UpLift JP celebrates two Black women owned businesses

Those of a certain age will remember Pearl's Candies, Hailer's Pharmacy, Barry's Deli, Woolworth's and Brighams in the Centre Street business district; today it's Vee-Vee, Purple Cactus, Noodle Barn, JP Licks and Boomerangs.

Most recently, it's two Black women-owned businesses Cada Dia Mini Café on Burroughs Street and Nckls and Dimes VX next to City Feed and Supply.

To highlight these two businesses, both of which opened in December 2020, Centre South Main Streets created UpLift, and the first UpLift event was held at Cada Dia at 7 Burroughs St. on March 19.

The second followed on April 23 at Nckls and Dimes, a boutique clothing and accessories store at 688 Centre St.

A few days after the Nckls and Dimes event, Center South Main Streets director Ginger Brown talked with The Bulletin.

"I felt that both events were successful; both well attended and brought a lot of attention to these particular businesses," she said. "These events are a new thing for us, so we're work shopping what our goals will be going forward. For the past two events it was about celebrating businesses in our district that were owned by Black women.

"We would like to keep the focus on business owners who are people of color," Brown went on. "However, we may decide to broaden that focus; we're still trying to nail down what will be our long-term goal for the series."

Brown paused to explain her broader concern.

"On a personal level, these events give me pause to ask myself if our organization is doing enough for our POC business owners and employees. Is there more that we could be doing?" she said.

"Are there ways we have let them down in the past? I have gotten comments from passersby that they are glad we are doing this. So that makes me feel it is a success."

Cada Dia Mini Café owner Nicole Gunn opened her smoothies, teas and assorted pastries shop in December 2020.

As Gunn told Boston.com shortly after opening, the colors of the shop's logo, blue, white, yellow and red are taken from the Aruban flag in honor of her family's roots on that Caribbean island.

Hot or cold teas ranging from green tea, mango, lemon, peach and even grape tea dot the menu board.

The Bulletin stopped by the

Cada Dia UpLift event on Saturday March 19 and joined the bustling crowd of 25 to 30 people in the shop and on the sidewalk.

Gunn invited two other Black-owned "pop up" businesses to attend, including Clarke's Bakery who sold their homemade cookies.

Also attending were Segun Idowu, Chief of Economic Opportunity and Inclusion, and City Councilors Julia Mejia and Ruthzee Louijeune.

Idowu was the keynote speaker at the March 23 Center South Main Streets annual meeting; Gunn is a Center South Main Streets board member.

Idowu did not respond to The Bulletin for comment on the two UpLift events. Gunn told the Bulletin a few days later that she thought the day was a success.

HP hosts environmental/racial justice forum

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

About 70 members of the Hyde Park community came together at the Racial Equity and Justice Forum in a virtual forum recently focusing on Climate Justice and to discuss how Hyde Park can deal with the environmental and cultural scars of the area's industrial past.

The forum centered on several panelists, moderated by State Rep. Rob Consalvo, to discuss how the community could focus its efforts more effectively.

Panelists and community members alike pointed to areas around the city that have been historically ignored by City Hall, mainly areas of Black, Latino and immigrant populations. These areas have higher instances of heavy industrial areas around them, as well as higher rates of pollution and heat.

Alternatives for Community and Environment Executive Director Dwaigh Tyndal summed up the problem. He said the effects of environmental racism are plain and simple.

"We die," he said. "We have shorter life expectancy. Just check

Cummins, American Legion traffic top concerns

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Southwest Boston Civic Association (SWBCA) met virtually on April 19 and discussed the ongoing issues of traffic on Cummins Highway and American Legion Highway.

Resident Adriana Cillo shared her experience with the relatively new lane reduction at American Legion Highway between Walk Hill Street to the south and Canterbury Street to the north. She said she felt the lane reduction going both ways to make room for a bike lane was misguided at best by the city.

"I brought that up because I ride American Legion in the morning to go to work, in the afternoon to return and at other times, at least three or four times a day," she said. "And it's just crazy that all of a sudden you're going two lanes and don't even realize it's one lane. A couple of times during the snow storm I almost got

IAG tentatively supports 119 Braintree

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Boston Planning and Development Agency (BPDA) recently hosted an Impact Advisory Group (IAG) meeting for the proposed office and residential spaces at 119 Braintree St. in Allston.

The proposal includes the construction of a community dog park, a 12-story, 401,000-square-foot lab/office building and an 86,400-square-foot, 97-unit residential building (residential is on the south side of Braintree; the office on the north).

The dog park is an amenity of the neighborhood that Allston and Brighton residents had been pushing for at least since before the COVID-19 pandemic. This will be located underneath the Everett Street Bridge with bike storage to the north of it, a viewing platform to the east and a lawn and cafe plaza east of that.

Architect Connor Cunningham, of Mikyoung Kim Design, said the dog park

Thrift Shop donates to Little Wanderers

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Thrift Shop of Boston, located in Roslindale Square, donated $150,000 to the Home for Little Wanderers recently as part of the group’s annual contribution to the charity.

The Home for Little Wanderers houses, educates and supports programming for hundreds of Boston youth. The Thrift Shop is a volunteer-driven organization bent on taking in donations from around the city and selling them at reduced prices to residents in need. The Thrift Shop was founded in 1926 by a group of friends collecting for charities.

Thrift Store President Dan Singleton said the day was all about celebrating volunteers.

“People choose to volunteer for a variety of reasons. For some it gives them the chance to give back to their community and for others it provides an opportunity to develop new skills or build on existing experience and knowledge,” he said. “This is an example of the impact of volunteers and how they can contribute to and benefit their organization.”

Home for Little Wanderers President Lesli Suggs said she was amazed at the work the Thrift Store was able to pull off this past year.

“I really am overwhelmed, thank you so much,” she said. “The last two years have really been an unprecedented time to be in the world. All you do every single year is step up to serve the kids at the Home, our families and our communities. I’m just so in awe of this. Every time I go into the Thrift Store the culture is just so welcoming. And I can’t leave until I buy something!”

Suggs said the funding the Thrift Store raised will go a long way to help the Home serve its student population.

“The kids we serve are really vulnerable children,” she said. “The mental health crisis that was circling us before the pandemic has truly become a state of crisis. The Surgeon General recently issued a report concerning the crisis of mental health for kids. Organizations like the Home, we have to be able to be on the front line to be able to help those kids. We're the largest provider of mental health services in the Boston Public Schools. In Boston Public Schools alone during the pandemic, 50 percent of kids disengaged from school. Twenty-five percent just completely disappeared and 25 percent were just spotty. We're in those schools to keep those kids engaged in their learning and helping them to deal with those stressors they have in the home, ensuring that for many of them the school is their happy space. Those services were vital during the pandemic."

Singleton said despite the good haul of $150,000, and the projected $50,000 extra coming up in December, they're always looking to improve and evolve.

"It's a challenge sometimes because we're overwhelmed with so much product," he said. "Clothing, furniture, brick-a-brac and the like, it's very difficult but I think it's important that we strive to do better regarding some things. And we're always open to ideas from everyone, and that's staff, management and volunteers."

Singleton added the organization will soon be installing a conveyor belt to help in the sorting and transfer of products.

Singleton added that he is eternally grateful for the effort of the volunteers who come in every week to make the Thrift Shop a living and breathing organization. "We could not do this without your hard work and we're forever thankful for the time you have given us and, truly, you have made a difference," he said.

Thrift Store manager Chris Roth said he could not believe the support they saw in the last two years, especially during the height of the pandemic.

"Day in and day out, despite the pandemic, coming in and doing the work," he said. "It's not easy work. You have to have a certain mindset that no matter what you do more is going to come in. One thing our volunteers really have in common is you're willing to go and tackle those piles. I just wanted to say we really are a team and everybody on this team has been super important and vital to what we do."

Roth said in the last year, the Thrift Shop's volunteers have contributed 3,312 hours of volunteerism.

"That volunteer effort allows us to give even more to the Home for Little Wanderers," he said. "We sold 147,513 items, almost 150,000 items in the shop over one year. And that's just what we sell; we process quite a lot more than that. It's really a community effort to do what we do and it's a credit on our volunteers. Thank you so much."

out Back Bay versus Roxbury and you'll see the difference. Those are generational environmental racism issues that impact Roxbury. That's why asthma is such a widespread illness in our communities, and it's why when the pandemic happened, the fatalities in East Boston or Roxbury should have been expected because of the impacts of environmental racism. Environmental racism kills, and we have the numbers to back that up, but not the political will to make the necessary changes."

Panelist and Roseberry Ruskindale Road Neighborhood Association Chair Lokita Jackson pointed to statistics from a 2017 report on racial environmental discrimination (<https://bit.ly/3KZ12Xs>) that details how marginalized populations reside in areas with higher amounts of pollution and disease than white counterparts. She said Boston was no different, but change is coming.

"Thankfully, we're having cleanup operations in the Neponset River and in the community of Hyde Park, but I feel like other areas had that benefit much sooner," she said.

Resident and WBUR host Jose Masso said accountability needs to be at the forefront of their efforts, so as to ensure lasting gains from the work. He said laws and government actions are all fine and good, but if they're just there for a few months or one year and then quickly forgotten about, then they're just window dressing.

"We need to engage our elected officials unapologetically to take a stand that says 'We will be on the right side of environmental justice,'" he said.

he said. "We need that kind of public will toward public officials and we need to say, 'If you are going to be in our way, we're going to find someone who will do what we ask to be done, and therefore say sayonara. Adios. See you later. And so on the one side, I think the policies are there, but what's missing is the public will.'"

Tyndall said he felt the way to keep enforcement up is to keep public interest and public awareness up in the community through direct action.

"We need to think about it in a much more proactive way," he said. "I mean talking is good, but we need action. That's what civil rights movements were all about, taking actions and moving forward. I think there are a lot of folks on this call that we have got to have items that we move on and gain momentum to attract people to the table."

Masso said that the group has to think outside the neighborhood and gain support outside the immediate community. He said neighborhood coalitions can be a powerful thing, and reminded residents that what happens in Hyde Park can have ramifications across the city, and the other way around.

"We can't afford to lose these assets, such as Crane Ledge, that will ultimately affect our community and other communities because we are an ecosystem," he said. "It's going to affect East Boston, the Seaport, Chinatown, Dorchester, Mattapan and Roxbury, and vice versa."

On the subject of Crane Ledge - the project known as 990 American Legion Hwy. according to the Boston Planning and Development Agency (<https://bit.ly/3N0VjSA>) - Hyde Park Board of Trade President Scott Batey asked about the status of the project and whether there is a chance at all that the city will be able to buy the property for the purpose of open space.

"If the money was on the table, the $24 million that the city could use to buy it, have they (current owners) agreed that they would walk away from Lincoln Properties and deal with the city directly?" he asked. "Somewhere I read that they wouldn't do that. Are we at a total stalemate at this point? Is the church willing to deal with the city even if the city has the money?"

Chief of Environment, Energy and Open Space Mariama White-Hammond said as far as the city knows, the property is under agreement with Lincoln Development, but added there is now a $10 million line item on the city budget dedicated to the acquisition of open space. Jackson pointed out that in business nothing is likely set in stone.

"We're not sure if that contract (between the property owner and Lincoln Properties) has an exit clause, but we would assume it does," she said. "Such contracts usually do, and so we're not privy to what the ideal asking amount is. We have posed that question, but we don't have clarity around that or if there is a penalty for exiting the contract or how much that penalty is. We would be interested in knowing that information, because maybe a deal could be struck. We just don't know."

Jackson added that the 24-acres of greenspace, 14 of which would be lost to the development, are all that stands between local residents and increased asthma rates and pollution, as the trees and greenspace are known to clean the air around their environs.

"We're in a community around the 24 acres of Crane Ledge Woods, and studies have shown that we are in the 95th to 100th percentile of Massachusetts residents who have respiratory issues, such as asthma or COPD," she said.

WR Artwalk needs artists

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The West Roxbury Main Streets (WRMS) is hosting an artwalk through the business district, and the organization needs your help.

If you or someone you know is an aspiring artist, WRMS Executive Director Jacob Robinson is asking you to go to <https://bit.ly/3weDEQn> and fill out the online application to begin placing your art in the windows of West Roxbury businesses.

“We’re accepting all mediums, but the goal is to have the artworks be facing the street from the interior of the storefronts,” he said. “We’ll work with each participating business with their unique space constraints.”

The actual Artwalk is scheduled for June 10 through June 25, and Robinson said they already have several local businesses lined up to display the work. “We’re still in the process of getting businesses signed up but we’re hoping for a good showing,” he said.

Robinson said they are looking for as many aspiring artists as they can get for the show. “Then the Artwalk Committee will match artists with the businesses,” he said.

Robinson said they have seen the idea work in other communities in and around Boston, but never in West Roxbury. “The idea was suggested to us by one of our sponsors, Brookline Bank, who is also involved in this event to help plan,” he said. “We did also speak with some other artwalk groups for lessons, insights we could apply to this. We’ve certainly drawn from the experience of other communities that have hosted artwalks and we’re hoping for a successful event and a good experience for everyone involved in our show.”

Robinson said the businesses and residents they’ve talked to are already pretty excited about the event.

“We had hoped to put this event on back in May of 2020, and we were fairly far along in our planning when the world changed,” he said. “But I think the businesses are still excited about this. The idea behind this event is to drive more foot traffic up and down the Main Streets District while also providing an opportunity for local artists to display their art-

Robinson said they are also exploring the idea of murals, but that would be a long way off.

“We reached out to the Mayor’s Mural Crew and they were just in the process of re-launching that program,” he said. “I don’t know what kind of support we’ll get from the city on that, but we’re always looking and talking with different businesses and privately-owned buildings to see if there’s interest in a mural.”

Robinson said the deadline for artist applications is this Friday, May 13 at 6 p.m. For more information on WRMS, go to wrms.org.

Miracle Prayer

Dear Heart of Jesus, in the past I have asked You for many favours. This time, I ask you this very special one (mention favour). Take it, dear Heart of Jesus, and place it within Your own broken heart where Your Father sees it. Then, in His merciful eyes, it will become Your favour, not mine. Amen. Say for three days, promise publication and favour will be granted.

hit by a snowplow. And in normal times the traffic is just unbelievable. People speed in front of others to switch lanes. Others just don't bother to give you a chance to get in. It's just very dangerous. It has to go back the other way."

Cillo said bikes and bike lanes are great but she seldom sees the lanes on American Legion utilized.

"Maybe it's the time I travel, but I've never seen one person with a bike," she said. "Even the way it is it's not safe for the bikers."

Member Dennis Kirkpatrick said public input is required and needed for projects like these.

"As you may be aware, Cummins Highway has had similar mitigation put in place for over a year. However that existing plan has been recalled and it's being rebuilt," he said. "I attended one of the hearings on this with the Transportation Department and the stretch of Cummins Highway from Mattapan Square to Harvard Street, where Canniff Monuments is, is going to get rebuilt and, in brief summary, they're going to have one lane instead of two; they're going to have some left-hand turning lanes at major intersections and certain streets with intersections are going to be combined – in other words, your stop line is going to be removed. But the big takeaway I got from this is sidewalks are going to be widened, parking is for the most part going to be retained, but the bicycle lane is going to be moved to be on the same grade as the sidewalk and not on the street. And so that might be something people want to advise to the Transportation Department."

Kirkpatrick said dedicated paths for the bicycles rather than putting them in the traffic would be preferable, at least in his mind.

At-Large City Councilor Julia Mejia said she also drives on American Legion every day to get her daughter to school.

"I agree with Adriana, it is crazy," she said. "It is also very challenging because sometimes when you're going to turn, there are people who come out of the woodwork and if you aren't paying attention they can side-swipe you immediately."

Mejia recommended lobbying Chief of Streets Jascha Franklin-Hodge for a study regarding what's been happening on American Legion and how the changes haven't really helped anyone. She also suggested rallying the community to bring this conversation to the forefront.

"I know there's been several accidents on that strip and I think there needs to be an evaluation of it to see if the vision was realized in the results," she said. "In January, our office hosted a Town Hall to discuss the center bus lane down the Blue Hill Avenue Corridor and we had an amazing turnout. It was an opportunity for the community, business owners, pedestrians, residents and commuters to all have the same conversation. And so I think there is an opportunity for folks in Ward 18 and West Roxbury and Roslindale and the folks in that area to host a community conversation alongside the administration to really impact these issues further."

Resident and community organizer Laurie Radwin said she felt the data is already out there.

"I've been going to the Slow Streets meetings for the Roslindale Coalition, and I've learned a lot," she said. "Purportedly they use crash data, speeding data and surveys before they start building. I'm not sure they've done it in every case. I think waiting for an evaluation, with all due respect, is unnecessary. I think we've got the data. I've seen more postings about this lane change than ever. We've experienced the lane change, Councilor Mejia has experienced the lane change, and I think we need to have a meeting with the Chief of Streets just straight up and explain how we want to see that evaluation data."

The next meeting of the SWBCA will take place virtually on May 17 at 7 p.m. Go to <https://bit.ly/38o1gd1> to get into the public Zoom meeting.

was originally a play court for humans, not dogs. “But we got some feedback from the city and the community that we should take another look at that,” he said. “We worked with the city to see what the neighborhood needed and we ended up with a dog park at this location, which we think would be a benefit to the community at large.”

He said there would be a second-story plaza for the public to use that acts as a kind of in-between space going up with an access to the Everett Street Bridge through stairs and an elevator.

Developer David Bracken also said the affordable units, will be between 30 percent to 80 percent of the area median income (AMI), which is an uncommonly generous percentage.

Resident and IAG member Phoebe Cusack said she was happy with the design, especially with the recent change of moving the entrance to the residential building off of Braintree Street and onto the Old Everett Street.

“It was an excellent and necessary decision, given the way those streets feel in the evening,” she said, adding the design of the buildings and affordability of the residential building were also positives for the project. “I haven’t seen that range of AMI in one project where it feels like the people who live there who may be lower income, are going to get all the benefits of living in such a facility. I commend you on that as well.”

Cusack said, however, she did have some issues with the project, mainly of lighting.

“Anyone who’s been there knows that it’s terrible now, and anything you do is going to be an improvement, but we need to make sure it’s enough of an improvement,” she said. “I’d like to see what your lighting plan is going to look like and how that lighting is going to extend into the Stop & Shop project.”

The Stop & Shop project Cusack referred to is the Allston Yards project call for about 1,000 units and a couple hundred thousand square feet of office space.

“But I think this is going to make the neighborhood better than it is now,” she said.

Bracken said the park will be fully lit, even under the bridge.

Resident Jim Long said he was concerned that Braintree Street was going to be reduced from two lanes with parking on one side to just two travel lanes. Bracken said for deliveries at least, all deliveries and loading will be behind the building. “We once contemplated parking on Braintree Street or a zone for drop offs but what we’re showing right now is some landscaping with some bike opportunities,” he said. “The city has advised us to be flexible as things evolve, so don’t get completely bogged down in this exact design because they’re working through the design of Braintree Street from Everett Street all the way down to Pizzeria Regina.”

Bracken said other improvements to the area include the removal of billboards, the widening of sidewalks on Braintree Street, the creation of 1,000 construction jobs, the creation of 1,500 new permanent jobs and the reduction of the heat island effect through green building and the park.

business,” she said. “We wanted to celebrate and it brought out a lot of new people.”

Cada Dia opened as one of the two ground-floor commercial spaces at 7 Burroughs St.

Completed in 2020, 7 Burroughs has six condominiums on the upper three stories; it is the first residential building built in the business district in a century.

Seven Burroughs replaced an auto repair garage razed in 2017; Nckls and Dimes VX is in the old Kennedy Butter and Egg store that closed in January 2000 after popular proprietor Bob Allen lost his lease.

Nckls and Dimes VX was the next UpLift event held on April 23.

“Our next UpLift event,” read the press release, “will be at Nckels and Dimes an urban clothing company with a focus on one-of-a-kind affordable attire.”

Owned by Brie Pullum, an Egleston Square native from Cleaves Court, the Nckls and Dimes event scheduled a curbside fashion show to show off the clothing for sale inside.

About 25 people mingled about when The Bulletin arrived in time for the fashion show.

Representative and state senate candidate Nika Elugardo, Mayors Office Liaison Tiffani Caballero and Mc’Kel Mc Millan from Councilor Kendra Lara’s office also joined in the event.

The Bulletin talked with Pullum later in the week.

“We call this a boutique,” she said. “We design some of our own clothes. We buy fabrics from LA and Atlanta; one-of-a-kind pieces. No tailor-made stuff yet. We got some good sales [during UpLift]. It helped build awareness of this type of business, the things we offer,” she said.

“We’re the only two Black women-owned businesses,” Pullum said, referring to Cada Dia. “UpLift was necessary to show the things we both offer.”

Pullum has one worry. “Some people think we’re too expensive,” she said, “Not true. We have $10 T shirts. We cater to the community. We have hoodies, scarves, women’s tops.”

The next UpLift event will be in May.

“We’re trying to secure a location,” Brown said. “We haven’t gotten confirmation from the businesses that we asked. We’re aiming at May 21.”

“We want to uplift our businesses,” she said. “I can say that UpLift will be a continuing event.”

Prayer to the Blessed Virgin

(Never known to fail!)

Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine, splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in this necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my mother. Oh Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth, I humbly beseech thee from the bottom of my heart to succor me in my necessity (make request). There are none that can withstand your power. Oh Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (three times). Holy Mary, I place this cause in your hands (three times). Say this prayer for three consecutive days and then you must publish and it will be granted to you. —C.J.
