Organizer Tony Federico chose the day after the Boston Preliminary Election on Sept. 15 to host a Back the Blue rally at the West Roxbury Rotary.

A counter protest was also held by Solidarity Against Hate Boston, and the two groups clashed, to say the least. Several scuffles took place between the two groups and several people – from both sides – were led away by police, as motorists, locals and about half a dozen photographers and reporters looked on.

The rally started with Federico setting up a PA system and playing some music as rally-goers stood with flags – many supplied by Federico out of his truck – asking drivers to honk to support the police. The Back the Blue rally-goers stood in front of the police station while several counter protesters stood directly on the rotary holding signs with slogans like “Black Lives Matter” and “All Lives Won’t Matter Until Black Lives Matter.”

Federico only had this to say.

“I’m kind of busy right now,” he said.

About 20 minutes into the rally, counter protesters from the Solidarity Against Hate group moved to directly confront the rally. Federico garnished several loudspeakers and turned on their siren setting as slogans went back and forth. “Black Lives Matter,” “All Lives Matter,” “Patrick Rose, overtime, no money for BPD crime!,” “All Cops Are Bastards,” and several obscenities concerning President Joe Biden could be briefly heard over the sirens.

Screaming matches and pushing fights permeated the crowd in front of the District E-5 Station of the Boston Police Department (BPD). Before the rally really got going, some local residents said before the rally really got going why they came.

“We just got to support our police,” said former BPD Detective and West Roxbury resident Joanne Foley, adding she went to the last Back the Blue Rally. “There really haven’t been any problems. It’s usually quite peaceful.”

It should be noted that while about 60 or 70 people were at the event, including police officers in case anything went wrong, the scrum in front of the station involved no more than 20 or 25 people on either side. About 40 people total were in the lively protest and counter protest.

West Roxbury resident Joyce Buckley came out also to support the police.

“I understand their view, but they have to understand my view,” she said. “There’s no reason why we have to get yelled at. If they want people to listen to them, you have to

Changes at Stonybrook including 10 Stonley Road

Richard Heat
Staff Reporter

Two dramatic changes were announced at the Sept. 13 virtual monthly meeting of the Stonybrook Neighborhood Association (SNA).

The most significant came near the end of the meeting when Jennifer Urhrane gave an update on the status of 10 Stonley Rd., a 45-unit, four story residential building that SNA opposed for two years.

“Now we hear the development team has folded it into the (Jamaica Plain Neighborhood Development Corporation) JPND,” she said. “There’s no changes. They’re just shifting the affordability numbers. It will be turned into a 100 percent affordable building. It’s something very different.”

What it means is a transfer and ultimate sale of a fully approved private sector multi-family residential building to a non-profit social housing agency.

Cannabis dispensary hosts HP meeting

The owners of the proposed Evergreen Farms retail marijuana dispensary held a community meeting via Zoom on Thursday, Sept. 9, to describe the establishment they plan to open at 883 Hyde Park Ave.

“If you’ve followed our story, you’ve probably heard some of this before,” Armani White said. “But we’re excited to just be back.”

Co-owners Sean Berte and White, two lifelong Boston residents who both were previously negatively impacted by the war on drugs, have used their experiences to advocate for marijuana legalization and economic empowerment for those impacted by the stigma of pot arrests. White had been arrested twice for marijuana possession, while Berte was incarcerated in federal prison for eight months for growing marijuana at his

ACA discusses 500 West, parking

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Allston Civic Association (ACA) met on Sept. 15 and discussed a proposal from Ardo Garabedian, the owner at 500 West St.

McDermott, Quilty & Miller Attorney Joseph Hanley represented Garabedian during the meeting, which was sort of a pre-file meeting before the Boston Planning and Development Agency (BPDA) Article 80 Large Project review public process starts, just to kind of get a feel for what the community thinks of the idea of the six-story complex. Hanley said his client has been “part of the community for decades.”

“(Garabedian) has been the owner of the Irving Gas Station at 500 Western Ave. and the fee pay parking which has been at the site for a number of years and accommodates parking for the health center and for construction vehicles with all this work that’s been going on in the neighborhood,” he said. “We would suggest that this has sort of helped to get cars off the street.”

Hanley said open space and public realm are main focuses of the residential project. Hanley said they have been working with the community and have considerably reduced the original project presented earlier this year. He said the unit count came down from 159 units to 114, the gross square footage was reduced from 173,359 square feet to 110,842, the height is down from 70 feet/seven stories to 65 feet/six stories and they reduced the lot coverage from 84.8 percent to 59.9 percent, in order to provide more open space.

“We’re looking at providing a lot of public realm, we’re at six stories and we’re also excited that we’re able to provide 30 feet of sidewalk setbacks for a local convenience store and coffee shop,” he said. “

Project Architect from Hendren Associates Gerry Hendren said they have created a public park on Richardson Street at 4,130 square feet.

“It’s considerably larger than what we’d call a pocket park, so we just called it a regular park,” he said.

Hendren added that two of the units are at street level, with the convenience store/coffee shop, and there will be artist units with space so they can display their work.

Landscape Architect from Verdant Landscaping, Katya Podsiadlo, said the added setback for the site will allow for wider sidewalks than recommended by the Boston Complete Streets program. She said the added bonus to this is tree safety due to the fact that the main thing that kills street trees is a lack of width for them to grow once they reach maturity.

“We’ll have a four-and-a-half-foot wide furnishing zone for street trees, which is wider than the radius development zone for street tree plantings,” she said. “We’ll also have bike racks along that furnishing zone and we’ll have a nine-foot wide pedestrian space behind that.”

She added that while the planting zone will be four feet wide, the actual soil layer, some of which will be under the sidewalks, will be about six or seven feet in most spaces.

Some ACA members were concerned about the added traffic the project could create, though Hanley did say there will be 140 bicycle storage spaces for the building.

ACA member Pat Centola said she was happy about the added greenspace proposed for a project in Lower Allston.

“Am I dreaming this?” she said with a laugh. “It looks very very nice.”

She said, however, nearby buildings have had issues with trash sitting around on the public street before it gets taken away, and she asked about what the plan is for trash pickup.

“We have an internal system that’s a little bit longer than most so haulers don’t have to pick up the trash on the site, they don’t have to pick it up on the street,” Hanley said. “The commercial haulers will be able to come in, circulate in the parking garage area and get the trash so it doesn’t need to be brought out to the street.”

Centola said she also found issue with the overall design of the back of the building.

“It looks like it’s not finished on the back,” she said.

Hanley said they will still be working on that as the development process continues.

ACA member Christine Varriale said she agreed that the building’s design is not attractive, and felt that the 1.3 spaces per unit (148 spaces) is too much. She said a nearby building is only using about two-thirds of its parking with a similar ratio.

“So they have a third of their parking spaces empty, and their next building is a .4 parking ratio because people are just not

Novena to St. Clare

Ask St. Clare for three favors, 1 business, 2 impossible. Say nine Hail Marys for nine days, with lighted candle. Pray whether you believe or not. Publish on the ninth day. Powerful novena. Say “May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be praised, adored, glorified, now and forever, throughout the whole world. Amen.” Your request will be granted, no matter how impossible it may seem.

Prayer to the Sacred Heart

Oh Lord Jesus Christ, to Your most Sacred Heart I confide this intention {name petition}. Only look upon me, then do what Your love inspires. Let Your Sacred Heart decide. I count on You. I trust in You. I throw myself on Your mercy. Lord Jesus, You will not fail me.

Sacred Heart of Jesus, I trust in You. Sacred Heart of Jesus, I believe in Your love for me. Sacred Heart of Jesus, Your kingdom come. Sacred Heart of Jesus, I have asked You for many favors, but I earnestly implore this one. Take it, place it in Your open Heart.

When the Eternal Father looks upon it, He will see it covered with Your Precious Blood. It will be no longer my prayer, but Yours, Jesus. Sacred Heart of Jesus, I place all my trust in You. Let me not be disappointed. Amen.

BOSTON SENIOR HOME CARE

Your home. Your choice. Your care. |

A Brighton guy finally comes home

Last Friday, a dank day to end the week, the remains of First Lieutenant Thomas Redgate returned home to be buried at St. Ignatius Church, straddling the Brighton-Newton border. A phalanx of Boston motorcycle officers and State Police, the cadre of solemn, meticulously uniformed Army representatives, and a large number of veterans stood in silence as his casket, removed from the hearse amidst the crisp, synchronized movements of the United States Army, was draped with the Stars and Stripes before entering the church.

My Kind of Town/
Joe Galeota

Redgate had been listed as “unaccounted for” since December 11, 1950. A presumptive finding of death was issued on December 31, 1953.

Born in Medford but raised in St. Col’s in Brighton, he probably died on November 27, 1950, when his Army unit was attacked on the eastern side of the infamous Chosin Reservoir, indeed the location where so many more of his Army and Marine buddies breathed their last in brutally frigid temperatures.

A Boston Public Schools graduate—Brighton High—young Redgate was called to active duty in April of 1944.

Office reported a DNA match. But because of COVID the burial had to be delayed.

The framed picture of “Uncle Tommy” remained on the mantle of the family home for decades.

Amidst the funeral rites of the Roman Catholic Church and the burial traditions of the U.S. Army, Redgate was laid to rest some 70 years after his disappearance. The gentle, eloquent presider—a non-Jesuit whose name I forgot—reminded congregants of the purpose of the aromatic incense at the end of Mass as he revered the casket with the thurible: it rises up as our prayers do and it obscures the reasons why tragedy happens. I couldn’t help but think how its smoke also resembled the tragic fog of battle, of which combat soldiers speak—not unlike the acrid clouds that characterized the final hours of so many at the Chosin.

Thanks, Tom, for your service to our country: you and so many others made the ultimate sacrifice and gave your last full measure of devotion when I was just a 5-year-old kid asking my parents on Forest Hills Street what is all this talk about Korea.

He served his country as an airplane and engine mechanic. Following his discharge, he enrolled at Boston College, before reenlisting in the Army in the fall of 1948. The 24-year-old was deployed to Korea in August of 1950 as a forward observer in Able Battery, 48th Field Artillery Battalion, 7th Infantry Division.

In 2018, North Korea’s Kim Jong-un, in an uncharacteristic peaceful move (for leverage at a later time?) transferred boxes of Americans’ remains to President Trump. Two years later in April of 2020 the U.S. Army Casualty

MAKE YOUR OWN DECISION

To the Editor:

For members of Boston’s black community, the results of the September 14 mayoral preliminary election were not what was expected. With acting Mayor Kim Janey in office, there seemed to be hope that Boston would elect not only its first woman, but its first mayor who was black.

However, with four strong women running for mayor, the deck seemed somewhat stacked against Janey. While the two eventual candidates will now go on to face each other in November, there are many in Boston’s black community and in political circles who think all is not lost if the black community stays actively involved in the mayor’s race going forward. Will black voters demand the two mayoral candidates address their concerns and will the candidates’ answers satisfy this large voting block, many of whom are frustrated by the September 14 voting results?

Both Michelle Wu and Anissa Essaibi-George are candidates of color and can either or both of them win over a block of voters now without a black candidate in the race?

There are some in the black community who think it is possible to see the BlackVote galvanize around either of the two finalists in the race for mayor, while others seemed worried by the potential of many black voters sitting out the final.

I will be watching the candidates closely to see what strategies both of them take. Will the final election be close or a blow-out? I’m thinking somewhat close. I see both campaigns taking little for granted. Wu’s base is progressive and Essaibi-George a tad left of center but less progressive. I see Wu, I think Elizabeth Warren or Ayanna Pressley. I see Essaibi-George, I think Marty Walsh or Tommy Menino. Two different visions, one city.

However, going into the future the Black Vote in Boston will need to get better at Politics 101. Almost from the get go of this mayoral campaign, I saw electoral trouble with two strong African-American women running against each other and splitting the vote each needed to make it past September. Both of these candidates had a right to run but each knew the risks of splitting

District 6 election coming together

Greta Gaffin
Staff Reporter

On Sept. 14, Boston held its preliminary election for Boston City Council. District 6 had 18,484 votes cast. Kendra Hicks, of Jamaica Plain, received 9,236 votes, and Mary Tamer, of West Roxbury, received 7,984 votes.

They will be both on the general election on Nov. 2. A third candidate, Winnie Eke of West Roxbury, only received 1,188 votes and thus did not make it to the final election. There were also 76 write-in votes cast.

Both Hicks and Tamer said they are looking forward to talking to as many voters as possible as they go into the final stretch of the campaign. They also both said they are looking to continue Matt O'Malley's work with the Building Energy Reporting and Disclosure Ordinance (BERDO), which requires large buildings to report their emissions, if passed. In June, O'Malley, who wrote the original BERDO, introduced a new ordinance, the Building Emissions Reduction and Disclosure Ordinance (BERDO II), which would require the largest 4 percent of buildings to meet increasingly aggressive emissions targets, reaching net zero by 2050.

Seventy percent of Boston's carbon footprint comes from its buildings, and the largest 4 percent of the buildings contribute to half of said carbon footprint.

Tamer said her first priority if elected would be trees and shade cover.

"A full audit of trees," she said.

She said she also wants the city to hire five full-time arborists (currently, Boston only has one). She noted that there are parts of District 6 which have many street trees, and parts which have none.

"I'm very concerned about the environment and climate change," she said, adding that "all new developments should include landscaping and trees."

She said she wants to know where there are empty tree pits, and where there are saplings that need support.

She also said she wants Boston Public Schools (BPS) to have more recycling, and for more mandatory recycling for institutions throughout the city. Tamer also suggested the city add curbside compost pickup in addition to the already existing curbside garbage and recycling pickup, which was an initiative O'Malley had been pushing for years.

"How do we work to reduce packaging?" she asked, and spoke highly of Polkadog Bakery in Jamaica Plain, which allows customers to refill dog treats using their own bags.

Tamer is also concerned about schools. "We have 33 schools in the bottom 10 percent of the state, which educate 17,000 children," she said.

She said she thinks as a city councilor she can make an impact on schools, because the city council controls the approval of the city budget, and schools are one-third of that budget. She worked for the Boston Charter Alliance from 2015-2017, and was a member of the Boston School Committee from 2010-2013. Both she and Hicks are BPS alumnae and have sent their children to BPS schools.

Tamer mentioned as well that she would really like to see a senior center in District 6, with programming and activities, which she said voters she has talked to are interested in. The Roche Center, in West Roxbury, and Curtis Hall, in Jamaica Plain, do currently offer some senior programs.

Hicks said her first priorities would be education, affordable housing, and environmental justice.

"Expanding [BERDO] further is part of my policy platform," she said. "We want to use some of those financial resources to support small busia vital voting block while the two candidates who moved on to November didn't have the same worries.

In the preliminary, I was supporting acting Mayor Kim Janey. I saw her as the best candidate for the job. I still think she was. Now, I have another decision to make going toward the November 2 election.

I do hope Janey stays politically active. She has a voice that needs to speak out and needs to be heard. I saw her grow in the months she took the reins at City Hall which is why I don't regret voting for her.

The bottom line for November 2 is to research the candidates running for mayor. Ask questions, demand answers and choose which candidate speaks to your concerns. Never let someone else choose for you. Either we run the government or it runs us. Government is our business. Stay involved.

be respectful. Earlier there was a woman who was with Black Lives Matter, and she was standing with us.”

Another West Roxbury resident, who asked not to be identified, said she felt the aggression was coming only from counter protesters.

“I may not agree with them, they may not agree with me, but that’s no reason as to why they can’t be civil during protests,” she said. “They’re vicious.”

It should be noted that one rally-goer swung a flag at the counter protesters, and several participants started physical altercations on either side.

Roslindale residents Elizabeth and Vinnie Fieg came out to show support for the Black Lives Matter movement.

“I believe in police reform and I think we have a lot reasons why that’s needed, and I think the last year-and-a-half has put a spotlight on that,” Elizabeth Fieg said. “It’s concerning when people haven’t learned that lesson or feel like there’s any need to have a reckoning or reconciling of our country’s history.” Jamaica Plain resident Ann Philbin has been coming to the West Roxbury Progressives Vigil since it started and just wanted to continue her support for racial justice.

“I just wanted to make sure there was a message for Black Lives Matter out here,” she said. “I heard they were coming here to create a presence here for Back the Blue.”

Resident and West Roxbury Roslindale Progressives leader Rev. Rachel Poliner said she came out as a neighbor – not as a representative of the Progressives Group – to “bear witness if something awful happened.”

“I’m not sure it was ever going to be an evolved conversation,” she said. “The question for us (the Progressives group) was ‘Do you want to bring more attention to something awful or do you want the awful thing to not get attention? Do you want to give it oxygen or not give it oxygen?’ So some people choose the ‘Let’s get in their faces and make noise’ option, which is the counter protesters that are there now. Some of us did things like call our state rep.”

Poliner added she felt bad for the BPD who had to work all overtime during the preliminary election the day before.

“As I understand it, the police know full well this is not to honor them,” she said. “After all, they’re exhausted from covering the election for a full day yesterday.”

The West Roxbury

Roslindale Progressives started hosting vigils for racial justice in support of Black Americans who have suffered injury and death at the hands of police, particularly during the summer of 2020. They held a vigil every week during the height of that summer, and this year have held vigils every fourth Monday. The group’s next vigil is scheduled on Monday, Sept. 27 from 5:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. For more information, go to <https://bit.ly/3lys0ug>.

District 6 City Council candidate Kendra Hicks was also at the event, but stayed away from the fray. She said she came out to bear witness.

“The folks at the police department have also figured out that this is not in support of them,” she said. “I’m here because I want people in West Roxbury and District 6 to know that we’re not going to stand for this.”

The previous Back the Blue rallies had a much bigger turnout, and Hicks said she felt that was because of the pandemic and that the conversation has not been getting a lot of public airtime.

“There are a lot of people here from West Roxbury who came to show the folks here that they’re not allowed to come into their neighborhood and just stir it up,” she said. “I think the discourse around policing and community policing is really important, and I think people have found other ways to support that work including building policy, doing the organizing work or seeking out other alternatives. People are doing that work.”

nesses and small landlords to retrofit their businesses as well.” “I’ve been very strong on labor,” she said, noting that of the 10 union endorsements in the race, nine of them have gone to her. She really wants to ensure construction jobs “go to people in the city.”

The current city council just voted to include a non-binding referendum question about an elected school committee on the November ballot.

“I’m really excited about that,” Hicks said. “It puts us in a better position to make decisions for the city.”

A June poll published by Suffolk University and the Boston Globe found that only 6 percent of residents supported the current totally mayor-appointed school committee. Boston voted to remove the elected school committee in 1989, which went into effect in 1992.

Hicks won the four Ward 10 wards located in District 6, as well as the seven Ward 11 wards. In Ward 19 she won precincts 1, 3, and 4-9, and in Ward 20, Precinct 1. Tamer won Ward 19 Precinct 2, and Ward 20 Precincts 3, 5 - 7, and 10 - 20 (The other Ward 20 Precincts are located in District 5).

paying for those spaces and so how do you think you’ll fill these parking spaces?” she asked.

Hanley said the parking will be broken up into two categories since it’s a mixed-use building.

“Point-six-five is the ratio we’re proposing for the residential portion of the building,” he said. “That .65 is also appropriate for the size of these units. We’re not doing a compact site; we’re doing the exact opposite. We’re looking to do good-sized units and we know by the data that the larger the units are the more likely that parking is needed.”

He said the second tier of parking is for public fee-pay parking in an area that has a lot of commercial and construction parking needs.

Varriale pointed out that there are “thousands” of parking spaces going into buildings at Western Avenue.

“We don’t need your one-to-one parking ratio when we already have Nexus with 700 parking spaces that they’ll let residents use during snow emergencies, you don’t have to do that,” she said.

Hanley pointed out that many construction workers are now using the street parking on the adjacent Richardson Street to park, and that this will help alleviate that use.

Some residents said they felt the traffic generated by the site will be problematic as well.

“Traffic on Western Ave is problematic at times now,” said Carolyn Campbell. “I can’t even fathom what it will be like with this development.”

Many residents said they were concerned that so many buildings were going up on Western Avenue and there was not an overall study to see what impacts this could have on the neighborhood. But there is an overall development impact study happening now conducted by the BPDA. Go to <https://bit.ly/3AovdTU> for more information on that.

According to the JPNDC the developers, Brooksted LLC, were notified of an interest to buy on Aug. 26, 2021.

Michael Rogers from Rep Liz Malia's office, who was on the call, said the JPNDC notified the representative of their interest too.

"It sounds like it's a good thing," Rogers said.

There was no further discussion or reaction on this change of ownership.

Ten Stonley Rd. was not a good thing to the SNA from the day it was first presented to them on May 13, 2019 as a four-story rental building designed by Embarc that would replace the Mello Fuel depot facing Brookley Road.

The most significant part of the development that strongly appealed to the Boston Planning and Development Agency (BPDA) Board when it voted unanimously to approve it on Dec. 19, 2019 was the ten, self-financed affordable apartments; four set aside as ground floor artist live-work units.

As reported at length by The Bulletin, the SNA opposed the building height and density right up until a final arbiter zoning hearing that the association demanded was held on Feb. 13, 2021.

Urhrane organized an opposition email campaign, the scale of which impressed the Zoning Board of Appeals Chair Christine Araujo enough to vote no; she was in the minority and the Board voted in favor.

But site work seemed to stall and The Bulletin heard rumors as early as November 2020 the development team, Matthew Zahler and Jeff Glew of Brooksted LLC, was having difficulty financing the $14.2 million development with its high number of affordable units and the pandemic-influenced increase in construction costs.

In a statement to the press on Sept. 14, 2021 JPNDC stated, "Stonley-Brookley will consist of 45 permanently affordable income-restricted homeownership units."

"Traggorth Companies LLC has executed an Option to Purchase Agreement which will allow the TCLLC to purchase the property late in the year from the current owner Brooksted LLC."

"When the sale is concluded the sale price will be made public record and disclosed."

The JPNDC will form a partnership with Traggorth, "under which the two companies will acquire and develop Stonley-Brookley."

"Traggorth has over 12 years experience focusing on difficult-to-develop urban infill projects."

The press fact sheet breaks the homeownership prices down to 15 at 80 percent Area Median Income (AMI, one person earning less than $66,500), 17 at 100 percent AMI and 13 units at 120 percent AMI.

A one-bedroom unit would sell for $202,900 at 80 percent AMI.

JPNDC will apply for city funds on Sept. 24, 2021 and plans to start construction in mid 2022.

According to the BPDA, a Notice of Project Change has not been filed by Brooksted LLC and added in a statement, "Assuming these changes [affordability] are the only revisions, the BPDA would likely facilitate a BPDA-hosted public meeting to review possible project updates as well as Board action acknowledging change of ownership."

On a related development for JPNDC, it received BPDA approval on Sept. 13 for 14-18 Cheney St. at Grove Hall about which The Bulletin has reported.

This includes 59 units of senior-supportive housing replacing a parking garage. BPDA board member Ted Landmark said he was very happy that the renderings by architects Icon and Garland Enterprises were faithful to the demographics of the neighborhood.

Fred Vetterlein reported on the second change: the SWC Park extension on which he has been working for six years.

One of the four community benefits negotiated by SNA in 2015 for 3521-3529 Washington St. (the Vita and Extra Space Storage) was an extension of the Southwest Corridor Park from where it ended at English High School behind the storage building and 45 Burnett to Forest Hills.

The developer SSG agreed to contribute $100,000 in two installments to the BPDA for the design and construction on this long and narrow link of I-95 residue land owned by the MBTA.

Vetterlein admitted that after what he said were years of no response from the Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR), he has concluded that the project is too big.

He suggested a new revitalized committee that includes others in Jamaica Plain outside of SNA to build a dog park, bikeway and walkway behind the self-storage building and connect them to the sitting park and community garden opened on June 30, 2021.

That was built with an $80,000 contribution as another one of the community benefits from SSG.

Vetterlein showed a slide of a dead-end pathway from the sitting park to the fence line of the proposed dog park/walkway.

"There's the connection. There's plenty of room for a dog park," Vetterlein said. "It's 287 feet long and 51 feet wide. Everyone is talking about dog parks. This is really a big spot and it's a great connection to the new [Burnett] park and the SWC park at English High School."

Vetterlein suggested a wider planning group be formed including the Burnett Street garden group and the friends of JP Dog Park.

"There's 500 people on the dog park Facebook page."

"The money is there," Vetterlein said. "Money isn't the problem. It's getting the plans done."

He suggested that State Senator Chang Diaz and State Rep. Liz Malia write to the DCR commissioner, although he admitted that MassDOT needs to transfer the land first. (Staff from both electeds were on the call.)

Vetterlein showed a June 2, 2016 letter on the screen that quoted a DCR official stating "planning for this SWCP extension can't begin until the land now owned by the MBTA could be moved into DCR through a care and control agreement."

Vetterlein quoted from an undated BPDA agreement he showed on the screen approving the community benefits but added, "The BPDA states that 'if construction does not commence within ten years the agency shall have the right to reallocate all or a portion of the funds if the SWC park extension payments.'"

Vetterlein said that the 10 years begins when The Vita, self-storage building and 45 Burnett get final ISD approval.

"The 10 years haven't started yet," he said, "until the buildings get signed off on. The money is not in the [BPDA] fund yet."

BOSTON BLOOMS WITH DAFFODILS

The City of Boston announced that the Boston Parks and Recreation Department will distribute over 15,000 daffodil bulbs for planting on public ways citywide. The effort is part of the “Boston Blooms with Daffodils” beautification initiative, started in 2011.

Individuals, civic associations, church groups, sports leagues, scout troops, open space advocates, and parks friends are encouraged to sign up to participate. Last year, over 100 community groups planted bulbs in neighborhoods across the City.

Those interested in participating may fill out a form online at boston.gov/boston-blooms. The online application form will remain open until late September on a rolling basis. Due to limited supply, groups are not guaranteed bulbs, but the Parks Department will strive to accommodate all requests. The application deadline is September 30.

The plantings will take place in approved locations on the weekends of October 30 and November 6. The Parks Department will contact interested groups and provide bulb pick-up instructions and dates. Groups and individuals are asked to use their own tools.

The Boston Parks and Recreation Department encourages volunteers to take photos of their groups on planting days and share them via social media using the hashtag #BostonBlooms.

For more information on “Boston Blooms with Daffodils,” and to stay up to date with news, events, and improvements in Boston parks, call 617-635-4505 or follow our social channels—@bostonparksdept on Twitter, Facebook, and Instagram.

family’s second home in Maine. They became friends while advocating for Question Four in 2016, which legalized the sale of marijuana in Massachusetts and illustrated people’s changing views on cannabis use.

This meeting, which was only attended by five people, was the latest step on their journey to open the shop. They received a permit to sell marijuana from the Boston Cannabis Board (BCB) earlier this year. They were approved as a super majority economic empowerment team after each being deemed a certified economic empowerment applicant.

They must receive approval from the state’s Cannabis Control Commission (CCC) and register as a business in Boston. Berte said he expects to open in December once the process is completed.

Berte, a Roslindale resident and former firefighter, and White, an activist from Roxbury, have been working for nearly five years to realize their dream of opening a retail cannabis dispensary. They have attended numerous community meetings since they first presented their proposal in 2018 to open the shop at the site of the former original Serino’s retail store and most recently La Ronde de Marie Claire Early Learning Center across from the CVS plaza.

There was an initial challenge by Harvest, LLC. to open another cannabis retail and production facility less than 500 feet away, but it was denied by the BCB.

“Because of our advocacy, it really set people like us up to take advantage of this upcoming market,” White said. “We have big plans for the shop.”

White described those plans, such as prioritizing the hiring of local residents. Twenty people will be hired in the first two years, with rates starting at $17 per hour.

“We really want to match the fabric of the community and put diversity at the forefront,” he said. The goal is to hire 70 percent people of color, 30 percent women, 10 percent veterans, five percent people from the LGBTQ community, and five percent people with disabilities. They plan to advertise in local publications and participate in job fairs as well as work with groups such as the Black Economic Council of Massachusetts (BECMA).

Once the business is established, White said Evergreen plans to set up a program for others who want to start in this industry as a way of giving back to the community.

During a presentation, White showed copies of letters of support from Acting Mayor Kim Janey when she was a district councilor, former District 5 City Councilor Tim McCarthy, the Hyde Park Neighborhood Association (HPNA), the former pastor of the Blue Hills Collaborative, and a letter of non-opposition from current District 5 Councilor Ricardo Arroyo.

“We take very seriously the level of support that we have,” he said. “And we plan to stick to what we’ve committed to and want you to hold us accountable for that.”

Berte said the facility will serve clients 21 years of age and older. A preliminary parking study he cited showed that 60 percent street parking was available during the busiest part of the day. In addition, Berte said he has an agreement with neighboring Kery Auto Service to lease 10 parking spaces. People will not be allowed to come into the store if they are blocking neighbors’ driveways.

Security cameras will monitor the property and will be linked with the local police station. They “will be pointed in every direction seven days a week, 24/7,” Berte said. There are internal cameras as well as exterior lighting.

There will be three identification checks: one upon entrance, once to go past the security desk, and a final time at the point of sale. The products will be stored in a secured vault. Nothing will be able to be seen from the outside of the shop.

“We’re from the community that made this our home,” Berte said as he explained why the business is a good fit. Everything that was said to him and White in years of community meetings has been taken into consideration in the design and operation of the proposed dispensary.

Jim Kirker, the former president of the HPNA, expressed his ongoing support for the business.

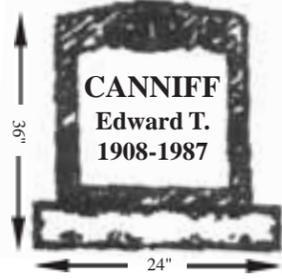

“It’s been a long road, and I’m really proud of you,” he said.

Kirker asked if Berte and White have thought about expanding the operation.

“I would be foolish to say we wouldn’t consider expanding,” Berte said. “At the moment, we’ve got to concentrate on getting [the business] open and operational.”

Berte said he will apply to the CCC the day after the meeting, which will start the review process with the Boston Planning and Development Agency (BPDA).

WALSH

Catherine M. Walsh, 98, West Roxbury, passed away after a long illness on September 17, 2021. She was a resident at the Brush Hill Care Center in Milton. Catherine was born in 1923 on Upton Street in the South End of Boston to Catherine and Michael Walsh. She had one older brother, Thomas Edward. Together, they explored the neighborhood, made friends, rode the pony, and fed their canary one Hershey Kiss each night. She is survived by nieces Katherine Morvay and Dorothy Walsh Haviland, and William Haviland. After graduation from Girls High School, she went to work at the First National Bank of Boston, where she remained until her retirement. A longtime resident of West Roxbury and Marina Bay, she enjoyed the single life, travelling, swimming, sunbathing and the occasional round of golf. Known for her sewing skills, she kept an immaculate home. Woe to the person who mused up the bathroom! Visitation will be from 8:30 – 9:30 am on Friday, September 24, 2021 at The Robert J. Prayer to the Blessed Virgin

(Never known to fail!)

Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine, splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in this necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my mother. Oh Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth, I humbly beseech thee from the bottom of my heart to succor me in my necessity (make request). There are none that can withstand your power. Oh Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (three times). Holy Mary, I place this cause in your hands (three times). Say this prayer for three consecutive days and then you must publish and it will be granted to you. —S.G.H.

Prayer to St. Jude

Most holy apostle, St. Jude Thaddeus, faithful servant and friend of Jesus, the name of the traitor who delivered your Beloved Master into the hands of His enemies has caused you to be forgotten by many, but the Church honors and invokes you universally as the Patron Saint of Hopeless cases and of things despaired of. Please pray for me who am so miserable. Make use I implore you of that particular privilege accorded to you to bring visible and speedy help where help is almost despaired of. Come to my assistance in this great need that I may receive the consolations and help of Heaven in all my necessities, trials and tribulations, particularly (here make your request) and that I may bless God with you and all the elect forever.

I promise you, O blessed St. Jude, to be ever mindful of this great favor and I will never cease to honor you as my special and powerful patron and to gratefully encourage devotion to you.

In thanksgiving for many answered prayers.

—S.G.H.

Miracle Prayer

Dear Heart of Jesus, in the past I have asked You for many favours. This time, I ask you this very special one (mention favour). Take it, dear Heart of Jesus, and place it within Your own broken heart where Your Father sees it. Then, in His merciful eyes, it will become Your favour, not mine. Amen. Say for three days, promise publication and favour will be granted.
