BPD addresses recent armed robberies HP, WR experiencing similar crimes

The Hyde Park Neighborhood Association (HPNA) met at the Municipal Building/BCYF (1179 River St.) on March 2, and drew about 10 attendees for the hour and a half session.

District 5 City Councilor Ricardo Arroyo was not on the agenda, but had originally been scheduled as the featured speaker. At the start of the meeting, HPNA President Mimi Turchinetz announced that he would be postponing until April, and cited the rent control hearing he was chairing that day which had run long enough to conflict with the meeting.

During the February HPNA meeting, Arroyo's director of research, policy, and budget had come under heavy and critical questioning regarding the Councilor's proposed tree ordinance. For the most part, those questions went unanswered, and Turchinetz explained that she had hoped to have the man himself in to talk with the group prior to the City

Changes made to BMS Paper project

Richard Heath
Staff Reporter

The first public meeting in two years for the BMS Paper Development was convened by the Boston Planning and Redevelopment Agency (BPDA) on March 9 for the Impact Advisory Group (IAG) to review the changes proposed by the developer.

As reported at length by The Bulletin, BMS Paper development was first introduced by owner Bob Harrington to the Stonybrook Neighborhood Association (SNA) on Jan. 13, 2020 and a Letter of Intent was filed with the BPDA on Aug. 20, 2020.

The new BPDA project manager, Michael Sinatra, introduced four of the seven IAG members before turning the presentation over to the development consultant and former BPDA project manager Chris Tracy.

"It's been a long journey," he said. "The project has matured in a good way."

The major components, housing, restaurant, retail paper and maintenance products and grocery remain, but the master plan has changed. Instead of one large building, there are now two smaller buildings with a total of 78 units, reduced from 151, called The Residences at 3390 Washington.

Eighteen units - 23 percent - will be reserved as affordable at 70 percent area median income (AMI).

Building A is five stories attached to the old brick BMS block, two floors of which will be a restaurant and additional retail space. The upper three stories will have 35 apartments.

Building B is a stand-alone, six-story, 45-unit residential building at the back of the two-acre site set within an excavated gravel slope which has been dug out in conjunction with the Pine Street development over the past two years.

Three levels of housing will be set above a two-level garage for 87 cars tucked into

Archdale meeting stresses collaborative approach

More than 40 community stakeholders gathered at Roslindale's BCYF Menino Community Center in the Archdale neighborhood on Tuesday, March 14 to brainstorm solutions to a recent wave of armed robberies there that culminated in a police raid of a storage center where guns, dirt bikes and fentanyl was seized.

The meeting was organized by nearby residents Steve Gag and Benjamin Bruno. Gag highlighted three recent incidents that prompted the meeting during a March 15 interview.

The first was the robbery of Arboretum Pizza and Grill at 4025 Washington St. on Jan. 20. In that incident, a man wearing a ski mask threatened the owner at gunpoint before taking the cash register, according to an NBC 10 Boston report. The second was on Feb. 26 at the High Profile X Budega of Roslindale cannabis dispensary at 3995 Washington St., where three armed men allegedly robbed the owner at gunpoint.

The most high-profile case occurred on Feb. 17 at Life Storage at 44 Lochdale Rd. After a lengthy investigation of illegal drag racing by the Boston Police Department, police raided the building and seized 37 dirt bikes and mopeds, more than 36 grams of fentanyl, and several guns and assault weapons, according to BPDNews.com. There was also a previous raid on Feb. 4, where about 50 dirt bikes were seized.

"The department obviously is very aware of all of these incidents," said Area

E-5 Community Service Officer Nicole England in an interview on March 16.

Although England said she could not comment on the status of the cases because they are currently under investigation, she said she thought the meeting was effective in bringing different parts of the neighborhood together to address next steps.

“All of these three events taken together involved businesses within just about a two-block distance,” Bruno said in a March 15 interview.

District 5 City Councilor Ricardo Arroyo and State Rep. Rob Consalvo, whose districts include Roslindale, spoke at the meeting. Also sharing information were Emily Polston, Councilor At-Large Ruthzee Louijeune’s chief of staff; Executive Director of the Mayor’s Office of Neighborhood Services (ONS) Enrique Pepin; Isaac Yablo, the mayor’s senior community safety advisor; and Boston Housing Authority Administrator Kate Bennett.

Gag noted that he and Laura Gang, his wife, helped start the Lower South Street Neighborhood Association in the wake of increasing crime about 35 years ago. The situation vastly improved as the area became gentrified, he said, and the meetings tapered off as a result.

“You don’t want [crime] to be the only thing that you meet for, but it’s important that when these things come up that you get back to the basics and meet as a group of folks that is concerned,” Gag said.

Archdale community activist Sabrina Ivory was less positive in an interview in March 16, saying that there is a persistent divide between the Archdale residents and their neighbors further up Washington Street towards Roslindale Village.

“The meeting was bulls#%t,” Ivory said bluntly. “Hardly anything came out of it. There was no agenda. They didn’t have a game plan.”

Ivory noted that the pizza shop and the dispensary were not the only local businesses that were recently hit. Cibao Market, Dunkin and a dry cleaner on Washington Street also were robbed, she said, although she could not provide specifics.

“My thing is that they didn’t do anything until the dispensary got robbed, which is closer to them,” she said. “The one positive that came out of that meeting was that Arroyo said he’d help the businesses that were robbed.”

Bruno noted that new housing developments along Washington Street should increase pedestrian activity and generate a greater connection between the Archdale and the lower South Street areas.

Gag added that at future meetings he would like to discuss community events such as a monthly barbecue “to have that cross pollination” between the neighborhoods

In a March 17 interview, Arroyo said that he spoke with the owners of both the Arboretum Grill and the cannabis dispensary and offered his support to ensure that their reputation isn’t tarnished by the incidents.

“One of the issues that these businesses face is that people associate the place of the event with the crime, and the perception stays,” he explained. “I want to see if there is a way that the city can help with that.”

Arroyo equated it with the food poisoning situation that the Chipotle restaurant chain experienced after diners contracted the Norovirus.

He added that he spoke with Pepin about having a walking tour of the Archdale business district the way Mayor Michelle Wu held one last year in Roslindale Village.

“We need to make sure that people understand that this is a vital part of Roslindale,” Arroyo said. “It is very community business oriented, and we need to work on any of the preconceived notions that people have about it. We want to make sure that people know that it is a perfectly safe neighborhood and a good place to support local businesses.”

“I was very impressed that Steve and Ben stepped up to organize this meeting,” said Consalvo, whose district as of January includes this part of Roslindale.

He added in a March 17 interview that, as a former District 5 city councilor, he experienced firsthand how community organizing is crucial in preventing crime. He also urged residents to contact his office with concerns as well as city officials, 311 and 911.

“The more people bring up the concerns and copy us on emails, the more we can use that as a vehicle when we are looking at the budget,” Consalvo said. “Data drives the funding.”

Ivory has been a community organizer in the Archdale neighborhood for years. She created a biweekly food pantry and also provides emergency bags of groceries to residents on Wednesdays. Ivory also organizes monthly meetings at the community center that include police reports.

“Our concern is that these robberies happened in our neighborhood,” she said. “We didn’t come this far to let outside people come in and destroy it.”

Irish Social Club rocks on St. Paddy's Day

Susan Kryczka
Staff Reporter

By 5:30 p.m., the March 17 St. Patrick's Day celebration was already in high gear at the Irish Social Club in West Roxbury. Doors opened to the public at 4 p.m. and the Mary Heavy-Quinn Irish Academy of Dancers and Fennian Sons kicked off at 6 p.m. with music that would be ongoing until midnight.

Families and friends who made it through the door settled anywhere there was room —at the bar, at a table, standing or, for the kids, sitting on the floor. As the crowd began to increase, Lord Mayor of West Roxbury and Club President Richard "Richie" Gormley, was overseeing what had already been a busy day and was now turning into an even busier night.

"We've already got over 600 people, and more are coming in the door," he said.

Gormley is not new to St. Patrick Day celebrations. He said he's been involved with the club for decades and the festivities on this day started at noon with a traditional luncheon of corned beef and cabbage served to a group that included Mayor Michelle Wu. When asked what was attracting so many families to the evening festivities he said, "I've done quite a few of these, and there are a lot of younger people, and the kids can come in free." For Gormley, it's also a personal commitment. "I celebrate St. Patrick's Day every day. I love to promote the Irish heritage and culture. We've been here since 1980."

"It's a great neighborly thing to do to have the kids," said Sean Staunton, vice president of the club, as he manned the front table commenting on the free admission price for children. Mary Hern, a club trustee, also helped to collect admission fees and said the best part was seeing people that she knows. "Richie has done a fabulous job of bringing this back."

Friendship and familiarity permeated the festive atmosphere. For families who know each other through their children's sports programs, school, and other community activities, this seemed a logical

Letters to the Editor

APPROVAL OF ROSLINDALE: 4198 WASHINGTON STREET

To the Editor:

ZBA and BPDA-BRA have always been of, by and for the people with the money. Nothing has changed since the days of Boston's West End land-snatch "redevelopment."

ZBA members are not elected and only answer to the mayor, no one else, so when the mayor says "Jump" they jump. Oh well, things never really change, do they? Money always wins.

HICKS IS BEING DISINGENUOUS

To the Editor:

The WRBA meeting at the Corrib was this past Thursday, March 16. Discussion turned to the potential road diet in West Roxbury.

Councilor Lara Hicks felt she ran on a platform of a road diet for safety and got elected because of her stance, calling it a mandate. Her remarks were disingenuous at best. She did win in Wards 10, 11 and 19. As far as I know, there is no discussion of any road diets in those wards. In ward 20, West Roxbury, the voters loudly voted the road diet down, voting overwhelming for Mary Tamer by a two-to-one ratio.

Shame on coupon discrimination

I happened to have put the letter that I opened after it was forwarded to me by The Bulletin several months ago in a drawer; it fell to the bottom and I forgot about it, but that poignant letter from a stranger resurfaced the other day. And, upon rereading it, I still feel for—I'll call him Daniel. And the poignancy is still there, more so now than ever before.

An 87-year-old Korean War veteran, the Hyde Park resident is at a loss to explain how America now penalizes him at his local supermarket, part of a large regional chain, because he is not eligible for digital coupons and therefore has to pay more. Having neither a fancy cell phone because of a hearing problem nor a computer, he is at a loss to explain why he has to pay more for grocery items. A classy person, he does not draw upon his military service in Korea in the handwritten letter to me to grouse how this is so: he merely writes "that's the way it is."

One does not have to be a Sherlock Holmes to detect the hurt in his comment that when he approached a young store employee, devoid of empathy and tact, about the digital coupon, "she blew me off and said don't blame me."

I'm no technophile, but I have a wife and children to shepherd me through this modern era. Daniel doesn't. I suspect digital coupons allow stores to track patterns and sales. But wouldn't it be nice if some lawyer took it upon her/himself to challenge the supermarket chain about this aspect of age discrimination. I hear a lot of whining about various forms of discrimination, but in Daniel's case it's not whining: sadly, it's real and justified.

place to gather for St. Patrick's Day.

"This is a great local venue," said Ed Charland, "right in the heart of an urban post, for friends and family." Bennie Upton, who plays accordion and tin whistle for the Fennian Sons, was performing here because to him it's a "neighborhood party."

The Fennian Sons also have a local following, with a number of people saying, that's why they came.

"The Fennian Sons are the draw. I plan to spend the rest of the evening here," said one woman. Mary Logan, who grew up in West Roxbury and her friend Barbara Gauthier came from Weymouth to meet up with 15 members of her family.

"My son-in-law is friends with someone in the band and I wanted to see them." Maria Coakley also found the perfect location for her two children and husband having chosen the Irish Social Club over another nearby venue. "The band is wonderful and it's a spacious place."

As lines stretched to the two bars and many groups coming in with take-out pizza from local restaurants to enjoy at a table, the Fennian Sons encouraged all to join in singing. With a steady stream of families leaving and others coming in, it was clear that St. Patrick's Day at the Irish Social Club was an unabashed success.

Corrections

In last week's Bulletin, the article entitled, "Rehearsal Space Hearing gets heated" had some errors in reporting. First of all, the City of Boston did not put out a bid for the interim space operator in Dorchester, the Art Stays Here Coalition did. Also IQHQ did not give notice to musicians they would have to vacate in December. The Sound Museum technically did that. Lastly, the Sound Museum is in Brighton, not Allston. We apologize for the errors. In the February 9 edition of the Bulletin, the story on page 5 entitled, "Arroyo's tree ordinance draws anger from HPNA," quoted resident Craig Martin as saying a Nov. 9 hearing of the Zoning Board of Appeals approved a development on the Neponset Valley Parkway as clear cutting 25,000 square feet of trees. The hearing was on Nov. 15 and the site, while having some trees, is also occupied by several houses. We apologize for the error.

WRNC approves full entertainment license Compromise reached on ending time

Mary Ellen Gambon
Staff Reporter

The West Roxbury Neighborhood Council (WRNC) at its monthly meeting at the Area E-5 police station approved a full entertainment license for the Boston Ale House in a 7-2 vote after a compromise was reached on an earlier stop time.

Owner Eddie Coyle explained that he originally applied for a full entertainment license that would allow the restaurant, located at 1885 Centre St., to have entertainment until closing time at 1 a.m. But he made it clear that he doesn't intend to have events run that late.

Since it opened nine months ago, the Boston Ale House has held some successful nighttime events, he said, such as a Wednesday trivia night. After receiving feedback at previous WRNC meetings, he and Quinn Prell, the establishment's general manager, decided to adjust the end times to 11 p.m. on weeknights and 12:30 a.m. on the weekends.

"It's not like we are going to be doing a lot of things," Coyle said. There may be weekly musical bingo and a bi-monthly comedy night.

There would be occasional live music, Coyle told the group of more than 50 attendees. Several bands have played there already with special permits did well.

"There's no dancing or anything like that," he said. "We're hoping to have a band of two the hillside.

Tracy said he “wanted to show you an update.”

“It adds much needed housing and expands an existing retail space that is now 11,000 square feet with an additional 5,440 square feet,” he said. “It adds a moderate priced, family-style restaurant with two bars seating 300.”

He added the design was recently approved by the Boston Civic Design Commission on Feb. 7, 2023.

Architect David O’Sullivan added more information.

“The biggest change is we’ve reduced the massing, reduced the unit number and it is now two buildings, one dug into the hillside in back.”

O’Sullivan said there will be an outdoor patio on top of the garage that will also include a walkway leading to Forest Vale Apartments on Forest Hills Street.

“We’ve added a wing to the warehouse and additional space for BMS. The upper floors of the new wing will have residential apartments over the kitchen and bar of the restaurant,” O’Sullivan said.

A covered arcade eight feet wide will be built from Washington Street to the interior courtyard of the two residential wings. The arcade will also lead to a lobby and staircase and a second entrance to BMS Paper.

O’Sullivan explained that there is a “significant cut down of the residential numbers to add more greenspace.

“The buildings are down from 195,000 square feet to 129,000 square feet. The two separate buildings add a wide view corridor for the Pine Street.”

The reduction in the number of units to 78 was first explained at the June 20, 2022 BCDC meeting and has been commonly known around the community, but the restaurant size seemed to concern the IAG meeting the most.

IAG member and Union Ave resident Alex Guriev spoke first.

“[The restaurant] sounds like event seating,” he said. “A 300-seat is quite big. Five sections in the restaurant, two bars.

“It’s out of place. How would people enjoy living next to that?” Guriev asked. “A five-story lounge next to Pine Street Inn across from senior housing. Eighty units of housing behind the restaurant with 800 to 100 people in the restaurant.”

Tracy noted that the restaurant is approved by the zoning regulations.

“It’s the same square footage,” he said. “The restaurant was approved by the Boston Licensing Board on May 25, 2021. We have had good relations with Pine Street.”

Tim Riordan, representing Egleston Square Main Street, and Marmion Street resident Omer Hecht supported the restaurant.

“I’m not going to be busy-body and second guess Bob [Harrington]’s restaurant,” Riordan said. “I support the restaurant. I think it’s great.”

“The restaurant is nobody’s business,” said Hecht. “It’s none of our business to say. It’s Bob’s business.”

Riordan and Hecht did not support the change in unit count.

“I’m incredibly disappointed in the loss of housing units,” Riordan said. “It’s a huge loss. This property is under-built.”

“It’s a ridiculous loss of housing,” Hecht said. “Over half of the housing units are gone. This IAG is not the community.”

A caller asked “what caused the decrease in housing units?”

Tracy answered, “the BPDA and the design commission (BCDC).

“The strongest push was from the BCDC,” Tracy said. “They really pushed for more separation of buildings. They wanted a view corridor for Pine Street; less density, more greenspace.”

O’Sullivan said that “less density, less housing was 80 percent BPDA and 20 percent neighbors.”

That seemed to support what the original BPDA project manager Lance Campbell said at the March 11, 2021 Article 80 meeting.

O’Sullivan’s statement seemed to surprise the new project manager Michael Sinatra.

“I inherited this project,” he said. “I didn’t realize the reason for the reduction in housing. I assumed it was a community push back on the number of units.”

Turley said that massing was an issue.

“At both the SNA and JP Housing Committee there was a lot of push to reduce the massing,” she said; “smaller buildings but the same number of units. We still need another discussion about the restaurant.”

The next steps seem to be the BPDA board vote, the Jamaica Plain zoning committee vote and the Boston Zoning Board of Appeals vote.

“We’re trying to make as many people happy as possible,” Tracy said.

Miracle Prayer

Dear Heart of Jesus, in the past I have asked You for many favours. This time, I ask you this very special one (mention favour). Take it, dear Heart of Jesus, and place it within Your own broken heart where Your Father sees it. Then, in His merciful eyes, it will become Your favour, not mine. Amen. Say for three days, promise publication and favour will be granted.

—V.C.

Novena to St. Clare

Ask St. Clare for three favors, 1 business, 2 impossible. Say nine Hail Marys for nine days, with lighted candle. Pray whether you believe or not. Publish on the ninth day. Powerful novena. Say “May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be praised, adored, glorified, now and forever, throughout the whole world. Amen.” Your request will be granted, no matter how impossible it may seem.

The Telford Residential Building and the SFR Rental Building will share a second-floor outdoor terrace as well as an at-grade and underground parking garage with total capacity of approximately 211 vehicles, and both buildings will contain ground floor commercial space and amenities such as bicycle rooms and other residential amenity spaces. The 1234 Site will contain: (i) the approximately 125,500 square foot, 11-story Western Ave Hotel, a 195+ key hotel with ground floor commercial space, and (ii) the SFR Condominium Building, an approximately 77,000 square foot, 10-story residential condominium building containing approximately 76 for-sale residential units. or three Irish guys.”

Coyle added that he “wants to be a good neighbor.” He noted that more than 20 of his 66 staff members live in West Roxbury.

Several residents brought up the somewhat sordid history of the location before Coyle purchased it. There was “a merry-go-round” of owners in recent years, according to board member Stephen Smith. It was previously Eat With Jack O’Neill, The Squealing Pig, the West Roxbury Pub, and most infamously Molly Maguire’s.

“It was previously a dive,” Smith said of Molly Maguire’s. “And I think every establishment since then has been paying the price when they try to get an entertainment license.”

Parking on Hastings Street was an issue. Coyle explained that the Boston Ale House has a sign saying not to park on Hastings or Corey streets, “but we can’t make them read it.”

WRNC Zoning Chair Tony Saroufim, who chaired the 90-minute meeting, offered a compromise of a 10:30 p.m. shutdown of entertainment during the week and midnight on weekends and holidays.

“Knowing what I know about West Roxbury’s people, that should be good enough so that you could have fun in the back and head home safely after midnight,” he said.

Daniel Hudson, the new West Roxbury liaison from the Mayor’s Office of Neighborhood Services (ONS), clarified that, while the WRNC’s recommendation for end times is taken into account, “the decision rests solely with the Licensing Board.”

He noted that the application already went before the Licensing Board, but it will not render a decision until it receives feedback from WRNC. Corley said the license will have to be renewed annually every December, so residents can voice any quality of life issues then.

“I think that this is how we want to resolve issues in the neighborhood – between neighbors,” said District 6 City Councilor Kendra Lara. “Whatever the Licensing Board decides does not stop the Boston Ale House from having an agreement with the community.”

Coyle agreed to host quarterly coffee hours with residents to assess how things are going.

Lara said this is “modeling a different way” to encourage local businesses, calling it “really creative.”

Board member Rob Corley made the motion for a further compromise on the end time: 10:30 p.m. Monday through Wednesday, 11 p.m. on Thursday and Sunday, and 12:30 a.m. on Friday and Sunday. It was approved 7-2, with Smith and Saroufim opposing it.

In other news, a proposed cannabis manufacturer and delivery service for 1457 VFW Prkwy. was told to meet with the Charles River/Spring Valley Neighborhood Association and residents of the nearby trailer park before the WRNC reconsiders their request at next month’s meeting.

Zazazoom is proposed as a woman- and minority-owned business co-owned by West Roxbury residents Dr. Shalair Armstrong, Cleon M Bryon, Nabil Audy and Nancy Audy. It would not be a dispensary, explained Nabil Audy, but would manufacture cannabis and deliver it in unmarked vehicles, similar to Uber Eats.

“I will say you are failing on your outreach,” Smith charged, although Armstrong said the neighborhood was flyered. He also questioned why the two cannabis establishments are located across the street from one another, even though they serve different purposes, and not somewhere else in West Roxbury.

Council's tree ordinance hearing, which was subsequently held on March 13.

The HPNA has taken a green position regarding District 5 developments proposing the clear cutting of tree canopy, with the two most prominent and current of them being Crane Ledge Woods at American Legion Highway, and a Dale Street plan that would abut Sherrin Woods. Arroyo's positions and actions regarding them – in relation to his ordinance – were the focus of most of those February comments and questions.

Related to tree canopies and ordinances, Arroyo's late replacement on the agenda was former HPNA President Jim Kirker, who spoke of re-wilding lawns and gardens. The longtime gardener has, over the years, created a wild flower garden in his yard in order to help build a habitat for insects through plants left in the ground through the fall acting as pollinators. This, in turn, serves to support and increase the greater natural environment.

"I really think that we need to stop the loss of habitat, but we also need to gain it, and this is something that we can all do in our yards," Kirker said in the context of the ordinance.

He suggested – as the simplest way of contributing to this – not raking leaves in the fall, noting that they are a natural fertilizer. He added that leaves also slow evaporation and allow water more time to seep deeper into the soil, and eventually down to the ground water. Kirker also stated and reiterated that, typically, unraked leaves will not kill lawns, and that they will be gone by the spring... provided there is enough snow-fall in the winter.

"Even if you just do that, you're creating habitat," he said of the non-raking approach.

Also in keeping with City regulations – and how a wild garden may look to the untrained eye – Kirker mentioned that he had been cited with a code violation for overgrown weeds.

For more information, visit Kirker's Facebook page and his Creating Habitat Yards group.

During the District E-18 police report, Officer Paul Broderick noted the Feb. 20 armed robbery at S. K. Convenience (1283 River St.), a shop located on the block of the closed River Street Bridge. The crime took place at around 9:45 p.m. that Presidents' Day night, and was committed by a black male with a handgun. Store surveillance video shows him dressed in black clothes, including a mask covering the lower half of his face.

The owner – who wished to remain unidentified, but was on the cash register at the time of the incident – stated in an interview several days after the HPNA meeting that he believes the same person robbed his store last summer, and that he has submitted video footage of both incidents to the BPD. He added that a foot scooter was used to flee the scene the first time, but that he was unable to see if one was used for this last robbery.

The owner also said that BPD patrols have been checking in at the shop regularly.

At the time of the second robbery, construction fencing and tarp had recently been put up along the street perimeter of the block (the sidewalks are accessible) for preliminary repair work on the River Street Bridge, creating a limited view of the storefronts.

Lieutenant Detective Beth Leary followed up on Broderick's summary report with a more detailed one, saying that it was the most recent in a flurry of local convenience store robberies over the last few months. "We believe this individual is responsible for four robberies: three in Hyde Park, and one in Mattapan," she specified.

District E-5 – West Roxbury – has also recently experienced a handful of armed robberies. "We believe that's another individual, separate and apart from this individual," Leary said of the similar patterns. "So we have two operating in a very small area."

When asked why she thought the two series of hold-ups were not connected, she stated that there were two identifying firearms used. "They each have something very distinct about them, so it's kind of strange," she said of what had been observed in the footage.

Leary added that both individuals appear to be working alone, although investigators are uncertain of whether or not lookouts may have been used to assist in the robberies.

She also noted during her report the additional resources being utilized for the E-18 and E-5 investigations: undercover surveillance, drug units, and the FBI Robbery Task Force.

Anyone who may have information is advised to contact E-18 detectives at 617-343-5607.

In additional BPD news, Broderick reported that 588 cases of Modelo beer ($14,000 value) were stolen from the CSX rail yard (Prescott St.) between Feb. 4 and Feb. 6. At around 5:30 a.m. on Feb. 8, officers responded to another rail car break in, leading to a chase that ended near University Avenue, drew in the Westwood Police Department, and resulted in six arrests. Broderick stated that he thought the suspects were up from New York. "When I first came out to Hyde Park, they used to break into these all the time," he went on. "Before, it was just kids doing it. This is more of an organized thing."

On Jan. 25, 270 cases of Corona beer ($6,500 value) had been stolen from a freight car in the same yard. No further details were given as to whether the two incidents were related.

The HPNA meets in the Municipal Building/BCYF at 7 p.m. on the first Thursday of each month. For more information, email hydeparkneighbors@gmail.com.
