Boston dedicates Rozzie corner to Scollins family

Greta Gaffin
Staff Reporter

The City of Boston dedicated the corner of Centre and Weld Streets to the late great William R. Scollins on Aug. 6.

Scollins, known to his friends as Bill, ran the Scollins Drug Store at 1420 Centre St. for 40 years, from the 1930s to the 1970s, with his son Buddy Scollins.

District 6 City Councilor Matt O'Malley opened the ceremony and described how his parents actually met at Scollins Drug.

"I would not be here without Scollins Drugstore," he said. "Yes, it was a pharmacy, but it was more of a community center. It was where people came together."

He added that when his grandfather needed to fly to California for a wake and couldn't pay for the ticket, Bill Scollins lent him the money, and how if a family needed food and couldn't afford it, Bill would tell them to put it on his tab at the supermarket across the street. There was also initially another drugstore across the street, and the JPNC debates community benefits of 265 Amory St.

Last meeting before election

Richard Heath
Staff Reporter

The last meeting of the Jamaica Plain Neighborhood Council (JPNC) before its thrice-delayed election now scheduled for Aug. 21 went out with a bang on July 27 in a lively debate over community benefits of the 265-267 Amory St. development.

The current neighborhood council was elected on April 28, 2018 with 18 members; only eleven people are on the 2021 ballot with current chairman Kevin Rainsford not seeking reelection.

Neither is Carolyn Royce, the active housing committee chair who served on the council for over seven years.

The JPNC is distinguished by its rapid turnover of members, but the 2018 council had perhaps the most attrition in its 35-year history.

Seven members resigned and two were fired for non-attendance; four were appointed to fill vacancies for the term, but two apparently have declined to gather the signatures to be on the ballot.

In addition, Lindsey Santana, the mayor's office liaison to Jamaica Plain since November 2019, left and was replaced a month ago by Tiffani Cabellero.

Boston Landing requesting marquee for Roadrunner venue

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Boston Planning and Development Agency (BPDA) held a public meeting recently to gauge support for a digital sign at the New Balance development area.

Keith Craig of NB Development Group said the new sign would be placed at the track and field building under construction at the south side of the complex at 71 Guest St.

“Electronic signage is a unique definition under the Boston Zoning Code and would require a zoning variance to allow it,” he said. “What we’re asking for at the track and field building is an illuminated marquee. It’s a 21st century electronic sign to change the name and date for the music venue piece of this project. It’s at street level, it’s static – not dynamic – and it’s not for advertising.”

Craig reiterated that the sign will be static, as residents were concerned that it might be a flashing sign that could disrupt quality of life for local residents.

“It’s not a dynamic sign and so there’s not meant to be any moving objects, any flashing lights,” he said. “It’s static, it’s not advertising, it’s really meant to showcase the next act or event in a very simple fashion.”

He said the building itself is multi-purpose for track and field, basketball and volleyball, with about 25,000 square feet of ground-floor retail. “On the eastern side of the building is where we have a two-level music venue that is called Roadrunner,” he said, adding that Roadrunner refers to the Jonathan Richman and the Modern Lovers song about Massachusetts that former Boston Mayor and State Rep. Marty Walsh advocated to make the state’s official rock song. “It’s a partnership with the Bowery Presents and AEG.”

The venue will have a capacity of 3,500 patrons and take up about 50,000 square feet. The song lists local landmarks, like the Stop & Shop and Route 128, and was about Richman’s father. He said his father traveled the local region as a traveling salesman and the song documented his travels.

Craig said COVID-19 pushed the full project’s completion date back to March of 2022. The sign will look like a normal marquee, for all intents and purposes, but it will have a digital component that will allow the venue to change dates and bands depending on who is playing on what night. It will be 11 feet off the ground and be about three feet wide by 20 feet long.

“That’s simply for the ability to identify the name and date of any event going on at any given night,” he said. “It’s a 21st century sign that makes it so you don’t have people on ladders changing the name every day.”

Craig said they’ve heard some comments on the project as a whole, mostly concerning open space at Boston Landing.

“We have 16 acres of built area that includes property, streets and sidewalks, and what we tried to do all along, and we’ve pretty much kept true on this is that there are 1.7 acres – about 10 percent of those 16 areas – is publicly-accessible hardscape and greenspace,” he said. “We have at-grade space and, up the stairs on the terrace, we have space as well that people are welcome to use.”

Resident John Cusack said he was fully in support of the project change.

“It makes sense and I don’t find it to be anything obtrusive and I think it’s an appropriate use for the venue,” he said.

Unimaginable in Greater Boston

It was somewhat of a remote beach on Cape Elizabeth in southeastern Maine, just a few miles outside of the city of Portland. On the approach road, I saw various no parking signs posted. I had been inured my whole life by such approaches to then seeing “Resident Parking Only” or hefty beach prices for non-residents. But neither of these was at the beginning of the beach parking lot: I was astonished. A parking space was found and hours were spent reading and watching young children under the eyes of their caring parents frolicking on the cove beach and in its placid waters in a Norman-Rockwell-like setting. Do you know of any such beach in our vast metropolitan area (outside of the DCR shoreline) without prohibitions/charges to non-residents? If you do, it’s a well-kept secret. Greater Boston coastal communities have gone to great lengths to keep us outsiders from accessing and soiling their beaches. Aware that the small number of allocated parking spaces for out-of-towners fills up fast, this summer Gloucester, blessed with a sizable Catholic Italian and Portuguese population whose faith is based on loving neighbor as thyself, has posted Resident Only Parking signs on residential roads even further away from Good Harbor Beach; such signs used to be at somewhat of a distance before this summer, and now the signage is even more so—with a $75 fine waiting for offenders.

It’s particularly disturbing that Scituate, described as the most-Irish town in America with 70% of its population of Irish lineage, subscribes to the only-for-us-residents philosophy. Undoubtedly aware of how their Irish Catholic ancestors were first treated in Boston by the wealthy WASPs, the current residents treat outsiders with similar disdain.

My Kind of Town/ Joe Galeota

Adjacent South Shore towns, also with heavily Catholic populations, look the other way when reminded of love-your-neighbor-as-yourself commandment. The justification is that outsiders trash the beaches and thwart attendance by local residents. Hmm. And just for the record, at the aforementioned beach on this hot sunny July day there were not dirty diapers and other trash strewn on the beach by any of the beachgoers, townies or otherwise, nor was there was a waiting automobile line to access parking because of the presence of out-of-towners. It was, to say the least, a sight to behold.

BULLETIN GOT IT WRONG ON 1905-1911 CENTRE

To the Editor:

The August 5, 2021 article “ZBA grants Willet developers more time” inaccurately characterized the status of CAD’s proposed development of 1905-1911 Centre Street, and we write to correct the record and to provide additional information and input supplied by the community regarding the proposed development.

In a June 24 meeting with BPDA Director Brian Golden and senior aides, arranged at our request by Councilor Matt O’Malley, the steering committee of the Highland Neighborhood Civic Association (HNCA) learned that the CAD proposal for condos at 1905-11 Centre Street will not be approved, as most recently proposed (the developer may revise their proposal in the future). Director Golden indicated that this proposal is not going anywhere, and contrary to the August 5 Bulletin article, there was no discussion of moving it to another location.

BPDA’s decision was based on the nearly unanimous opposition from the community and elected officials (notably, Councilors Matt O’Malley and Michael Flaherty, State Representative Ed Coppinger and State Senator Michael Rush). During the discussion with BPDA staff, we also got the impression that they shared many of our concerns and criticisms.

We fervently thank the hundreds of community members who took the time to voice their feelings about the proposed development by attending the BPDA’s public hearings, submitting comments during the BPDA open comment periods, attending the May 1 rally, or otherwise providing input to the Steering Committee, BPDA, and/or elected officials. Our voices were heard!

While awaiting a possible new (further modified) proposal from the developer, HNCA developed and circulated an online survey to gather residents’ opinions about the proposed development and ideas for its improvement. Within days, 172 respondents participated. 65% felt ‘very negative’ about the proposed development, 16% were ‘somewhat negative’. Very few (< 5%) of respondents felt ‘very positive’ about the development, as proposed. This level of non-support is consistent with input given during the BPDA public comment periods, and the reasons cited in the survey for not supporting the proposal reflect the spectrum of reasons submitted to the BPDA.

Regarding specific concerns, respondents indicated that the proposed building would be too big for the lot size (72%), too tall at 4 stories (65%), that the building’s architecture/design wouldn’t fit into the business district (66%), that there were too many condo units (57%).

Respondents felt the development did not have enough parking or would lead to too much traffic (about 50%), seemed to violate zoning regulations (specifically regarding height and setback standards; 56%), indicated that the proposed commercial space was too small (33%), 25% of respondents were concerned that the developer refused to install heating/cooling/appliances using clean (renewable) energy sources, needed to help meet the city’s goal of carbon neutrality. Though the BPDA had officially sought public comment on the developer’s specific proposal, HNCA wanted to learn how residents and local businesses would actually like to see property developed. 61% supported the restoration/reuse of the Keith House (perhaps for offices and some community use); 44% liked the idea of restoration/reuse of the former bank building (perhaps for some commercial use); 42% liked the idea of a mini-park in that location (which the Centre St. business district and abutting residential neighborhood notably lack); 35% indicated a preference for commercial space only 29% preferred a smaller condo building with more commercial space, 26% desired a community center; only 12% expressed a preference for a smaller condo building.

The survey revealed significant interest in rehabilitation and re-use of the historic (circa 1850) woodframe Keith House: 22% were ‘extremely interested’, 16% ‘very interested’, and 28% ‘somewhat interested’. There was less interest in preserving the former “Brutalist” style bank building: 9% were ‘extremely interested’, 6% were ‘very interested’, with 24% ‘somewhat interested’.

As the Boston Landmarks Commission has designated both properties as “significant,” an HNCA subcommittee is now exploring options for their preservation and potential re-use (and we would welcome additional community volunteers to help; if you have any interest and/or experience with historic preservation, please contact us at highlandcivic5@gmail.com).

If you did not have a chance to respond to the survey or would like to submit further comments, please email us at highlandcivic5@gmail.com.

Again, the HNCA Steering Committee sends its most sincere thanks to the community for its vigorous participation in this process thus far—with certainly more discussion to come as we continue to work with the City and private developers on ways this property can enhance the Centre St. business district!

LANA may take bigger role in Rozzie Parade

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Longfellow Area Neighborhood Association (LANA) met in a virtual format recently, and discussed the group's inclusion in the after party for the Roslindale Parade at Fallon Field, now set to return for Oct. 3 this year.

During that discussion, LANA member Rachel Young outlined what she and Roslindale Parade Organizer Tom Donahue considered for the group's participation in the after party. Also it was noted that Donahue was looking to ease up off the reins of the parade next year.

"Tom would like LANA to take over everything at the end of parade event next year," Young said.

Traditionally, about four or five LANA members would volunteer to help clean up at the after-party and distribute food, whereas taking over the after-party event itself would require a lot more organization before the event. Young said

Donahue has traditionally taken care of that and walked her through how that works.

Young said in the past, for-profit businesses would pay to have booths at the after-party and organizers would use those funds to pay for insurance and permits. Donations from residents would also be sought, and anything left over would go to providing entertainment.

"It seems to me that the most work for the parade end event is the insurance and permitting, and (Donahue) is willing to walk us through that," she said. "The day of the event is really not that much work, but reaching out to the city to make sure we have the stage and the multiple permits you need for the end event, it's that planning I think that is the commitment."

Member Sue Forti said she believes this would require the work of a full-fledged subcommittee, and that the LANA Board would not have the time to take on the organizational commitment needed to pull off the after-party. She said they would have to discuss it more in depth later.

"I would say that on the part of some of us on the board, there are some great reservations about taking on a bigger role," she said. "We don't have a budget for even cheap insurance and I don't want to get just cheap insurance. There are many issues before we take on more, and it would really almost need to have a committee where that is their job to cover the parade."

Young and Forti agreed though that LANA should reach out to other local neighborhood groups to help lighten the load.

"It is the Roslindale Parade after all," Forti said.

Any resident or business interested in helping at this year's parade after-party can reach out to LANA at <https://longfellowarea.com/contact-us/>

Young said for this year at least, the Roslindale Parade after-party at Fallon Field will have a stage, entertainers, lawn and field games, two ice cream trucks and the promotional tables for businesses.

"It's lots of fun. You get to see all your neighbors and it's a nice way to give back," she said. "It looks like what LANA will be doing is helping with set up, which is very minimal. We'll need someone to come in in the morning and organize the table set up, to set up whatever we do - lawn games and whatever food we want to hand out this year. I think this year, what with COVID-19 and all, popcorn is not the best idea but

Rose's Bounty needs your help distributing for veterans

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

Rose's Bounty is currently collecting and distributing needed items to the city's most vulnerable veterans, and the organization could use your help.

If you are interested in donating, email rosesbounty@gmail.com to drop itemsoff. A full list of items will be published at the bottom of this article.

Rose's Bounty Director Darra Slagle said the items are nothing too expensive. Actually, used items of most kinds – like pots and pans, laundry baskets, can openers or fluffy blankets (Slagle stipulated that only a reasonable level of fluff is required) – would be accepted. She said many of the veterans they are looking to help are just trying to get back on their feet after experiencing homelessness or mental illness.

Slagle said this originally started as a monthly giveaway before the pandemic hit, but has now ballooned into a weekly distribution. She said they work with the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) and the Veterans Administration Supportive Housing (VASH) program (known collectively as HUD-VASH).

"We've been working with them for years providing boxes of food to the veterans and we were doing that on a once-a-month basis," she said. "Once the pandemic hit, we started doing emergency boxes every Friday, along with our regular monthly distribution," she said. "I always told them that we have a lot of resources if there's anything the veterans need."

Slagle said HUD-VASH is often looking to help settle veterans who have recently experienced homelessness or mental illness in new housing, but some of the items that others may take for granted whenever they move somewhere can be expensive or difficult to find.

"They have difficulty finding some items they can't get we can do prepackaged popcorn and snacks or something like that. And then we'll just need a point person to help Tom with whatever happens at the end. Usually he's got everything covered."

Young said they will only need about five volunteers to help hand out popcorn and monitor the lawn games.

"Because if you don't monitor the lawn games, people will just walk away with all the stuff," she said.

The group also discussed what they're calling the 25th Anniversary of LANA Plus One, as last year was the 25th anniversary of the group. However, there was no way to celebrate because of COVID-19. Young said they are currently brainstorming ideas on how to celebrate this year, including at the parade after-party and/or throwing a bash of their own. According to member Deb Beatty Mel, the decision on what the Boston Planning and Development Agency (BPDA) will do with the parcel at 108 Walter St. – where the Roslindale Wetlands Task Force (a subsidiary of LANA) was able to garner support to pressure the city into purchasing and preserving the wetlands there – should be by Labor Day of this year.

Members at the meeting agreed that celebrating that decision – which will include affordable housing along with preserving the wetlands under a Conservation Restriction in perpetuity – would be a great focal point for the group's accomplishments.

The Board agreed to discuss the celebration in the coming weeks. The next LANA Board Meeting will be its annual meeting on Sept. 13.

Council warming to tourism district idea with Cambridge

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Boston City Council met with industry representatives on Aug. 9 to discuss the creation of a Boston-Cambridge Tourism Destination Marketing District (TDMD).

The TDMD would basically be a fund for member organizations to contribute so that the district can market itself on a larger scale. It will allow member hotels to collectivize and reach markets they might not otherwise be able to.

reau (GBCVB), gave an overview. She said the TDMD would be a great help in getting the industry back to where it was in 2019, and that it was on the minds of the hotel industry even before the pandemic.

She said pre-pandemic tourism was the third largest industry in the state, and had an economic output of $22.6 billion in the Greater Boston area. For the state, she said it generated $850 million in taxes.

She said they had 82.5 percent occupancy in 2019, with revenue per available room coming in at $215 per night. Sheridan said the year to date occupancy up to and including June is 29.2 percent. "That, as you can see, is a huge drop.

"The hotels are bleeding money versus 2019," she said. "We do not have our full complement of visitors on the horizon coming back for several years to come. We do need these funds to help jumpstart us toward recovery."

Sheridan said they are projecting to end the year at 41 percent occupancy, and will end 2022 with 66 percent.

"Why is this important?" she said. "It's all about our workforce. Our associates are what make the tourism industry in Boston, in Cambridge, in Massachusetts so successful. Pre-pandemic Massachusetts saw one in every 10 workers employed in the hospitality industry. We provide flexible and accommodating employment opportunities and it is one of the most diverse workforces in the Commonwealth. And in 2020 we lost 47 percent of those jobs."

The simple point Sheridan said she was trying to make was that if Boston and Cambridge leave things the way they are, other local areas will be competing "fiercely" for the tourism market share when the pandemic finally lets up completely.

"Every one of my friends in this industry across the country is going after the same visitors and it's a smaller pool of visitors," she said. "Industry experts are forecasting not a one-or-two-year recovery, not a two-or-three-year recovery, but a four-to-five-year recovery. Investment is key for us to stay competitive in that five-year window. So we must activate now to help bring tourism back to its previous state."

The TDMD will allow the GBCVB to create a committee that would oversee a fund that local hotels and businesses will donate to. The District Management Committee (DMC), according to the ordinance filing, will determine how funds are spent within local programs. The assessment will be determined by 1.5 percent of the total hotel's checkout rate. The funds will be required for membership and the DMC will assess how much each member should pay. There will be 15 voting committee members and two at-large non-voting members.

The funds are slated for specific programs or initiatives to generate area brand awareness, engage with local media to familiarize publications both with with their regular resources," she said. "So I just thought, we can get things through the Greater Boston Food Bank, some cleaning supplies and soap and that sort of thing and we often get donations of lotions or things like that, and so we just came up with a list of things the veterans need when they're settling into their new homes."

Slagle said they've already collected enough of the less expensive items like soap, lotion, paper towels etc.

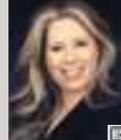

"We just had a case where I needed a welcome box to be fulfilled and we used all the basics we had, but there were several items we didn't have and those ran over $100, just picking up those items," she said.

Items needed now are: laundry baskets, mops and buckets, brooms and dustpans, shower curtains and shower rings, bath and tub mats, bath towel sets, dish towels and sponges, can openers, ice cube trays, hangers, ice cube trays, fluffy blankets, kitchen utensils, cutting boards, mixing bowls, baking dishes, pots and pans.

proprietor of that store said he would put Bill out of business. In the end, that store was the one that closed down. Residents attributed this not to any direct aggressive effort from Scollins, but rather just because people seemed to prefer how friendly and welcoming Bill was.

He sponsored a local softball team, the Scollins Cowboys, and he would call up his friend who worked at Fenway Park to get the local teenagers who worked at the pharmacy a summer job. During WWII, when many of the local boys were off in Europe, he gave them a set of keys to his car, so that if one of them came home and needed a car they could use his. He and his wife Kathleen would write ten letters a week to those overseas. About 13 neighborhood boys died during the war.

Buddy Scollins was present at the dedication.

“My father was my mentor. He taught me the value of community and relationships, the true meaning of generosity and selflessness. As you heard today, Bill Scollins, my dad, was the ultimate Scoltab. He could pretty well cure anything that ailed you, one way or another,” he said.

The Scoltab was Scollins Drug’s generic pain reliever, bought by hungover young people after the so-called 11:30 a.m. ‘bum’s matinee’ mass at Holy Name. Buddy Scollins was wearing a bowtie, and someone asked him, ‘Did your dad wear bowties?’ “Always,” he said. “And a little off kilter.”

He was known not just for his generosity but also for his friendliness and talent at mediation.

“Bill Scollins understood the power of communication and mutual understanding,” said his granddaughter Susan Scollins Roche.

She told the story of when Sacred Heart church was trying to raise money to build a parochial school by hosting a carnival. The Boston Police showed up and shut it down. The priest, Msgr. Edward Murray, was understandably distraught, and then someone suggested calling up Bill Scollins. Bill then called up the police captain and invited him, the two police sergeants who had shut the carnival down, and Murray over to work things out, and soon after the carnival reopened.

O’Malley also spoke about the fun the young people who hung around the drug store had, sharing stories his father told him.

“When Ford came out with the Mustang, down at the Roche Center, it was a car dealership, they had Mustang cars with the fences around them, like they were in a pen. They also had a life-sized plastic horse. One night after a couple of Scollins boys, perhaps were in Flynn’s, afterwards, went up, and the next morning that horse appeared on the top of Scollins’ pharmacy,” he said.

He then offered another story about his aunt, a teen-aged Catholic school girl, working behind the counter.

“A man came in and asked in a hushed tone, ‘Do you sell prophylactics?’ Maureen had no idea what the word meant, so she yelled ‘Hey Buddy, do we sell prophylactics?’ The customer turned beet red, and Buddy could’ve qualified for the Olympics in the amount of time he sprinted from the back of the pharmacy to the front.”

In addition to O’Malley, At-Large City Councilors Michael Flaherty, Michelle Wu, and Anissa Essaibi George were present.

Representatives from the Mayor’s office, At-Large City Councilor Julia Meija’s office, State Sen. Michael Rush’s office, and State Rep. Ed Coppinger’s office were also present. Resolutions from the Boston City Council, the Massachusetts House of Representatives, and the Massachusetts State Senate were presented in honor of Bill Scollins. Local musician Dan Meyers provided musical accompaniment on the bagpipes.

Prayer to the Blessed Virgin

(Never known to fail!)

Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine, splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in this necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my mother. Oh Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth, I humbly beseech thee from the bottom of my heart to succor me in my necessity (make request). There are none that can withstand your power. Oh Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (three times). Holy Mary, I place this cause in your hands (three times). Say this prayer for three consecutive days and then you must publish and it will be granted to you. —A.E.P.

MAB is Proud to Honor Our 11 Award Winners and All 34 Nominees

Aderemi Aderinto
During COVID, Aderemi worked for seven straight days, sleeping on the floor, taking care of participants when other staff were sick.

Jude Pierre Philippe
Jude takes responsibility for everything. He loves cooking and making dinner every night to make sure the participants have a good meal.

Margaret Sackey
During COVID she spent more time with the participants to keep them from feeling lonely, bored, and isolated. She took them on drives in the country and baked with them.

Kellie McFarland
Kellie gives her all. She has taught herself skills to match participant's interests, down to helping a participant build, install, and pour cement for a new mailbox.

Olusegun Anibaba
Before coming to the U.S., Olu was a banker in Nigeria. Today he finds more meaning in providing direct care to individuals who are intellectually disabled.

Georgia Utley
Georgia puts her whole self into everything she does. She works from the good of her heart. The participants are always talking and laughing when Georgia is around.

Juliana Arthur
Juliana is a force of nature. She has worked with these five participants for 18 years. They love her and she loves them. Working with the guys is the center of her life.

Foyeke Olanrewaju
She is the staff person who everyone trusts the most. When a long-time participant was hospitalized, Foyeke visited her every day to give her emotional support.

Frank Lavaud
The guys in the home love him. Frank is soft-hearted and knows exactly what each participant wants and needs. He always takes special care.

Johnson Folorunso
Johnson missed his father's funeral on Zoom from Nigeria in order to respond to a participant whose emergency Lifeline was activated. He missed his father's funeral but saved the participant's life.

Marcelle Thompson
Marcelle has dedicated her whole life to the "Church Street Guys" She loves to cook for them and gives them the quality of care they deserve.

member and housing committee chair, Royce asked the council to sign off on a letter which criticizes the Watermark Development plans for 265-267 Amory Street because it has not sufficiently consulted the community and that it does not include an affordable unit in the nine condominium residential building.

The project includes a three-story headquarters for Youth Enrichment Services (YES) and four-story, nine-unit condominium building, both designed by Embarc.

These are on the edge of an entrance to the Southwest Corridor Park that Watermark plans to enhance as part of its community benefits.

Royce opened her remarks on a positive note.

“There’s lot to like about this project,” she said. “We’re pretty excited about the YES building, but Watermark needs to finish the process with the neighbors.”

Both the Brookside and Brewery neighborhood associations have opposed the residential building as being too tall; they want a three-story building.

Royce seemed at odds with the neighborhood. She wanted more density and an increased number of units.

“There’s no affordability. That’s a problem for the committee. It comes in as nine units, just under ten. It’s in a density bonus site.

“They’re [Watermark] asking for variances in a density bonus-area. It’s an outstanding issue in that neighborhood.

“The housing committee wants some adjustments to add affordability but Watermark is proposing a different set of benefits. They have a different means of benefits that they want to provide.”

Watermark is proposing to waive their development fee that they say would be $100,000 and contribute $100,000 to the Jamaica Plain Development Corporation for its Equity and Prosperity Center campaign. In addition, Watermark would widen the Amory Street sidewalk and add new walks at the Southwest Corridor Park.

Royce was also unhappy with the Boston Planning and Development Agency (BPDA).

with the BPDA,” she said. “The project manager [Ebony Da Rosa] won’t extend the comment period and she is proposing that the project go before the BPDA board in August.”

“We haven’t submitted our letter yet and it can’t go to the BPDA without more agreement from the neighbors,” Royce said.

In a message to The Bulletin on Aug. 2 the BPDA stated: “the BPDA is not planning to take the project to the board in August in order to allow additional time to discuss the outstanding concerns.”

Max Glickman is another member not seeking reelection.

“The committee is not monetizing the value of the benefits,” he said.

“The developer is putting more than affordability with other benefits. All that stuff adds up.”

Council member Peg Preble added it up.

“This cash donation [to the JPNDP] feels like a bribe,” she said. “The cash donation is to make us feel good about the building.”

Committee member and zoning committee chair Dave Baron had his concerns.

“I’m uncomfortable with giving money, whether it’s to the Jamaica Pond Association or Stonybrook Neighborhood Association,” he said. “They’re involved with the approval process. But JPNDP is not involved with the approval process.

“I’m on the fence on this,” he said. “I really don’t want to support this letter. It’s still nine units. It doesn’t trigger a density bonus. There’s a lot of good with this project.”

Council member Samantha Montano is senior organizer for JPNDP and said she would not vote.

Dave Baron and Peg Preble both disagreed with the cash donation but for different reasons.

“But the JP neighborhood council created this density problem by not approving density,” she said. “The council always approves a low number of units in projects - like the senior supportive housing - because they want to support the neighbors.”

Outgoing chair Kevin Rainsford called for a vote on the housing committee letter. “It’s up to us to interpret what density bonus means,” he said.

Nine voted in favor, including Baron, and two opposed. The letter to the BPDA was approved.

Speaking with the Bulletin the next day Lee Goodman of Watermark said he has met with the Brewery neighborhood three times and would meet again on July 29.

“We have 88 letters of support on file at the BPDA,” he said. “It’s hard to tell who’s in favor in the Brewery group because all the opposition is funneled through one person:

Claire Rundelli.

“We are not required to do an affordable unit on this project. We elected to offer a substantial community benefit package without being asked to,” he said.

Goodman listed six benefits including waiving the developers fee, a contribution to JPNDP, new crosswalks and sidewalks on both Amory Street and the SWC park at Evy’s Tea and correcting the road ponding at Amory Street.

“Taken all together this adds up to more than the $400,000, the equivalent of an affordable unit,” he said “The sidewalks alone cost $200,000.

“I’ve gotten calls asking me to give the $100,000 of JPNDP funding to the city housing trust fund, but I refused,” he said. “It will not go to Jamaica Plain, but out to other neighborhoods.”

2020 Hyundai Sonata Hybrid Limited

It wasn’t so many years ago that Hybrid vehicles did not sell well and the additional price was not worth the addition of the Hybrid feature. Times have changed and so has the additional performance and the price has also come down. Batteries have also been improved wither it’s a Hybrid of full electric vehicle.

I spent a week in this 2020 Sonata Hybrid and it has clocked 12,000 miles since it has been in our test fleet. I have spoken to other drivers and all were on board with my opinion. Our Sonata Limited was in a class with other cars double the price. The outside style is modern and the over the rear tail lights are small flaps that remind me of small air plane flaps. The car seats 4 with comfort and amenities galore.

Heated and cooled front seats and steering wheel, 8 way power driver’s seat, large clear dash cluster and center display screen, Bose audio system with Navigation. Like all manufactures the optional equipment list is long. Power is ample gas miles is 51 plus under the right conditions hwy and 45 city. There are multiple drive modes including sport. All the controls are in reach and easy to use, steering hub controls make controls at your finger tips.

There is no question that Hyundai is building cars that people want and are buying. Base price of the Sonata 4 door sedan starts at $23,600.00 destination $975.00. Our top of the line Hybrid limited starts at $35,300.00 Hybrid Blue $27,750.00, Hybrid SEL $29,990.00. The bottom line is if you are looking for a new vehicle take a look at what Hyundai has to offered not to mention the warranty.

Trade, Hyde Park Main Streets, Keep Hyde Park Beautiful, Southwest Boston CDC, the Ward 18 Democratic Committee, and the West Fairmount Hill Community Group (WFHCG). More than 80 people attended to hear the candidates answer questions collected by HPNA members ranging from development to climate resiliency to small business support.

City Councilor At-Large Michelle Wu, District 4 City Councilor Andrea Campbell and John Barros, the city's former chief of economic development, participated for the entire forum, with Councilor At-Large Annissa Essaibi George joining about halfway through. Acting Mayor Kim Janey was unable to attend due to a death in the family.

"As we know, thinking about this election, we know it's like no other election we've seen in a long time," said HPNA president Mimi Turchinetz. "It really reflects incredible diversity. Whoever gets elected will make history, and it's incredibly exciting."

The preliminary election will be held on September 14, which will narrow the field to the top two contenders for the mayor's seat in the final election on Nov. 2.

The candidates stressed their leadership experience. Barros began his service at age 14 as a community organizer through the Dudley Street Neighborhood Initiative to address the alarming asthma rate, closing down transfer stations and working with local businesses. The two keys he stressed are neighborhood involvement and municipal partnership to address issues of climate resiliency, development, safe neighborhoods and small business sustainability.

Campbell is a six-year veteran of the City Council, previously serving as its president. She hopes to address inequities in housing, food access and quality schools in a leadership style that is "bold and courageous."

Wu, also a past council president, has represented the city for eight years. Although she never expected to run for office as a daughter of immigrants, she said she felt compelled to take action as she sought solutions for her mother, who had suffered from mental illness.

Candidates discussed how they would address the pandemic and equity issues.

"So many of the ways in which we're talking about the pandemic having had an impact actually were already the challenges that our communities were facing long before the virus," Wu said, noting skyrocketing housing costs, coastal flooding and public school needs.

"There's no question for me that it starts with having a city vision that Boston will be a city that is a anti-racist," Barros said. He highlighted a unified approach to addressing issues including police reforms, education and bridging the wealth gap.

Throughout her answers, Campbell stressed that "Boston is a tale of two cities" brought sharply into focus during the pandemic. She was able to become a successful attorney and leader while her twin brother died while in prison awaiting trial. Campbell said she "has always led with a racial equity lens," instituting training for councilors on racial equity.

Supporting Hyde Park's small businesses was another critical topic, as the community has seen stores close and restaurants fail. A question focused on what policies the candidates have instituted or plan to implement within their first 90 days in office.

Barros, a small business owner, noted that 23 percent of Boston's small businesses remain shuttered.

"As chief of economic development, I stood up six funds that provided direct financial assistance for small businesses," he continued. He would direct federal funds to support small businesses as well as channel more money into the city's Main Streets program.

"One of the reasons I jumped into the mayor's race was because of, frankly, the lack of more investment in small businesses," Campbell said. "The city has the ability to change the landscape of businesses run by people of color and small businesses just by the contracts itself."

She also started the vacant lot initiative in her district, which has brought forth requests for proposals (RFPs) on 30 vacant lots. She would expand this citywide to activate 100 vacant lots.

Wu said she has implemented policies that support small businesses, including the Acoustic on Main ordinance to encourage foot traffic and an ordinance on equity in contracting. She would fill business vacancies with local enterprises in her first 90 days.

All of the candidates were in support of the city purchasing Crane Ledge Woods on the Hyde Park-Roslindale border. However, Essaibi George was the one candidate to stress that the property is privately owned, and that it may not be available for purchase from its owner, the Jubilee Christian Church, with whom she has spoken.

Barros noted he previously created the largest urban land trust in the country and believes that it is "absolutely doable."

Campbell said the city needed "to be more proactive and less reactive" in purchasing private properties for public recreation or housing opportunities.

"It's painful to have this conversation across the city time and time again," Wu said, "where we see important community treasures at the verge of being lost. I know what a treasure this space is."

Wu added that she visited Crane Ledge several years ago and saw the woodland and panoramic vistas of the city firsthand, calling it "a little bit of paradise." She also stressed that it is in a climate justice community.

All of the candidates said they would declare the climate crisis as "a state of emergency." Wu said she put together the city's first Green New Deal. Barros said he would create a resident displacement fund for those impacted by storms, as well as improve stormwater management and create power microgrids. Campbell noted that "the city has already failed" her district in addressing the climate crisis by not including Mattapan in city climate maps, where parks are needed.

Essaibi George stressed her work on education policy as well as addressing the crises of homelessness, mental health challenges and addiction. She had previously led a council committee on the last three issues, but said it had been dismantled by then-council president Janey.

Another hot question was about the Zoning Board of Appeal (ZBA) and its issuance of variances on numerous projects.

Barros called for a rezoning of Boston that "would not leave everything in the hands of the ZBA." Campbell stressed that every neighborhood needs a plan that would be codified in the zoning code. Wu described the current zoning process as "the most complex, opaque, political development approvals process anywhere in the country" and has pushed for a major reform of the Boston Planning and Development Agency (BPDA). Essaibi George said there needs to be "a better job at master planning our city as a whole."

HPNA also is hosting a City Councilor At-Large forum at the Hyde Park Community Center on Thursday, August 12 at the Hyde Park community Center at 6 p.m. It is planned to be broadcast on Facebook Live at press time.

HARZBECKER

Joseph J. of West Roxbury, formerly of Lexington, died Thursday, August 5, at the age of 87. Joe leaves his best friend and the love of his life of 63 years, his wife, Anne (Lansing); he is the father of Joseph J., Jr. of West Roxbury and Susan C. Harzbecker of West Roxbury; cherished grandfather of Daniel Edelston of Westwood. Joe was predeceased by his siblings, Helen, Robert, June, Marion, and Frank, and is survived by many nephews and nieces. Joe, born in Boston, the son of the late Robert and Helena (Briscoe) Harzbecker, shared a special bond with his grandfather, Franz Harzbecker. Joe was a track star at Jamaica Plain High where he was elected the "best-dressed" in his graduating class! He graduated from Northeastern University with a degree in business and retired from Travelers Insurance. Joe, who was an avid Red Sox fan and longtime admirer of Ted Williams, enjoyed reading and, as a true people-person, loved to schmooze with his many friends. Joe was a family man who looked forward to family vacations at York Beach, ME. Even when some days became difficult, Joe expressed gratitude for his blessed life. Joe was a man of deep faith and a daily communicant at Holy Name Church where he was a Eucharistic Minister, served on the Parish Pastoral Council, was the co-founder and President of the H.N. Retirees, and a weekly money counter. In his retirement, Joe was the election captain of Ward 20, Precinct 19, served as Treasurer of the Hyde Park Historical Society, was a member of the West Roxbury Historical Society, and PGK of the Knights of Columbus Council 94-Lexington. Funeral from The Robert J. Lawler and Crosby Funeral Home, 1803 Centre St., WEST ROXBURY. The Family will gather in the funeral home at 10:30 am on Thursday, August 12, followed by the Mass of Christian Burial at 11:30am, in Holy Name Church, 1689 Centre St., West Roxbury. Burial in the Newton Cemetery, 791 Walnut St., Newton Centre. In lieu of flowers, donations can be made in Joe's memory to Doctors Without Borders USA, P.O. Box 5030, Hagerstown, MD 21741. Due to the rising Covid Delta variant please wear a mask. www.lawlerfuneralhome.com Lawler & Crosby Funeral Home 617-323-5600.

TERRUSO

Jane Kathryn, Age 79, passed away peacefully on Monday, August 2, 2021, surrounded by her loving and grateful family. Jane was born August 16, 1941, in Hyde Park, the only child of a steel worker Edward Baldwin, and a stay-at-home mom, Mary Reagan Baldwin. Jane attended Boston College and studied Sociology, where she was introduced to her husband, Eugene Sullivan, Jr. Jane worked for Blue Cross Blue Shield in Boston and soon after, began to start her family of six children. Later in life, Jane married John Terruso, Sr. They made many memories and enjoyed adventures together. Known as a vibrant, warm, and highly compassionate soul, Jane was deeply loved and valued by her family and friends. She was admired for her steadfast guidance and quiet strength. Jane cultivated a strong family bond. It is through her example that her children learned what it really means to prioritize family and she leaves a legacy that many will model. Jane will be remembered for her love for dancing and music, her nature to embrace the moment and most of all, her laughter. Jane was committed to serve. She volunteered at organizations, such as Bread and Roses, and she generously served as a Eucharistic Minister. Jane embodied compassion, empathy and wisdom and dedicated her time to those in hospice. Jane is survived by her husband of 26 years, John J. Terruso of Hudson NH; children and spouses, Eugene Sullivan III and wife, Pamela Sullivan, Kim Reddy and husband, John Reddy, James Sullivan and wife, Elizabeth Sullivan, Kathleen Sarver-Glejzer and husband, Paul Glejzer, Debora Greenblatt and husband, Josh Greenblatt and Danielle Sullivan; stepchildren, John Terruso, Jr. and spouse, Kristine, Steven Terruso, and Christina Terruso; grandchildren, Peyton and Noah Sullivan, Mikayla, Cameron, and Shane Reddy, Jack and Ruby Sullivan, Jake and Jessica Sarver and Casi Glejzer, and Jonah and Kathryn Greenblatt. Funeral from The Dracut Funeral Home, 2159 Lakeview Ave., DRACUT, MA. Interment will be held privately. In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to St. Jude Children's Research Hospital, 501 St. Jude Place, Memphis, TN 38105 or to St. Mary Magdalen Parish, 93 Lakeview Ave., Tyngsboro, MA 01879. WESTERLY BURIAL GROUND PRESENTATION

THE WEST ROXBURY HISTORICAL SOCIETY is holding this learning initiative on Saturday, September 18, at 2pm at the Westerly Burial Ground. The presentation was written by Bob Murphy and will be delivered by Sandi Serkess. We will meet outside the burial ground on Center Street, next to Walgreens, at two o'clock and learn about its inhabitants! Come one, Come all! Bring a friend or two. Free and open to the public.

The Westerly Burial Ground (also known as Westerly Burying Ground) is an historic cemetery on Centre Street in the West Roxbury neighborhood of Boston, Massachusetts. Established in 1683, it is Boston's seventh-oldest cemetery, and where the first settlers of the West Roxbury area are buried. It was enlarged in 1832, and 1844, and its last documented burial was in 1962. [Eight American Revolutionary War veterans are buried there as well as fifteen veterans of the American Civil War. The cemetery was added to the National Register of Historic Places in 1987.

the local landmarks and the lesser-known destinations, organize media events, expand social media activities, participate in trade shows and partner with airlines to incentivize planners, tour operators and international media.

Sheridan said 70 percent of the hotels in Boston and Cambridge with 50 or more rooms voted to approve the TDMD formation.

Executive Director of Arts Boston Catherine Peterson said her nonprofit organization provides research, marketing, audience building programs and networking for 165 arts organizations and festivals. And she concurs the industry is hurting.

"These 165 cultural organizations have been devastated by the pandemic," she said. "Their earned income has come to a halt over the last 18 months with no in-person performances, and they've lost, just the nonprofit ones, they've lost over $376 million."

Peterson said that while a good portion of the population is showing up at many of the current offerings – like the live shows at Fenway – many are not ready to come back yet.

"About 20 percent of audiences say they won't return until 2022, and that's pre-Delta variant," she said.

And so Peterson said the additional reach of the TDMD would help bring more of those willing audiences to organizational members.

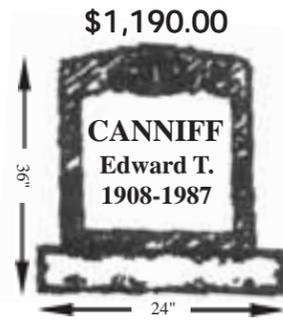

District 1 City Councilor Lydia Edwards, whose district includes the hotel-rich North End, said that it's great to see the Downtown neighborhoods represented during the meeting, but she pushed the need for more tourism and hotel infrastructure beyond those areas, as Boston is more than just the Downtown.

"The tourism industry needs to get beyond Downtown Boston, it needs to get into local neighborhoods, it needs to get into places not just on the Waterfront and that's a commitment you made, and that's a commitment you followed through on," she said, noting that the 70 percent of hotels included in the TDMD are not completely Downtown-based.

Sheridan said her organization will be able to include more parts of Boston, as well as more cities and towns in the Greater Boston area after the first five years of the district's creation. District 3 City Councilor Frank Baker said his district includes a myriad of tourist locations, and he's happy to see an expanded reach for these marketing initiatives.

"I have a Frederick Law Olmsted Park, I have a presidential library, I have a replica of the senate, I have burial grounds dating back to the 1600s, and we now have Little Saigon – which we've been working on for a few years now, and so that's music to my ears," he said. "We're still in discussions with the Strand about how we revitalize that too. I like the local option. That's good news."

Prayer to the Blessed Virgin
(Never known to fail!)
Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine, splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in this necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my mother. Oh Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth, I humbly beseech thee from the bottom of my heart to succor me in my necessity (make request). There are none that can withstand your power. Oh Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (three times). Holy Mary, I place this cause in your hands (three times). Say this prayer for three consecutive days and then you must publish and it will be granted to you. —P.S.D.
