Roslindale’s Porch Fest, Saturday’s daylong annual celebration of local music and good vibes, attracted thousands of people to homes throughout the community for a variety of free outdoor concerts.

More than 100 acts gave live performances at 80 venues stretching from near the Jamaica Plain border through Roslindale Village to the Beech Street area in a diverse array of styles from Latin jazz to classical to hip hop.

“We expected this to be the most successful Porch Fest yet, and it was,” said Clayton Cheever, one of the event’s principal organizers, at an after-party event at the Square Root Saturday night. “One of the hardest things about this event is there’s way more music than you can

Coffey said he created a website in order “to pull together the available 311 data.”

361 Belgrade housing gets positive feedback

Mary Ellen Gambon

A proposed 124-unit residential development on the Roslindale/West Roxbury border at 361 Belgrade Ave. received a mostly favorable response at a 90-minute virtual meeting on Thurs. Sept. 22, with the building’s height the main point of contention.

This was the first meeting of the project’s Impact Advisory Group (IAG), whose members were selected from both neighborhoods by elected officials to offer input on the project’s design and potential neighborhood impact.

The five-story building is slated to replace the former Clay Auto Center and National Tire and Battery warehouse between Anawan Terrace and West Roxbury Parkway near the Bellevue Hill commuter rail station. The site was previously being considered for the Roxbury Prep charter school, but that plan was scrapped after a five-year community battle that led the school ultimately to choose an alternate location in Roxbury.

“There were things that we learned from that,” said Joe Hanley, the permanent zoning attorney for the proponent, Jake Upton of Upton + Partners. “I guess the most principal lesson that kind of came through – especially with folks that had concerns about the school – was a preference for residential [use].”

Quinn Valcich, the project manager from the Boston Planning and Development Agency (BPDA), facilitated the 90-minute meeting, which was attended by more than 30 people. During the meeting, Hanley and other development team members described their vision for transforming the 43,014 square-foot industrial site to a vibrant residential community that would be safer for pedestrians and bicyclists.

Architect Ben Thomas from Arrowstreet said that the grading of the site presented some initial challenges, at one point dropping 16 feet. The highest point of the building is 63 feet, and the lowest point along Anawan Street is 24 feet above grade.

There will be 86 parking spaces that are mostly below grade, and 22 of them will be able to accommodate electric vehicles. Also, there will be 124 interior bicycle parking spaces, 25 visitor bicycle spaces, and a 19-dock Blue Bike station on West Roxbury Parkway to accommodate cyclists.

The building’s stories will be stepped back, using variations of brick, gray and tan color tones and wood to delineate floors. Of the 124 units, 14.5% will be affordable, exceeding the city’s Inclusionary Development Policy (IDP) requirement of 13%. There will be a mix of studio, one- and two-bedroom apartments, with the larger units located at the building’s corners. Rents will

Eversource updates ACA on GCE

Matthew MacDonald
Staff Reporter

The Allston Civic Association (ACA) met on Wednesday, Sept. 21, during which the main appointment brought in a team of Eversource representatives to update it on the Greater Cambridge Energy Project (GCEP), which will impact the neighborhood.

The project has been in the submittal phase since late 2021, and has been pending approval at the Energy Facility Siting Board (EFSB) since March. When completed, it would add a new electrical substation to the Kendall Square section of Cambridge, and connect it connect to an existing one on Lincoln Street in Allston.

The substations, as proposed, will be connected by two transmission routes. Both will run approximately 3 miles across the Charles River: one via the River Street Bridge and the other through a tunnel to be dug under the river from the edge of Magazine Beach Park to what will eventually be the Lincoln Street connector of the Allston Multimodal Site. Less than one mile, per each route, will be on the Boston side of the Charles.

After a brief slide presentation regarding the two Allston routes, members of the seven person Eversource team fielded questions from the approximately 50 people who were in virtual attendance. Their recurring theme focused on whether or not the new transmission routes would increase the electrical distribution in the neighborhood, with mention made of the proposed developments that are currently in the pipeline for the area.

Responding to this, Maija Benjamins – director of Strategic Project Development – noted that the intent of the GCEP is to be able to handle area growth for at least the next 20 years, while also adding facilities and rebuilding transmission lines with new technology.

Benjamins specified how linking the two substations will increase distribution potential. “The more we can loop the systems through, the more reliable we can make it, and that’s what this station is doing: it’s connecting two transmission systems that are currently separated,” she explained. “It’s bringing them into one and building that loop in, then also making sure we can bring the appropriate amount of energy into the area.”

ACA President Anthony D’Isidoro also raised the concerns of power outages, bringing up the planned blackout that occurred in late July, during a severe heat wave.

Jerry Mulcahy – manager

for Underground Construction and Operations – clarified that the problem was caused by a fault, rather than a station-to-station distribution line failure, and that the outage was decided on to allow repairs to be done in order to bring the power for Franciscan Children’s Hospital and St. Elizabeth’s back to its full capacity.

“We tried everything we could not to take the outage,” Mulcahy said of Eversource’s response to the fault, which occurred in the Commonwealth Avenue-Harvard Street area. “But, at the end of the day, it was the only way for us to send our employees into the manhole safely to make those repairs, and get the hospitals back to their normal operating conditions, which was – for us – a priority, especially during the heat wave.”

Once approved by the EFSB, the GCEP is anticipated to break ground in 2024, with a projected in-service date of 2028-2029. For more information, contact Community Relations Specialist Nicole Bowden at Nicole.Bowden@Eversource.com.

When it came time to name the new I-93 bridge near North Station, which would become one of the symbols of the new Boston, the decision was made to call it the Zakim Bunker Hill Bridge. The first is the last name of Lennie Zakim, a local civil rights leader, and the inclusion of “Bunker Hill” appeased the residents of Charlestown, who understandably wanted their section of Boston to be referenced since the bridge connects their piece of real estate to downtown.

Unfortunately, the name of the bridge in newscasts has been truncated to merely the “Zakim Bridge.” The same shortening can be applied to the name of the huge park off Goddard Avenue and Pond Street in Brookline, commonly referred to as Larz Anderson. The 64-acre park lies actually in two communities, 61-plus acres of which are in Brookline and 2-plus acres (the southwest section) are in Boston. It should really be called the Larz and Isabella Anderson Park, or better yet, the Isabella and Larz Anderson Park because it was she, after her husband’s death, who bequeathed their estate encompassing a massive parcel of land to the town of Brookline. Alas, it was not unusual for a woman’s name to be dropped/become lost.

My Kind of Town/ Joe Galeota

Isabella’s maiden name was Weld, a name recognized in nineteenth century Boston because of wealth and prominence. An accomplished person in her own right, she married Larz and lived the life of a rich and famous woman on their huge estate. Unless it was in her will donating the huge parcel to the citizens of Brookline to refer to it only in her husband’s name, I feel bad that Larz gets all the credit.

The park has recently been refurbished, open to all citizens, even Bostonians. Unfortunately, in her bequeathment, it appears that there is nothing about prohibiting non-Brookline citizens about being charged higher prices for rentals. Ouch.

Council discusses police and fire grants for hazmat and gangs

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Boston City Council subcommittee on Public Safety and Criminal Justice met recently and discussed four grants coming through the city’s coffers for the Boston Police Department

(BPD) and the Boston Fire Department (BFD).

The largest of grants is going to the BPD for gang violence prevention. The Senator Charles E. Shannon Jr. Community Safety initiative Grant from the Massachusetts Executive Office of Public Safety & Security has appropriated $1.6 million to the City of Boston this year in order to fund “regional and multi-disciplinary approaches to combat gang violence through coordinated prevention and intervention, law enforce-range from about $1,500 to $3,200 per month depending upon the unit size, with an additional fee for parking.

Green space is planned for the West Roxbury Parkway side of the development. Shade trees will be planted along the Belgrade Avenue side. The building will be heated by an all-electric heat pump, and the goal is for it to qualify for LEED gold status as a green building, according to Upton.

Accessibility was a key component of Thomas’s presentation. He explained that the sidewalk would be extended at Belgrade Ave. and West Roxbury Parkway to calm traffic. Crosswalks will be compliant with Americans with Disabilities Act standards and can possibly be raised, particularly on the Anawan Ave. side.

“We feel that this project is improving the way that the community experiences the area,” he said. “There’s beautification on all sides. The architecture is modest.”

Christine Adreani, another IAG member, questioned the impact on traffic while noting that the development is being marketed toward people who will use intermodal transportation.

“I can’t imagine that this is not going to have an impact on traffic flow in that area, which is already pretty fraught, I would say,” she said.

Traffic engineer Brian Beisel of Howard/Stein Hudson Associates said that, while the intent is for people to use public transportation, ride bikes or walk, the increased vehicle traffic “would be a drop in the bucket” compared to the volume that is already there.

Some IAG members said they would be willing to see the height of the building increased in order for the project to include more affordable units, including Roslindale residents Robert Orthman and Matt Lawlor. Both stressed that the location is a gateway to the West Roxbury and Roslindale commercial districts.

“This project seems to make a lot of sense, especially with the housing affordability crisis that we have,” Lawlor said.

“There’s a connection we’re trying to build between Roslindale and Centre Street in West Roxbury,” Orthman added. “It’s clear that a lot of thought has gone into this.”

On the other hand, IAG member Ginny Gass questioned what she called “excessive building height.” Her concern was echoed by fellow Roslindale IAG member George Marsh.

Valcich replied that the stepped approach of construction was a way to mitigate the impact of the height.

“But it’s also something that our staff wanted to have the public weigh in on and to get a sense of where folks land on the height,” he added.

“We are trying hard on this,” Hanley noted. “And we do appreciate the opportunity to work together on it.”

take-out only. The family owned six table Mediterranean restaurant has current sit-down hours from 10 a.m.-10 p.m. (Sun-Wed), and from 10 a.m.-11 p.m. (Thu-Sat). It also does not have an alcohol license.

Commenting on the tentative proposal, ACA member Ed Kotomori suggested that the business check its costs before proceeding, noting potential competition from local brick and mortar establishments, food delivery apps, and the potentially destructive late night crowd emptying the local bars and clubs. “I think you should look deep into it, because it may cost you more than it’s worth, he concluded.

“It certainly is a different experience between 1 p.m. in the afternoon, and serving... the public at 2 a.m. in the morning,” D’Isidoro continued. “I mean, it’s certainly two different worlds, and you have to be ready for it, no doubt about it.”

Canca and D’Isidoro agreed to talk offline before finalizing the proposal to be voted on.

Both at the beginning and at the end of the two and a half hour meeting, there was discussion about BPDA developments in the neighborhood, particularly the NEXUS project at The Allston Innovation Corridor (250, 280, and 305 Western Ave.)

D’Isidoro informed the group that he had written a letter to the BPDA regarding his problems with the project, which was approved on Oct. 14, 2021. These included its “underwhelming” benefits and mitigation package, the fact that it exceeds the Western Avenue Corridor Study parking limits (which the project was exempt from) by approximately 200 spaces, and complaints with demolition as it impacts the existing neighborhood. His letter also noted the BPDA’s tabling of the 51 Melcher St. (Fort Point) proposal, given the concerns of neighbors regarding the labs that would be housed in it.

The NEXUS project would also have labs. “Whenever I brought up questions about the lab,” D’Isidoro said in comparison to the tabled Fort Point proposal, “it was kind of pooh poohed off. So they are coming up with standards this fall for lab development in the city of Boston, based on this pushback that they got, and what I’m asking for is that, retroactively, the development crew at NEXUS is held to those new standards.”

In other news, with university students returning, break-ins are up in the GAP (Gardner/Ashford/Pratt) neighborhood, which houses many BU students. MacBook Pro computers are the main target. According to Sgt. Ed McMahan, thieves are “just walking right in” through unlocked back doors and windows to make off with their stolen goods.

The ACA meets virtually on the third Wednesday of the month at 6 p.m. For more information, visit www.allstonscivicassociation.org.

Tim West will be attempting the U.S. Marine Corps 50K Ultra Marathon in Virginia on Oct. 30 and is running to raise funds for the Fisher House Boston in West Roxbury in honor of USMC Sgt. Tyler Ziegel.

West said he runs for the Fisher House because of the steadfast support the organization provides for families, and pointed out that those efforts can sometimes fly under the radar.

“We hear all the time, especially from the veterans we’ve spoken to, that no one has ever really heard of the Fisher House until they need the Fisher House” he said.

The Fisher House is a national organization that provides temporary homes for the families of veterans receiving care at U.S. Veterans Administration (VA) Hospitals, including the West Roxbury and Jamaica Plain VA Hospitals.

“It’s doing the work, it’s direct impact and you know people want to be close to their loved ones in times of medical need,” West said.

West will be running the USMC Marathon for the 10th time this year, and this time around he thought he’d step it up a notch by running the Ultra Marathon 50K iteration of the event. He said he’s running to honor Sgt. Ziegel because when he was first became acquainted with the Fisher House and its mission back in 2013, he met Ziegel’s mother Rebecca about a year after he passed. Whole Foods site continued from page 5 into new retail space fronting Washington Street,” explained Sinatra.

A Letter of Intent was filed by New Creek LLC and WSP 1725 Holding, LLC, affiliates of Kimco Realty Corporation, back in July 2018. The project was delayed due to the pandemic, and the development team started hosting community meetings with updated plans in July of this year. “This gave us time to revisit our design and make improvements to the original submission, and we are excited to be in front of the IAG and have this project moving forward,” explained Nick Brown of Kimco. “We view this project as a partnership between Kimco and the community. We welcome your feedback.”

Kimco Realty Corp. is a real estate investment trust and North America’s largest publicly traded owner and operator of open-air, grocery shopping centers and mixed-used assets. “The configuration [of the Brighton Whole Foods] is not sustainable for the long term. They are currently operating out of 20,000 square feet. Whole Foods preferred concept is more than twice that amount of square footage,” Brown explained.

Tim Talun, of Elkus

Manfredi Architects, presented an overview of the project to meeting attendees. He explained that while designing the building, they have taken into account the surrounding area, the buildings, and the character of the neighborhood. “A significant benefit of this project will be an improved pedestrian realm and improved multi-modal transportation around the site,” Talun stated.

Talun also discussed what has changed with the project since the initial proposal. The changes include overall reduction in project size (24,800 sq. ft reduction in total area), 41 fewer units, and 30 fewer parking spaces. The affordable housing percentage has also increased to 15 percent. The team added more greenspace with a 1,600 sq. ft pocket park along Washington Street. The Whole Foods building has been reduced from four floors to three floors.

Anticipated transportation improvements include reconstructed ADA-compliant pedestrian sidewalks along Washington Street, Allston Street and Corey Road adjacent to the Project site. New ADA-compliant pedestrian ramps and crosswalks will also be at the Washington Street/Allston Street intersection and directly to the new Whole Foods front entrance. There will be a construction of a new separated bike lane on Washington Street adjacent to the project site for westbound cyclists. A new painted bicycle lane will be created for eastbound cyclists on Washington Street. The development team will also implement signal timing/phasing improvements to the Washington Street and Corey Road traffic signal. Funding and installation of a Bluebikes station will be added to the project site. Kimco is also committed to 25 percent electric vehicle parking spaces and 100 percent “EV-ready” spaces.

The project team discussed community benefits of the project. One is housing; 35 units will be designated as affordable, which exceeds the City’s Inclusionary Housing regulations. Eighteen new homeownership units will be available. The project team remarked that there is a sustainability benefit to the project, with reducing energy consumption by 19.3 percent through energy optimizing building design and systems. The proposed project will also offer 250 new construction jobs and 75 new permanent jobs, net new annual real estate tax revenue for the City of Boston, as well as state sales and business tax revenue.

At the end of the presentation, there was comments from IAG and community members.

“One of my concerns is that Allston Street is not very wide. During the day, you have all these vehicles - Amazon, FedEx, utilities, - and they pull up on the sidewalk and block traffic. It’s really dangerous to pedestrians, and there’s a rehabilitation center across the street. I think it’s a mistake to think that this will cause just a ‘little’ more traffic. It’s not great right now as it is,” remarked community member and IAG member Pamela Reynolds.

IAG member Dan Daly remarked that he believes the “community benefits” listed only benefit the project developers, and not the community as a whole. “But I like the changes from the last meeting, and I like the idea that Whole Foods will remain open while you do construction,” he added. Daly also asked if there will be solar panels on the buildings. Talun responded that the buildings will be “solar ready”.

Eileen Houben, an IAG member, stated that she does not believe there is enough greenspace. “There’s still a big issue with over density, lack of greenspace, and lack of trees,” she told Nick Brown.

A few IAG members had concerns that the transportation team’s traffic study in the area from 2019 was outdated.

The comment period on this project is currently open. To submit a comment, visit www.bostonplans.org/projects/development-projects/15-washington-street.

This was the seventh Roslindale Porch Fest, according to Cheever, a Roslindale resident and the director of Norwood’s Morrill Memorial Library, who was recruited to help coordinate the event. The tradition was paused in 2020 because of the pandemic but returned last year, gaining momentum and increasing the number of performers each time.

This is the first year that Roslindale Village Main Street (RVMS) has sponsored the event, Cheever said. The Roslindale Arts Alliance, run by Glenn and Janice Williams, founded the event in 2014 and served as its fiscal sponsor. Cheever said several original organization members, including local musicians Terry Kitchen and Andy Hollinger, joined with new volunteers to inject increased diversity to the series, which is completely volunteer driven.

“We are definitely very grateful to the Roslindale Arts Alliance for all it has done over the years,” Cheever said. “There’s a great sense of pride in being invited to be a part of this tradition. There’s an awesome core group of people involved.”

At the Square Root after-party, Cheever presented Glenn Williams with a ukulele as a gift of appreciation for the couple’s dedication to Roslindale Porch Fest and the arts community.

Kitchen, one of the core members who performed Saturday, said he became involved in Roslindale Porch Fest in 2015. The award-winning folk musician has been one of the recording artists on Lowbudget Records, a local outlet formed in 1979 by Glenn Williams and his friend, Tim Casey. They and several other area performers contribute their music in a coterie that Kitchen affectionately referred to as “the Roslindale Rock and Roll Mafia.”

“It’s a fun way to hear local music,” Kitchen said. “It’s more casual to walk around or bike ride to different performances. It turns into sort of a huge block party. We absolutely made sure to have a wide range of styles from classical to hip hop to acoustic performances.”

Ghost Town Brass, a Somerville-based 13-piece band led by saxophonist Jeff Gang, proved to be one of the most popular shows. One of four concerts on South Street, the crowd of 100 doubled within an hour. People of all ages sprang to their feet to dance to the soulful 90s jams “Motownphilly” by Boyz II Men and “Free Your Mind” by En Vogue in a display of the essence of Roslindale Porch Fest.

Steve Gag and Laura Gang hosted the show, which featured their nephew. While this was their first time hosting a Porch Fest show, the couple years ago held “backyard bash” shows in concert with the Roslindale Farmers Market.

“We’ve always enjoyed having performers in our backyard,” Gag said. “With Jeff being in this band, that’s icing on the cake. I am so pleased that Porch Fest has really taken off.”

Jeff Gang, 35, said he grew up in a family steeped in music. He started playing piano when he was young and switched to the saxophone at the age of 13.

“I’ve always been fascinated by music and wanted to be around it and make it,” he said, noting the band plays regularly in Greater Boston and can be found on Facebook and Instagram. “I am a huge fan of Porch Fests in general. Roslindale has a really good community spirit and a ton of artistic people.”

Another partnership formed due to Roslindale Porch Fest was at a concert earlier in the day at Casserly House at 42

Stellman Rd. Casserly House, which serves as a connection point for immigrants in Roslindale and provides English classes to non-native speakers. Afrika Gente Trio, a Latin jazz band performed two sets there.

“It was really serendipity,” Casserly House Director Donna Stiglmeier said, noting she and band leader and percussionist Cornell Coley met at a market. “We chose each other for Porch Fest.”

She added that she was happy that the music reflected the diversity of the neighborhood, which has a large Latinx population.

Coley, who was born in Jamaica and lives in Mattapan, has studied, taught and performed percussion and cultural dancing for nearly three decades. He was Roslindale’s 2016 artist in residence with the City of Boston via the Roslindale Community Center. At this show, he performed with Berklee alumni Ronny Khoury, a native of the Dominican Republic, and Lionel Girardeau, who is from France.

“I did drum circles in Adams Park on Sundays at one point,” he said. “I also did jam sessions called border crossings for a few years.”

As people swayed to the Latin-tinged groove, people walking up the street joined the party, dancing and chatting.

“Viva Rozzie!” Coley shouted to an eruption of cheers.

speaking at the pre-marathon pasta dinner, and West said her story of how the Fisher House supported her family in their time of need struck him deeply.

“When Ty was injured, they stayed at the Fisher House in San Antonio,” he said. “They’re from Illinois, but he stayed at the Brooke Army Medical Center in Texas when he came back from overseas. Becky, her husband and other family stayed at the San Antonio Fisher House for 19 months.”

Ziegel had been injured from an IED in 2004 during his second tour of duty in Iraq. He needed extensive medical care, and West said it was amazing that the Fisher House was able to support the Ziegel family and keep him close to those he loved during that time. Because of that and many other stories he’s heard from veterans, he has run to support the Fisher House for nine other Marine Corps Marathons and three Boston Marathons.

“Tyler passed in 2012, and since then she and I have stayed in touch,” he said. “I reached out to her the day after that marathon in 2013 because she had definitely left an impression. Since then we’ve been keeping in touch on Facebook and so when (Fisher House Boston Executive Director) Jen DeLuca said to me, ‘Hey, we could use this run to run in memory of someone,’ I just thought it would be a natural thing. And it turned out that it’s my 10th Marine Corps Marathon and the 10th year of Ty’s passing. So I reached out to Becky and she was supportive and some of Tyler’s buddies have reached out to me too. So this should be a good run.”

Nineteen months is a long time for anyone, and one can imagine time comes to a crawl when you have a loved one undergoing surgeries and serious medical trauma. It’s also a long time for an organization to house family members for free, but West said he felt it shouldn’t be all that surprising or uncommon.

“It’s the way it should be, you know?” he said. “You get the worst call of your life, that your son’s been in an IED attack and his life is going to be forever changed, and the last thing you’re thinking about is how am I going to afford going to San Antonio and how long are we going to be there. Fisher House just comes in and says, ‘You’re staying here for free. Don’t worry about it.’ It’s just pretty awesome.”

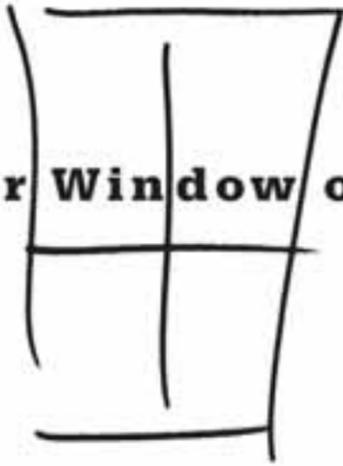

West said he’s raised thousands for the Fisher House, and most if not all of that money comes from the local community.

“The base of my support always has come from the West Roxbury and Roslindale area,” he said. “People like (State Sen.) Mike Rush and (State Rep.) Ed Coppinger and local businesses like West on Centre and organizations like the Emerald Society, when we’ve had events and fundraisers and things like that they’ve all stepped up. The Boston Police Emerald Society has donated their hall, folks from there have donated their time to DJ and things like that. Richie Gormley is always willing to help out, and Jen and the whole staff at Fisher House have been unbelievable. In addition to all the stuff she has to do every day, she always carves out time to help.”

Rozzie Open Studios returning from COVID hibernation

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

It's the fall, the leaves are changing, the wind is picking up and the artists are once again opening their doors this season for the 16th annual Roslindale Open Studios event.

Organizer and photographer Chris Lang said it's been awhile, but they have a great number of artists rip roaring and ready to show the community both what they can do and where they prefer to do it.

"We didn't do it in 2020 or 2021 because of COVID, and we're back now after a two-year break," he said.

The festival of local artists is set for Oct. 15 and 16 from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Hundreds will be out showing their stuff in every medium either in the 35 home studios dotted around Roslindale or at one of the many group galleries, like that at the Roslindale Substation.

"We've got the main floor and the basement for artists who signed up there and I think it's going to have Jack Abbey Hard Cider there too," Lang said. "That will definitely be fun."

Lang said that like many post-COVID events these days, he feels a lot of folks are ready to get out and he believes the attendance will be pretty high.

"I think the crowds are going to be really good because of people missing it the last two years," he said. "We had people asking us in 2021 to see if we could do it then, but the timing didn't really work, and so we've got tons of artists now coming to participate. Once we pulled the trigger and said we're ready to go, we got a great response from people, ranging from new artists to people who have done the Open Studios for years. We got a great group this year and people were really excited to do it."

Lang said he usually photographs nature, and said lately he's been seeing more and more like-minded individuals out there in Boston's parks and Urban Wild areas.

"For me, it'll be nature stuff," he said. "And we're going to have a lot of that. I think COVID has brought out a whole new crop of bird fans and birders and people out there taking walks and getting out of the house. For me, it's been great because in doing all the things I did pre-COVID, I've got a lot more people interested in the work and joining me when I'm going out shooting. And it's still been local places like Franklin Park, Millennium Park and the Arboretum. There have been a lot of people out there with binoculars looking for what I'm taking pictures of. It's fun seeing a whole lot more people out there doing it."

The 16th annual Roslindale Open Studios event is scheduled for October 15 and 16. Then Mayor Marty Walsh addresses the crowd at a prior Open Studios gathering.

The day will also feature live music from local group Applejuice! Band from 2 p.m. to 3 p.m. on Sunday. Most of the group galleries are around Adams Park in Roslindale Square, like at the Roslindale Congregational Church, the Substation, Adams Park itself, Birch Street and the Emerald Society Group.

Lang added that several of the home studio artists are doing demonstrations of their work during the day.

"Not only are they selling their stuff, but one is doing an autumn card-making demo, one's doing a cyanotype demo, one's doing clay carving demos, and much more," he said. "Rather than just buying stuff you can go over and watch them doing work, which is just kind of cool."

Lang added that he's looking forward to seeing everybody again and to make Roslindale artistic once again after the brunt of the pandemic.

"We can all agree that looking at nice artwork and getting out there is a good thing," he said.

River Street Bridge Closure Virtual Public Information Meeting

What is happening?

The Massachusetts Department of Transportation (MassDOT) is holding a virtual public information meeting to provide members of the Hyde Park neighborhood community with an update about the effort to replace the existing River Street Bridge over the Amtrak/MBTA Northeast Corridor. The bridge is currently closed except for pedestrian traffic. MassDOT has determined that keeping the bridge closed, conducting early preliminary work, and advancing the design of a new bridge will allow a substantial time saving and ultimately result in opening a permanent, replacement bridge much sooner than originally anticipated.

How will this affect you?

Under the current proposal, the bridge will remain open to pedestrian traffic only, with vehicles defoued as they have been since the structure was closed. MassDOT anticipates being able to present a proposed design for a new bridge to the community in the first quarter of 2023.

A CENTURY OF SERVICE TO THE COMMUNITY

Disali compared what Coffey had described with the problems at Clifford Playground [on Massachusetts Avenue]. “It’s a city-wide problem,” said another member.

Steering committee member Jon McCurdy said that elected officials should be notified. “I recommend that people carry a can of NARCAN,” McCurdy said. “I just made my findings public a week ago,” Coffey told The Bulletin the next day. “I really want to get this conversation started.”

Two days later a magenta sheet was tied to the Franklin Park sign at the Williams Street entrance on Forest Hills Street. “Parents and Pet Owners!!!!!! Inspect unpaved areas closely for needles and syringes before play activities. Report to 311 for clean up.” One SNA member told The Bulletin she was glad to see the sign. “I wish there were more of them,” she said.

A photograph of the sign was sent by The Bulletin to the Parks Dept. for comment but did not receive any response.

The Bulletin reviewed

Coffey’s website. It read, in part, “Since the installation of the Shattuck cottages within Franklin Park, I have noticed a dramatic increase in open heroin use...”

“Within Franklin Park in the last month, I have guided DPH [Dept. of Public Health] employees to over 200 needles. I have witnessed heroin deals. I have found bags of heroin near trails... “One major finding is that there are no mechanisms in place to mitigate the impact of the Shattuck cottages within the vicinity. No thought was given to potential ramifications.” Coffey attached two maps to the website purporting to show the increase in “needle clean up” before and after the Shattuck cottages by means of blue dots; the dots thicken considerably after the cottages were opened according to Coffey’s analysis.

“What is telling is the timing of the activity after the placement of the cottages and not before,” the website reported.

Coffey has enlisted the help of long-time Williams Street resident Alan Ihrer.

“Alan and I have cleaned up all the needles and drug debris to get a baseline so we can know that there is something new,” Coffey told The Bulletin.

“I pulled in Alan early on to see what I was seeing. He has been helping me a lot. He collects the needles so that DPH can do a single pick up. His heart and courage are bigger than mine, I do not dare pick up needles myself,” Coffey said.

The Bulletin asked Coffey if he had filed a police report after he sent the Bulletin a photo he said were of two men allegedly doing drugs in the park.

“I have not contacted the police as it was my understanding that there is not much they can or will do,” he said.

“I’m very satisfied with the 311 response,” Coffey said. “The individuals working for the DPH cleaning up the needles are doing an amazing job.”

The Bulletin made two walk-throughs of the area and discovered a large, apparently well used encampment, with heaps of trash and bed clothes near the picnic grove, a tent pitched near the ball field and graffiti on every inch of the archway of Ellicot Arch. Piles of spray cans were stacked in the shrubs. The Bulletin sent photographs of the piles of trash and graffiti to the Parks Dept. along with Coffey’s website asking for comment and response. The Parks Department responded in a statement that read it appreciated neighbors bringing concerns to the attention of the Parks Department.

The statement went on to say said that maintenance crews had been at the site but had seen no encampments; a work order was placed to remove the graffiti.

“The Parks Department is responsible for maintenance and any illicit activity should be reported to the police.”

Four days later the encampment and piles of rubbish had not been cleaned. The graffiti had been painted over but new graffiti had been painted, apparently that night. Coffey said he had walked through the area of Franklin Park with a Franklin Park Coalition member “and we found a dozen new needles.” The Franklin Park Coalition said in a statement to The Bulletin on Sept 19 that “it is advocating for needed solutions.”

“We have contacted a whole range of city and state officials,” the statement read, “and working closely with the Stonybrook Neighborhood residents and the Franklin Park Tennis Association, the two groups most impacted by an increase in drug activity in the area.”

Coffey told The Bulletin that “plenty of people in the neighborhood have concerns [about the park]. A half dozen or so women aren’t feeling comfortable walking through the park anymore.”

BPD Project Coordinator for Office Resources DeMon Bills went over the grant, which he said has been funding such programs for more than 15 years. He said seven years ago, the department opened the grant up to nonprofits throughout the city looking to address gang violence through a request-for-proposal (RFP) process to give the community resources it needed to focus efforts to reduce gang violence.

“Every year we probably have about 1,500 youths served through the Shannon Grant, either with stipends, summer jobs or with youth programming,” he said. “Since its inception in 2006, we have seen a 16 percent decrease in homicides, a 9 percent decrease in aggravated assaults and a 10 percent decrease in the total violent crimes through an initial investment of $350 per young person.”

Bills said despite having competition for the grant, they encourage organizations to apply as much as possible.

“What we try to do is get more organizations to apply, even though we have a limited amount of funds each year we still want people to apply,” he said.

Bills said they also have annual allotments for specific organizations like the Boston Centers for Youth and Families, the Boston Public Health Commission, Youth Options Unlimited

The Bulletin

Boston, Boston Medical Center Violence Intervention Advocacy Program, the Suffolk County District Attorney’s Office and Youth Connect.

“Those are kind of the cornerstones of the Shannon and there are six of them and we try to fill in the rest at about 25 organizations every year,” he said. “Through that RFP, we usually get about 50 applicants a year. At the beginning we had 120. We actually got the Youth Development Grants to kind of balance the Shannon grants, simply because we had so many applicants who couldn’t get funding from the Shannon, so they kind of work in concert.”

Bills said the remainder of the funding goes to the Safe and Successful Youth Initiative grant, which he said is for “proven risk” youths. He said the rest of the Shannon Grant funding is for high-risk youths and at-risk youths.

Also discussed during the hearing, BFD Deputy Fire Chief Rober Calobrisi talked about why the department needs the $237,500 grant for decontamination equipment and vehicles maintenance expenses for the Hazard Response Team at the BFD.

“Most of the time, we have to rotate our vehicles,” he said. “We have four Hazmat Technicians who respond to incidents both on and off duty, so they have a significant wear and tear each year. We always try to rotate the vehicles so that each tech gets a new one every five years. This year, it would be one allocated for $67,000, a 2022 Chevy Tahoe that’s outfitted with all the gear and materials they would need to mitigate any incident they respond to.”

September 29, 2022

Calobrisi said their suits are all completely encapsulated, for obvious reasons. He said they have about 20 of these suits and they rotate them during the grant cycle. He said that runs about $46,000. The last piece of equipment is an air blower that helps to purify and clear out harmful gases in an area, and that comes in at about $100,000.

The committee also recommended the Council pass grant funding of $150,000 for two full-time domestic violence advocates to work with the social service agency partners at the BPHC. The committee also recommended passage for a $555,166 grant for the BFD for safety training and fitness equipment to support officer health and wellness.
