program as well," he said. "My daughter Ellie plays for the U8 girls team and my daughter Maddie is in the Learn to Skate program. I've been involved in this program since I was probably three years old."

Moran said he cannot overstate the importance of the friendships and connections he and his friends have made playing in the league over the years.

"We've all played with each other and against each other. I see a couple of kids that I have coached. Hockey is a great sport and a great way for friendships to build for your whole life," he said. "A lot of these guys here I've known all my life."

League historian Mike Cashman, father of Craig, said he was asked to come up and help the program back in 1969.

"And I never left!" he said. "I always said that if there was one kid in Allston or Brighton who wanted to skate, then I'd support them and that's eventually what happened."

Cashman said he's heartened to see so many former players come back to the rink and duke it out to raise money for the next generation.

"It's because of people like that that these kids continue to come," he said. "I'm just glad I get to come here and see a couple of kids I coached come and play."

Resident Alex Hall said he was glad to make sure the league gets the money it needs to provide for the community.

"It's all about the kids and raising some money for Brighton Youth," he said. "We played alright, it was a late tie."

"We're still a little sore about it," chimed in Winston MacDonald.

"It's a great tournament and the money goes to the kids, that's what it's all about," added resident Dan Cuddy.

Resident Gerry McGath said he never played himself, but his kids do and he wanted to help them.

"I'm from Ireland, but my kids have played hockey in Allston Brighton since they could crawl, you know?" he said. "It's amazing all these guys go out there and bear it all. Some of these guys are 60 and some of them are 20, it's good for these guys to do it."

Resident Kevin Quilan said that getting the youth of the neighborhood into a physical activity like hockey that supports teamwork and community is definitely something he feels is important to support.

"It's good for the local hockey club and you've got to support them, he said. "Getting kids into hockey is not easy to do; it's an expensive sport. There's a lot going on in the streets, obviously the opioid crisis is going on and things of that nature, and getting the kids off the streets and into an active sport teaches them discipline and hard work, and it's a lifelong sport. I've been playing since I was four, and I'm 48 now."

BPD to participate in "No-Shave November" campaign

This November, don't be surprised if your local police officers look like they haven't shaved in weeks. For the privilege of sporting facial hair, officers from the Boston Police Department are participating in No-Shave November in support of Home Base, a Red Sox Foundation and Massachusetts General Hospital Program.

Traditionally, police department grooming policies require officers to remain clean-shaven. However, for the month of November, officers from across the region will be permitted to grow beards and goatees when they donate or fundraise $100 for Home Base and support its mission to help veterans and military families heal from invisible wounds of war—such as post-traumatic stress and traumatic brain injury—regardless of their financial means or discharge status.

The No-Shave November movement is spearheaded by MBTA Transit officer, Army veteran and Purple Heart recipient Kurt Power who sought care at Home Base. "The only wish I have is that we give the gift of hope to all the veterans who don't believe reintegration is possible. Hope to the approximately 20 veterans a day that may give up tomorrow," said Power. "If I can convince just one person who needs help to listen to me and put their trust in the treatment at Home Base, this will all be worth it."

Power and his fellow first responders at the Boston Police Department will go beyond the badge to not only help raise money for Home Base, a program that is widely recognized for changing the lives of veterans and their families, but to spark conversation, raise awareness and break the stigma associated with mental health care.

"I am proud of our officers for supporting this incredible cause," said Boston Police Commissioner William Gross. "Home Base provides essential services to veterans and we are honored to continue to help fulfill its mission."

Since 2015, the first responder No-Shave November campaign has raised over $200,000 for Home Base. The Boston Police Department is asking community members, business owners, family and friends to join the cause and donate.

treatment of the war and Christmastime on the battlefield. More than 200 artifacts and photographs are presented, including numerous personal items used by soldiers, one of the first battlefield movie cameras and an authentic trenching tool like those used to dig more than 25,000 miles of trenches during the war.

"When I was visiting the National World War I Museum in Kansas City, I realized that senior adults are the last direct descendants of World War I veterans and decided to create a mobile museum to bring these artifacts to them wherever they live," said Keith Colley, curator and owner. "We're finding people of all ages are drawn to the exhibit. Our hope is to keep the memory of World War I and its veterans alive, which is why we called it 'Lest We Forget,' a phrase that comes from a speech delivered by President Woodrow Wilson after the war ended."

The WWI Mobile Museum is open to the public. Come visit: Thursday, November 29th between 10:00 a.m. - 7:00 p.m. or Friday, November 30th between 10:00 a.m. - 5:00 p.m. While admission is free, we ask that visitors bring a toy to donate to the Home for Little Wanderers Big Wishes Holiday Toy Drive.

Stage Door

The show focused on the experiences of the Stage door Canteen girls, which were made famous by the likes of Bette Davis in 1940s New York City as a last morale booster from civilians to military service members about to ship out to Germany. The small show had grown in its time to attract celebrities and future celebrities to perform, and RTW Executive Founding Director Marietta Phinney said she modeled the show around those experiences.

Several members of her troop came out to recreate the shows and the experiences of those who made them famous, and residents and officials alike were receptive to the idea a week before Veterans Day.

"I'm so very honored to be among great veterans and families and so many who have served," said State Secretary of Veterans Affairs Francisco Urena. "As veterans, it gives us great pride that we have new generations among us who have respect for the flag, respect for the uniform and are just quality citizens at their time in high school, regardless whether they go into the military after high school or not."

Urena added that he was particularly happy to see this work go on in District 5 City Councilor Tim McCarthy's district, as his son is currently serving in the U.S. Army. He said that as a veteran, he is extremely proud to see so many come out to the event.

"I know there are many World War II veterans among us, along with some Korean, some peacetime and some Vietnam in this audience, and to all who have served and worn our nation's uniform, we are so very grateful, not only for your service but for the example you have set for our communities as veterans upon returning home."

Residents Claire and Michael Weston said they came out to support the programming at Ethos and enjoy the show.

"My husband was in the navy for 20 years, and at Ethos they called us as members to see if we could come," she said. "This is a great show, I'm very excited."

Resident Mary L. Anderson said this was amazing to see so many come out for the veterans in Hyde Park and in the city.

"I found out through the senior group of Hyde Park, and we all come to these programs, seniors stick together," she said. "It's nice, it's getting us out of the house and this might be the only time some of these people get to come out, because in the neighborhood, they don't have anything."

Ethos Chief Development and Community Relations Officer Raymond Santos said, "This is fantastic, it's just great to see such a diverse group of men and women who have served our country honorably," he said. "This is a wonderful opportunity for us to give back to them in whatever way we can. All of our staff have had such a great time putting this together."

Santos said the English High School ROTC, a short jaunt south of the Ethos building, was a natural fit and they have worked together in the past.

"I think when Ethos calls and we ask for support for our older men and women, most organizations come out in full strength and it's something that all our partners are really willing to help out with," he said.

English High School ROTC Commander Sgt. Major Charles Hornbuckle said they jumped at the chance to help out and serve at the event.

"We were approached to come out and provide color guard and ushers for the event and I thought it would be a great opportunity for some of our young men and women to come out here and see some of the older veterans and mingle with them," he said.

McCarthy kept his words short and sweet before the show, but let the audience know he'd be willing to speak to anyone after.

"And if you want to see a picture of my son, I have one!" he said.

State Rep. Angelo Scaccia also spoke during the event, kicking off with a joke.

"Now don't believe what people tell you, I did not serve during World War I," he said to laughter and a response from the crowd.

"It was the Civil War!" cried someone in the audience to more laughter.

But Scaccia went to a more serious note, detailing his experiences coming back from the Vietnam War, and recent experience he had with Urena.

"We had to hide; people at that time were angry at the people who had served in that war, and when Francisco got up to speak, he said, 'it'll never happen again, America will always be proud of those who serve,'" he said. "This Commonwealth of Massachusetts has done more for veterans than any other state in the Union by far. It's because of people like Francisco in this government."

been to personally reach out to all 22,000 veterans in our city. We wanted to make sure each of them knows about all the resources that our city has made available to them. We've connected with thousands of vets so far, but we have thousands more to go. That's where you come in. On Saturday, November 10th, we will go door to door delivering thank you packages and information about opportunities available to veterans. By joining us as a volunteer, you can help us reach our goal. And most importantly, you will make a meaningful difference in people's lives—connecting those who have served their country with a community who is ready to serve them and their families.

A century ago, the events of November 11th gave people hope for a more peaceful and prosperous future. This week, we'll recognize those among us who have continued that mission and put their lives on the line in the name of those same values. In Boston, we never forget the sacrifices people made for the good of our community. We know that our strength comes from our willingness to lift our neighbors up in good times and hard times. And we will always be grateful to our veterans, not just on November 11th, but every day.

If you are a veteran who would like to be connected to services in Boston, please reach out to Boston's Veterans Services, <https://www.boston.gov/departments/veterans-services>, email veterans@boston.gov, or call 617-241-VETS (8387).
