The Hyde Park Central River Neighborhood Association (HPCR) met recently and discussed, among other things, the recent lawsuit against the City of Boston concerning the Crane Ledge Woods development, also known as 990 American Legion Hwy.

The redevelopment includes 270 units in nine, three-story buildings with 331 parking spots. Many in the local Hyde Park and Roslindale neighborhoods have been opposed to this project from the outset, as local organizations contend that the Crane Ledge Woods, which sprouted after the quarry stopped work there, was the largest piece of greenspace in the neighborhood. Residents believe that reducing this greenspace, as the project intends, would decrease the quality of life for those in the neighborhood.

The Boston Planning and Development Agency (BPDA) determined twice last year that the plans submitted by the developer, Willow Bridge Property Group (formerly Lincoln Property Group) on behalf of the owner, the Jubilee Christian Church, were inadequate. Basically, the BPDA stated that the method of scooping out the land to create a level surface on which to build

Finally a groundbreaking at 3371 Washington St

Richard Heath

The groundbreaking for 3371 Washington St., the five-story, 39-unit senior supportive housing project, took place on May 30. What started out in 2017 as an endeavor to save a local business ended up meeting the larger need of senior supportive housing. In a classic case of irony, the celebration took place on the plaza of the now-defunct Turtle Swamp Brewery, which sued to stop the development. Property owner Monty Gold offered the site and was in the audience.

Jamaica Plain Neighborhood Development Corporation (JPNDC) Director of Real Estate Rebecca Mautner was appreciative. "I want to thank our neighbor, Monty Gold, for letting us use the space here," she said in her remarks.

The five-story building with one-bedroom apartments belied the drama that the development weathered; no fewer than eight Bulletin stories covered the ups and downs of the senior housing. The 3371 Washington project is a partnership of JPNDC and New Atlantic Development and the architects are Utile.

JPNDC CEO Teronda Ellis opened the ceremony with a thank you. "I'm trying to think of the appropriate word," she said. "Culmination. This is really great. It began with two businesses that had been in the neighborhood a very long time [De Chain auto repair and El

BHIA block party draws a crowd

Susan Kryczka

Saturday, June 8 turned out to be a picture-perfect day for the Bellevue Hill Improvement Association (BHIA) block party in West Roxbury, the second in the organization's history. The first took place before the pandemic, roughly 10 years ago, and this second party was designed to reintroduce the organization to old and new neighbors with lots of enticements: free hot dogs, watermelon salad, popcorn, pizza, desserts, and a visit from a Boston Fire Department fire engine parked on Oriole Street, open for kids to explore and firefighters available to help navigate and answer questions.

The sunny, warm weather was the icing on the cake that brought out dozens of people from around the neighborhood during the three-hour event.

Ginny Gass, BHIA president greeted all via a loudspeaker, "I'm so happy people could join us today for our block party and membership drive. I welcome you all and hope we can become neighbors and friends forever."

The BHIA is not new to the neighborhood. "It's been in existence since the 1950s," said Gass, explaining the expanse of its coverage. "The param-

S+S zones, designs draw scrutiny

Matthew MacDonald
 Staff Reporter

On May 29 and June 5, the Boston Planning & Development Agency (BPDA) held two Squares + Streets (S+S) visioning sessions regarding Hyde Park's Cleary Square, marking its entry into the next phase of its six-to-nine-month planning process for the area.

The sessions focused on six categories – housing and real estate; small businesses; open space and resiliency; arts & culture; transportation; and built form/design and zoning – for which participants could provide their vision for Cleary Square.

The first session was in-person at the Muni and drew 25-30 attendees who rotated through the six topic tables. At each one, they spoke with BPDA specialists, who also led information gathering activities.

The second was a virtual version of the first, and drew about half-a-dozen people.

At both, built form/design and zoning drew the most attention. Zoning – specifically the rezoning that will take place within S+S planning areas as part of an effort to simplify the citywide code – has been the focus of ongoing pushback.

In April, six S+S zones were codified that are designed to encourage residential development and density by reducing or eliminating the need for Zoning Board of Appeal (ZBA) variances. Once implemented, they will also remove most, if not all, community leverage in questioning or opposing projects that meet these more relaxed guidelines.

During the sessions' built form/design and zoning discussions, BPDA staff provided sample images of S+S compliant buildings, and asked participants for their input. Generally, this led to articulated concerns and questions, creating a push and pull.

This was illustrated in discussions concerning a local BPDA approved sample brought up by residents at both events: the 1201 River St. development currently under construction. Located almost at the exact center of the Cleary Square planning area, and approved by the BPDA with no ZBA variances needed, it is viewed by some as an S+S harbinger.

The four-story, 63-unit building will stand at one corner of Logan Square, the most architecturally historic section of downtown Hyde Park. Nonetheless, its BPDA application bypassed a Landmarks Commission review, and its design has been said to be more in keeping with the S+S sample images than most of its neighboring structures.

The project also removed six of the seven first-floor commercial addresses on that block of River Street, and a car repair shop (a forbidden use in S+S zones) on Central Avenue.

As approved by the BPDA, the new building will have only one first-floor commercial space. It will also have a first-floor library and fitness room. This is notable because the Hyde Park branch of the Boston Public Library is around the corner from the property in one direction, and the Hyde Park YMCA is around the corner in the other direction.

“How big would the building have to be in order for us to get – I’m asking a stupid question, I know – to get our retail back on the first floor?” Hyde Park Board of Trade President Scott Batey asked of 1201 River and S+S projects during the Zoom discussion.

“What we’ve heard – and we did a bunch of research through our research department and some focus groups with developers and architects... and what we’ve heard is sometimes, if you require ground-floor use on smaller buildings, they end up not being successful, and then you get an empty storefront, and so we don’t want that, either,” Marin Braco, of the BPDA’s Urban Design Team, said.

“We just hope that that’s not replicated with each one of these developments,” Batey said of the potential loss of prime commercial space due to BPDA approvals moving forward.

In the S+S zones, commercial ground floor use is not required until seven-story buildings are allowed, at which point 50 percent of its frontage would be dedicated to active use.

Roslindale Coalition Coordinator Laurie Radwin addressed this issue as it applied to Roslindale Square. “My concern is that – to replicate some of the commercial space buildings that we have – all of a sudden we have to go to seven stories.”

“There’s a lot of... competing desires here,” Braco offered in response. “We want first-floor active uses. That creates a great sidewalk and makes a great experience walking down these corridors. The trick is that they don’t... They are not necessarily successful, financially, if you don’t have the right amount of density to support those businesses.”

“Somehow it’s working in Roslindale Square,” Radwin countered. “I don’t know how you tell a Rialto Barber Shop or a Lachapelle Barbershop that they’re not financially successful when they are.” She added that “it sort of argues for keeping – for some of our commercial district – Article 67 [Roslindale’s zoning] so we don’t have to worry about people having that struggle with what’s financially feasible, because it is right now.”

As the discussion continued, a time warning appeared onscreen, and one minute later, the zoning/design room discharged everyone automatically – unasked questions unanswered.

For information and a schedule of upcoming outreach events for Cleary and Roslindale squares, visit the Squares + Streets page on the BPDA website (www.bostonplans.org).

There will also be a community led Squares + Streets visioning session at 6 p.m. on Monday, June 24 at the Hyde Park Municipal Building/BCYF (1179 River St.).

ZBA approves 358 Chestnut Hill Ave. 91 Radcliffe Rd. defers

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Zoning Board of Appeals (ZBA) met recently and approved the demolition of the all commercial building at 358 Chestnut Hill Ave. in Brighton and replace it with a 30-unit, six-story residential building.

The Boston Planning and Development Agency (BPDA) approved the project last year for 30 rental units and 19 parking spaces. There is also about 1,000 square feet of commercial and retail proposed. The project has also seen additional architectural review from the Aberdeen Architectural Conservation District (AACD).

Attorney George Morancy, Embarc Architect Dan Artiges and City Realty Partner Josh Fetterman all spoke on behalf of the project. Artiges said originally they wanted to just put an addition of a few floors on the existing building, but he said the AACD intervened.

“Taking some of the design guidelines from the surrounding context was more interesting to them than maintaining the existing facade of the building and that’s the direction we went,” he said. “We tried to take some cues from the context of the area tying into the AACD. We’re tying the cornice line and break in massing with our neighborhood on Beacon and Chestnut Hill Avenue.”

Artiges said parking entrance and exits would remain the same, coming in from Chestnut Hill and exiting out of Englewood Avenue.

Morancy spoke to the zoning. The project has several zoning code violations, and Morancy said they are seeking zoning relief for having one unit on the ground floor, a street wall continuity violation, insufficient usable open space, excessive floor area ratio (building is too tall for its parcel plot)[FAR], insufficient parking, off-street loading area insufficient and tandem parking.

Morancy said the other buildings on the street also exceed the FAR, and that a street wall continuity violation has been approved by the AACD. For the open space violation, he

“FLUSHABLE” WIPES CAN CLOG YOUR PIPES

Wipes that claim to be “flushable” and “sewer safe” in fact are not sewer friendly. Unlike toilet paper, wipes do not break down as they travel through pipes and the public sewer system. Wipes can cause backups in your home plumbing and can cause sewer overflows in the street.

Fatherhood takes a tough hit

The movie “Love Story” came onto the national scene some 54 years ago. It resonated a lot with me, and not because I have any Harvard affiliation: unmarried at that time, I dreaded that I might suffer the same fate as Oliver Barrett IV. If you are familiar with the story, a young, Harvard-educated lawyer loses his young wife, a daughter of a Rhode Island Italian baker played by Ali MacGraw, to cancer right after they wed.

To me in my mid-twenties at the time of its release, the villain of the movie — besides an aggressive form of cancer — was Oliver’s father, a very proper father in a role played by Ray Milland. Oliver Barrett III was a very rich and proper Harvard grad whose relationship with his son, portrayed by the late Ryan O’Neal, was very strained.

However, as I age, I see flaws in the young Harvard undergrad and law-school grad that I hadn’t detected before. He’s very cold—icy cold—to his Dad, always referring to him as “Sir” or “Father” rather than the affectionate word “Pop” or “Dad”. Perhaps the Ray Milland character had brought this on himself by trying to steer Ollie (as the love of his life, Jenny Cavalleri, refers to him, when not addressing him as “preppy”) to Harvard’s law school and by the proposal to make phone calls to enable his entry therein. But it’s the last scene in this Erich Segal drama that steers me to question the response from the newly widowed lawyer.

My Kind of Town/
Joe Galeota

When meeting his father, who has traveled from suburban Boston to New York City to be with his son and, presumably, his dying daughter-in-law, Ryan O’Neal, exiting from Mt. Sinai Hospital, reveals to his father that Jenny had just passed. His father solemnly responds with two simple but heartfelt words, “I’m sorry.”

The whole theme of the book/movie is the contentious, “Love means never having to say you’re sorry.” Who among us hasn’t debated the pseudo-truth of this simple sentence? The new widower throws that sentence, which characterized his relationship with his beloved Jenny, right back at his father. But what else is a father-in-law supposed to say to a grieving son whose beloved wife has just passed? You tell me. Oliver Barrett III did not deserve to be treated this way.

Happy Father’s Day to all you deserving Dads!

pointed to the Chestnut Hill Reservoir just across the street as more than making up for that lack of space in the building.

For the lack of parking, he pointed to the two B and C lines of the MBTA Green Line just north and south of the property.

Morancy also said five of the 30 units will be designated as affordable under the Boston Inclusionary Development Policy (IDP). Two of those units will be two-bedroom units.

Office of Neighborhood Services representative Conor

Newman said concerns around greenspace were raised at recent meetings, but said the concerns there were “pretty light.”

The president of the Brighton Allston Improvement Association, Annabelle Gomes, said the association was on record in support. “We think this is a good change of commercial use to residential use,” she said.

Several other residents spoke in support of the project, with no one at the meeting in opposition.

The Board voted unanimously to approve the project.

The Board also voted to defer a proposed two-family dwelling on a vacant lot at 91 Radcliffe Rd. The violations for the proposal are not enough usable open space, insufficient front, side and rear yard setback, and lot area insufficient.

Attorney representing the project, Derric Small, said they were seeking a deferral because there were changes made to the plans and the Inspectional Services Department representative has not yet reviewed those plans. The project was deferred until the July 30 meeting of the ZBA.

Embajador Dominican restaurant]. Since then times are changing.

“It began with marching in the streets to show the level of respect these businesses deserved,” Ellis said. “You did that. I’m here to welcome you for your work.”

Ellis was referring to the celebrated Nov. 21, 2017 march down Green Street to El Embajador for an “Eat-In” by about 150 people.

City Realty(CRM) bought the building in 2016 in preparation for a new development. CRM has many properties that it has developed or is redeveloping throughout Boston and beyond.

CRM said it was relocating the businesses. City Life, which organized the march back then, thought otherwise and said the businesses were being evicted.

Ellis said “JPNDC was asked to take a look at the site. “We talked with our friends at Mass, Senior Action Council,” and JPNDC ended up buying the building from CRM on Jan. 21, 2021 for $2.155 million.

“It’s very unusual for us to buy a market-rate property,” Ellis, who was incoming director, said at the time.

“So here we are; a place for seniors, a place for seniors to age with dignity and grace.”

Ellis added, “We were [also] talking with our [Union Avenue] neighbors day-in-and-day-out with our organizers Giovanni Valancia and Sam Montano.”

Montano is now the state representative for Jamaica Plain and began at JPNDC as an organizer; one of her first assignments was 3371 Washington St.

“This is community organizing 101,” Montano said, and recounted the hours with Valencia in door-to-door conversations with Union Avenue neighbors led by Marie Turley who were very critical of the proposal.

Organizing was only partly successful, the three or four Union Avenue opponents (whose meetings are not public) succeeded in reducing the building down from six stories to five with a loss of six apartments; they pushed at several community meetings to go down to four stories, which was unsuccessful.

New Atlantic said that was simply financially unfeasible.

Allegedly after pressure from Union Avenue, the BPDA delayed its December 2020 vote. At the rescheduled Jan. 14 2021 vote to approve the Article 80 process, board member (and JP resident) Ted Landsmark was moved to add “just a comment.”

“We’re getting a lot of calls from the neighbors because there’s so much development in the neighborhood,” he said.

“I strongly encourage [the developers] to work with some of the long-term residents who want to work with you.”

Turley would not go on the record with comment on the groundbreaking.

John Lincenum of Turtle Swamp Brewery didn’t seem to want to work with JPNDC/NA. He wanted to stop them. He sued right after the ZBA vote. An agreement was reached in June 2022 which caused the architects to move the abutting wall back five feet. Turtle Swamp shut down a year later.

Ramona Alvarez and Juan Tejada of El Embajador didn’t seem to want to work with JPNDC/NA either. Despite seeing that a new, purpose-built restaurant space was planned for them on the ground floor of 3371, they decided to move to a new location in February 2023.

JPNDC is now stuck with an empty, ground-floor, street-front space which may be turned into a community room. There are three rear apartments.

“El Embajador was key to acquiring 3371 Washington St.,” Ellis said at the time, “It’s what led us to buy the building.”

Governor Maura Healy said she did want to work with JPNDC/NA. On March 29, 2023 she awarded the first funding of $10 million tax credit grant that enabled JPNDC to fund investors (Boston Financial bought the credits).

Of the 39 units, 24 would have project-based subsidies and 15 will be leased at 60 percent area median income (AMI).

Chief of Housing Sheila Dillon came to the podium and spoke the obvious. “This is a long time coming. The longest predevelopment process to get the funding,” she said. “I know I’m talking to the choir here, but this is badly needed housing. Unprecedented. I get more calls. Buildings change hands and seniors can’t stay.”

“A project like this is so important,” Dillon said. “I’ve never seen such need and I’ve been doing this a long time.”

JPNDC board member Bashier Kayou apparently can’t wait either. “This is a good fight to have,” he said. “Our seniors are our most important members of the community:

“This means a lot to me. I’m going to be a senior myself. Let’s celebrate!”

was not up to the city's design standards, among other issues that were not, at least on the face of it, related to neighborhood concerns (too many parking spaces and 40-foot retaining walls etc.). It also contended that the plans to create ambulance access to the site and public access to a lookout bluff through the same dirt roadway were not up to "snuff either."

Now, Willow and Jubilee are suing the city and the BPDA. Crane Ledge Woods Coalition member James Michel said he is happy to see the city standing firm. "They accused them of overstepping their authority, and we believe the city has acted in the best interests of the community and within its right," he said, "we being those of us who have been organizing around saving Crane Ledge Woods."

The lawsuit contends that the proponents have done a lot of work to comply with the BPDA's "onerous" demands. The project was submitted as an as-of-right project back in 2021, and so it would not have needed additional public meetings and review through the Zoning Board of Appeals. However, the lawsuit contends that without the BPDA's adequacy determination, the project is basically in limbo, as the Boston Inspectional Services Department (ISD) will not issue either an approval of the plan as-of-right or a denial that would start them down the ZBA zoning variance process.

It should be noted that the project was denied its adequacy determination twice, and the second time the BPDA all but admonished the developer for simply resubmitting the project and not substantially changing it to respond to the initial adequacy determination denial. Several instances of phrases like "As mentioned in previous correspondence" and "The response you point us to still does not respond to the initial (sp) statement that will be reiterated here" were included in the BPDA's second denial of adequacy, which can be found at <https://tinyurl.com/2393a8jc>.

Still, the lawsuit contends that the developers have done enough to satisfy the requirements of the city and they are getting the runaround. It also contends that the design changes the BPDA proposed in subsequent communications regarding the adequacy determination would require the project to seek zoning variances.

The basis of the lawsuit is that the city is restricting and/or limiting the plaintiff's present or future use, enjoyment, improvement or development of the site. The lawsuit also asks the court to determine that the BPDA's adequacy determination is unreasonable and would unnecessarily force the proponents into a project that needs zoning relief.

"This is nothing new for the city and they've been down this road before," she said. "Ultimately, it's because they felt the BPDA has overstepped its authority for not approving their project. It happens."

Michel said residents need to remain vigilant if they want to stop the development.

"There will be more to come I'm sure, but thanks to the administration for protecting that property so far, and let's support them," he said.

In other news, Neponset River Access Committee and Southwest Boston Community Development Corporation member Suzanne Hinton said residents interested in helping to improve the river and residents' access to it should reach out to the group.

"Get out there, take a walk, have a little walk'n'talk and have a chat with us," she said. "Please reach out; we'd love to know who you are what you have to offer."

The group's social media can be found at <https://www.facebook.com/HPnepriverAC/>, and Hinton can be reached via email at Shinton@SWBCDC.org.

She also pointed out that the Neponset River Watershed Association (NepRWA) recently ripped out "yards and yards and yards" of chain link fence along West Street near the waterway.

"That corresponds to no property line we can find," she said. "It's from the end of West Street from where it dead-ends at the river and up to Railroad Avenue, it's all been removed. It's baby steps, and I know a lot of people advocated for the removal of fences and kudos to you. It's happened."

Lastly, HPCR Chair Melanie Daye said the group is looking to host a block party on Aug. 18 from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m.

"It's just 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. to close the streets, but we can do it the whole night too," Daye said.

eters of the association include from Holy Name Church on Centre Street, all the way down to St. Teresa Avenue, up to Washington Street, down Washington to the West Roxbury Parkway and then down again to the Holy Name Rotary. Anyone who lives within the parameters can join the association. There's a lot going on in our neighborhood." BHIA sold $10 annual memberships at the party which also included a gift (a plant) and a free raffle ticket for a chance to win a massage, two Red Sox tickets, or another plant.

A new BHIA member making its presence felt in a different way was Pawsitive Pantry, a pet food pantry that had two large tables, a rack of pet coats and sweaters and boxes filled with pet supplies on hand, available at no cost to those who find themselves unable to afford food or items for their pets.

"The organization started in Vermont and expanded to Massachusetts," said Margaret "Maggie" Gander, a volunteer for the organization. "We wanted to be sure people didn't have to decide between feeding their pets and feeding their families. We keep the families and their pets intact, keeping them out of the shelters. All of the items we have are donated by neighbors, new or used, or by local pet stores like PetSmart in Westwood, or Pet Supplies Plus in West Roxbury... We are not reselling this. We are giving all of it away. People can take what they need."

The group also partners with Rose's Bounty, the local West Roxbury food pantry. "Later today we'll be there for their Saturday drive...we support their home-bound neighbors, and veterans."

Gander lives in the neighborhood and uses her garage to store many of the donated items until distribution.

Others came to visit with neighbors.

"It was a beautiful day and we wanted to connect with all the neighbors in the association and get to know new neighbors to just chat, catch up on what's going on in the neighborhood," said Steve Huska, who came with his son and a friend and heard about the block party through flyers and neighbors who told him about it.

District 6 City Councilor Ben Weber was also in attendance along with Mark Cohen, a longtime West Roxbury resident who works part-time as a West Roxbury Liaison for the city.

"This is absolutely the best part of my job," laughed Cohen. "When somebody calls me up and says come out on a Saturday to a block party, meet some neighbors, have a hot dog and enjoy what has turned out to be an absolutely magnificent day!

You really kind of get to know people. In government there is a lot of criticism about our losing touch. So, this is the kind of thing we love to do. Look at the groups of people, lots of people smiling and talking to each other...This is an opportunity to do something completely different that is so healthy."

"This made more sense than a membership meeting, let's do some block parties, let's get neighbors to meet neighbors, a lot of them moved here recently," said Paul Nivens, a West Roxbury resident and member of the BHIA Board of Directors, explaining how the decision was made to host a block party. "I've lived here for more than 50 years...we raised our family here. It's a chance to give back."

Nivens said he feels the biggest issues facing the neighborhood are transportation cut throughs and the public school system. These he knows must and will be addressed in order to prevent families from leaving the city.

Many attending the block party lingered a long time to continue conversations, eat, and soak up more sun. For those interested in Pawsitive Pantry volunteer activities or may need pet supplies, more information is available at <https://pawsitivepantry.org/> For more information about the BHIA go to <https://bellevuehill.org/>

FRIEDLAND

Karen J., of West Roxbury, passed away peacefully on April 14 after a 2½ year battle with ovarian cancer. She was 60 years old. She will be sorely missed by friends, family and neighbors, her mother Linda and sister Susan, her dogs Layla and Cookie and cat Henry, and her beloved husband of 25 years, Rich. Karen loved nothing more than traveling the vast expanses of her own small neighborhood, chatting with neighbors, admiring their gardens, and watching the seasons change. She tended lovingly to her plentiful houseplants and loved watching her outdoor garden thrive, with the help of carefully directed hole-digging by her husband. The small "teacup palace" 1930 home she shared with Rich was carefully and beautifully curated with Karen's inspired vision and a comforting mixture of houseplants in every room, rescued antiques, and unique artwork from open studios and eBay, covering every wall. Karen will be missed by thousands of friends far and wide, "IRL" and online. She leaves behind two volumes of poetry, Places That Are Gone (Nixes Mate Books), Tales from the Teacup Palace (Cervena Barva Press), and a posthumous third collection, as well as millions of dollars in grants raised for small nonprofits (Karen's "day job" for over 20 years). Her myriad posts on Facebook expressed her generous spirit, with a focus on peace, nature, art, beauty, ethical values, humor and kindness. Karen was battling pain for 15 years, it seemed, through two knee surgeries, fibroid surgery, painful adhesions, and ultimately cancer, but her spirit barely dimmed, and in her typical fashion, she turned it into art. Even through her suffering, she remained strong and openhearted, sharing her experience so that others could learn from her example of grace in the face of existential challenge. Not surprisingly, Karen responded to her cancer diagnosis in 2021 with a deep dive into dozens of books about disease, treatments, natural cures, spirituality, coping, and acceptance. Karen was one of the most empathetic persons one could ever hope to meet. She felt deeply the pain of every felled tree, every abused animal, every sick acquaintance. She was clever, caring, witty and wise. She was an exceptional human being, and the world is a lesser place with her passing. "Her absence is like the sky, spread over everything." - C.S. Lewis Karen wanted to express her gratitude to her devoted care team at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center, her beloved nurses, oncologists, therapists and hospice teams, too numerous to be mentioned individually, but truly appreciated. Friends are welcome to attend a celebration of Karen's life on Sunday, April 21 at 2:30pm, at The Gardens at Gethsemane Cemetery in West Roxbury, MA. Casual attire is encouraged. We'll gather at the Visitor Center and proceed from there. As an expression of sympathy, memorial contributions may be made to Cats Rule Feline Rescue, or Angelitos Sanctuario Animal Rescue. ZAGAMI

Helen M. With heavy hearts we announce the passing of Helen Marie (Ross) of Hyde Park, Massachusetts, who died at age 89, on May 31, after a long and happy life. Helen was a cherished figure of love, devotion, warmth, generosity and selflessness to her family and friends. Born on October 6, 1934 in Digby, Nova Scotia, Helen moved with her parents and siblings to Dorchester, Massachusetts, at a young age, where she met, grew up with and married her childhood sweetheart, Leo Zagami, whom she has now peacefully rejoined with in Heaven. She was the adored mother of Robert Zagami and his wife, Kathleen Zagami of Madison, CT and Linda Abichaker and her late husband, David Abichaker of West Roxbury, MA. A devoted grandmother, she nurtured her grandchildren, Peter Abichaker and his husband, Tuan Do of Fullerton, CA, Christine Walsh and her husband, Matthew of Bedford, NH and Katelyn and Rocco Zagami of Madison, CT. Her great-grandsons, Oliver and Nathan Walsh, found great joy in their time spent with "great-grandma"; and she is survived by many loving nieces, nephews, in-laws and friends. Helen was preceded in death by siblings, Eileen (Ross) McGrath and her husband, Buddy McGrath of Weymouth, MA, Marjorie Ross of Hyde Park, Roy Ross of Hyde Park, MA and Katherine "Rosie" Ross of Hyde Park, MA. Helen's memory will be cherished by all who knew and loved her. Funeral from the Robert J. Lawler & Crosby Funeral Home, 1803 Centre St., WEST ROXBURY. Interment in St. Joseph Cemetery, West Roxbury. Lawler & Crosby Funeral Home 617-323-5600.

Miracle Prayer
 Dear Heart of Jesus, in the past I have asked You for many favours. This time, I ask you this very special one (mention favour). Take it, dear Heart of Jesus, and place it within Your own broken heart where Your Father sees it. Then, in His merciful eyes, it will become Your favour, not mine. Amen. Say for three days, promise publication and favour will be granted.
 —V.C.

Prayer to the Blessed Virgin
(Never known to fail!)
 Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine, splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in this necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my mother. Oh Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth, I humbly beseech thee from the bottom of my heart to succor me in my necessity (make request). There are none that can withstand your power. Oh Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (three times). Holy Mary, I place this cause in your hands (three times). Say this prayer for three consecutive days and then you must publish and it will be granted to you.
 —V.C.
