Progress is being made with the Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR) on both the memorial garden in honor of Barbara Baxter and the Fairmount Hill welcome sign, Fairmount Hill Neighborhood Association (FHNA) leader Joe Smith announced at their meeting on Wednesday, August 22.

The meeting, attended by about 30 people, focused mainly on environmental initiatives and upcoming events where community participation is encouraged.

The most significant discussion was about the progress on the Barbara Baxter memorial garden at the Martini Shell Park at 1015 Truman Parkway. Baxter, a community activist and environmentalist in Hyde Park for decades, was described by Smith as the “moving force in Hyde Park.” She is being remembered with the garden for her efforts to organize clean-ups of the Neponset River and being president of the Hyde

Council looks to reduce speeds, again

The Boston City Council met last week and, among other issues, discussed the problem of speeding in the city and looked to possibly reduce speeds to 20 mph in certain areas.

District 2 City Councilor Ed Flynn and District 3 City Councilor Frank Baker called for a hearing to explore the possibility of looking at speed limits and traffic calming measures to help reduce traffic collisions and increase pedestrian safety. Flynn said despite significant progress

Last month, at Hyde Park’s Riverside Theatre Works (45 Fairmount Ave.), a Saturday afternoon festival of 10 minute plays was presented that featured the original work of playwrights from neighborhoods of the city including Hyde Park, Roslindale, Jamaica Plain, and Dorchester.

While these festivals are not uncommon, this one marked the culmination of the inaugural Teens WRITE (Writing, Reading, Investigating Theater Everywhere) program.

Over its 14 weeks – beginning in late April – students ranging in age from 13-17 years old met weekly at the Hyde Park branch of the Boston Public Library (35 Harvard Ave.), working together to develop their ideas and ultimately (all directed and several acted in their own work) bring them from the page to the stage.

Parkway Kiwanis hosting second annual Jim Plunkett Fundraiser

Staff Reporter

The Parkway Kiwanis will be hosting its second annual fundraiser with the help of local music legend Jim Plunkett this coming Oct. 5th.

The fundraiser started last year as a way for the Kiwanis to boost its income every year, and it was a big success. The fundraiser last year took in about $2,400 that the groups gave back to the community through children’s programs and scholarship programs.

“People in the neighborhood might remember Jim Plunkett, he used to play in Brighton and the Cape,” said Kiwanis President John Sullivan. “It’s going to be fun and tickets are only $25.”

Sullivan said the event is used as a supplement to the group’s big fundraiser in November, the annual Kiwanis Auction.

“Last year we made $17,000 on the auction,” he said.

Kiwanis member Sean Brennan said they are hoping to sell more tickets this year, since last year worked so well.

“He’s been doing happy hours down on the Cape for like 30 or 40 years,” he said. “His gigs are pretty attractive to people in their 40s and

Council looking for equity in marijuana licensing

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Boston City Council voted to hold a hearing on ways the body could increase equity in marijuana dispensaries in both the medical and recreational field.

At-Large City councilor Ayanna Pressley and District 5 City councilor Tim McCarthy sponsored the call for a hearing because, as Pressley said, they wanted to make sure that Boston residents and those communities of color most affected by marijuana convictions have an equal footing as the corporate companies looking to sell in Boston.

“It’s easy to short-hand the issue, cannabis and this emerging multi-billion dollar industry and just make it about public safety and public health, but this was a dialogue I initiated on this body because I see it as a criminal justice reform issue and a small business issue,” Pressley said.

Pressley said with medicinal marijuana, even with hundreds of license applications, the eight eventually given included no persons of color.

“Furthermore, many people in that application process verbally expressed a commitment to the hiring of veterans, the hiring of women and the hiring of people of color,” she said. “There’s really no claw-back or accountability, in real time, once we went back to see if any of that happened.”

Pressley said the hearing would be a way for the city to see if persons of color are being hired or helped by the emerging industry and if these businesses are locally-owned.

“This is not only about those who have been previously incarnated, it is simply about us being proactive about equity in this industry,” she said. We have an opportunity to be the blueprint, to be the model for the nation in legislatively codifying equity in what stands to be a multi-billion dollar industry.”

McCarthy said his district is seeing several applicants for recreational and medicinal marijuana, and some of those have been out-of-state corporations looking to sell in Boston. He said caution is always a good thing in looking at such a new industry.

“A couple of years ago, we went to Denver and we were there for about four days. Several councilors, myself, and the administration will tell you the one thing we heard from the growers, from the store owners, from the people who work in the hospitals, from the police, anybody and everybody who had anything to do with this, was not letting the genie out of the bottle too fast,” he said. “The more restrictions, the better, the more regulations, the better and, as Councilor Pressley said, this is an issue that needs to stay within Boston. We do have an opportunity here to do the right thing, not only by the ownership of these new shops, but by our community.”

McCarthy said local ownership is always preferable, as it helps those already in the community and those who have been hurt by past laws.

“We’ve all seen owners from outside of the state try to roll into our neighborhoods and as I’ve stated before, I’ve had several looking in Hyde Park, several looking in Mattapan and several looking in Roslindale already,” he said. “The local teams are welcome teams.”

McCarthy related one experience he had while looking through the shops in Denver, and because of him wearing a Catholic Memorial shirt, he said a minority couple noticed it and the husband said he went to Archbishop Williams High School in Dorchester.

“The statement he was making was that he was the only minority-owned business out of all of the licenses that Denver had given that was still around,” he said. “That shouldn’t happen.”

District 7 City Councilor Kim Janey said there is still a lot of push back in local neighborhoods.

“We still have a lot of “not in my backyard” issue,” she said. “

Prayer to the Blessed Virgin
(Never known to fail!)
Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine, splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in this necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my mother. Oh Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth, I humbly beseech thee from the bottom of my heart to succor me in my necessity (make request). There are none that can withstand your power. Oh Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (three times). Holy Mary, I place this cause in your hands (three times). Say this prayer for three consecutive days and then you must publish and it will be granted to you.
Grateful thanks —A.E.P.

City of Boston Archives bring history to life

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Boston Office of Archives and Records Management is probably the best place to view any recorded information on the city you may want.

According to Reference Archivist Marta Crilly, the main thing they do down at the secure location off of Rivermoor Street in West Roxbury is to keep the records cool and intact, but the second thing is they really want to give the public access to its own history.

“The records belong to the people of Boston and we really want people to take ownership of them,” she said. “We’re always excited to have constituents come here and look through our records because they’re here for people to use them.”

Crilly said in recent years they’ve been trying to get residents more involved. That’s why, in 2012, they started doing a Mystery Photo Contest on social media like Facebook and Twitter, and the contest has taken off in popularity.

“We started the contest because we’ve had a social media presence for quite a while,” she said.

Crilly said that at an archivists conference she saw that the U.S. National Archivists would post photos of a particular artifact and get residents to figure out what it was and where it came from.

“We don’t have artifacts, but we do have a large photo collection,” she said.

And so the Boston Mystery Photo Contest was born. Crilly said they post a photo about once a week and about 1,000 individuals click on the photo to look and about a couple hundred render a guess.

“People are always discussing the places in the photos and some people will start reminiscing and sharing stories, or they’ll do some of their own historical research,” she said. “It’s not just guesses or about the contest itself, people start having conversations about them.”

Crilly said, for her, it’s always fun to see areas she herself walks by every day or sees week to week.

“I used to live right next to the JFK UMass Station, which used to be called Columbia Station and there was a Skinner Organ Factory right there,” she said. “We showed a mystery photo and I realized that’s the station I commute through every day and the factory is now a school. It was just really interesting for me.”

Crilly said that because of the nature of photographing in the 1800s and the early 20th century, there isn’t always a lot of people in the photos.

“A lot of our photographs were taken to document infrastructure and buildings, so they would often wait until the road was clear to get a shot,” she said. “My favorite photos are always the ones where children run up into the camera’s angle to get their photos taken, because to a lot of people back then it was a big deal to get your photo taken.”

Crilly added that it’s always amazing to see the children and, most of the time, kids are watching construction. She said this was an amazing bit of continuity, as many children are still fascinating by construction equipment and the buildings themselves.

“That was the same in the 1890s as it is now,” she said.

Crilly said the contest creates a lot of buzz and some serious competition.

“We have a couple of devout followers and it’s my personal mission to stump them,” she said.

Crilly said the main purpose of the archives is to give residents a connection to the city’s history. She said the West Roxbury location is secured and climate controlled, and they are always cataloging items for people to find.

“We want people to know that the records are here and

preserved,” she said. “We want people to know that they exist and they have access to them.”

Crilly said residents use the archives for research or just simple family history. She said many of the items have been used for documentaries like a recently released PBS documentary, ‘The Race Underground.’

“We sometimes provide information for feature films as well,” she said. “We provided photos as set decorations for the Whitey Bulger film ‘Black Mass’. I mean they were just decorations, but it was a fun reference request.”

For more information and the Archives record collections, go to boston.gov/departments/archives-and-records-management.

Roslindale resident and proprietor of UniversalHub.com also retweets each week’s mystery photo, which regularly generates a lot of discussion on his website every week.

IT IS HAPPENING AGAIN

Things are shaping up for a typically sludge-filled election season here in Boston. Dark and stormy enough to maybe even send one running, bags in hand, to the suburbs. The Boston Herald did just that this week, searching for a less expensive, yet-still-Dunkin' Donuts-accessible, place to hang a shingle.

In truth, the move was a business decision, with Braintree offering a more financially-affordable option.

The good news: we are still a two-paper town, a luxury in most cities. Bad News: in truth, troubles at both major dailies make this about a 1.3, maybe at best a 1.4, newspaper town.

We do, as is often the case, pat ourselves and our weekly peers on the back. We should have avoided the cliché of a “two-paper town,” as, for neighborhood news coverage, neither of the big names in town do anything but scratch the surface of what makes the “city” tick. That job, each week, still falls on the shoulders of weekly newspapers like this one.

So, where are we at in these early days of an election cycle, a tad ahead of the pending rush that traditionally kicks things into high gear after Labor Day?

It seems those who took a head start think that their messages need to be hammered in ahead of the pack.

We have one candidate who was the first to jump on the fierce local topic of hot dogs: tossing an Iowa corndog in the trash, flaunting a Fenway Frank with yellow mustard and relish to the camera (none of that libruhhlhhl ketchup or Grey Poupon here) while slipping in an attack on the incumbent's “extremism” and desire to run off to stump in presidential campaign battlegrounds.

Another, more issue-centric ad has filled the summer with the initial goal, it seems, of confusing voters about which nurse is which.

Question 1, would place a limit on the number of patients a single nurse can be assigned to at a time, slapping a $25,000 fine on hospitals that violate the assigned nurse-patient ratio.

It might seem that a safe maximum limit on the number of patients assigned to a nurse at the same time might be an arguably expensive burden for hospitals' bottom lines, but a benefit to patients. That's the message being implored by local nurses in the TV spot.

Or are they local nurses? The American Nurses Association of Massachusetts does represent nearly 25 percent of nurses in the Commonwealth, but its membership is more on the management level, unlike the Mass Nurses Association, the more rank-and-file union (which supports the ballot initiative). It is left up to the viewers to understand the difference.

Things will get more confusing and crazy in the days ahead. It is a good thing that this city, despite setbacks, still has an independent, hard-working press to help guide us all through it, even if that means being an “enemy of people” in the eyes of far-too many.

These are rough, but important times ahead. Please don't blame the messenger.

OBX vs. Cape Cod

More than a handful of Bostonians are familiar with the 3-letter oval found occasionally on the back of cars, OBX. The three letters stand for the Outer Banks of North Carolina, which some erroneously think is an FAA-approved designation for a nearby airport.

It was with no shortage of raised eyebrows that 46 years ago, long before the 3-letter abbreviation for airports was in vogue, that I proposed that my future wife and I honeymoon on Cape Hatteras, also known as the Outer Banks. As a District of Columbia teacher, I had become aware of this vast tract of pristine North Carolina coastline under National Seashore protection—so unrestricted that overnight sleeping was even tolerated in cars on the parking lots.

Some 40 years later we visited again in the off-season.

Highway 12 is the only road coming south out of Nags Head passing through the idyllic towns of Rodanthe, Waves, Salvo, Avon, Buxton, Frisco, Hatteras, and Ocracoke, the best known of which is the first one, because of the Richard Gere/Diane Lane movie, “Nights at Rodanthe.” [“Message in a Bottle,” with Kevin Costner/Robin Wright Penn, was based on a North Carolina ocean-front town outside of the Cape Hatteras National Seashore.]

North of Nags Head, beyond the National Seashore, are the larger, more commercialized, and—by North Carolina standards—more crowded communities-of Kill Devil Hills, Kitty Hawk,

My Kind of Town/
Joe Galeota

Currituck, Duck, and Corolla, with a beaucoup number of rental units. Unbeknownst to many Bostonians, Cape Hatteras/Outer Banks is the go-to place for most of the Midwest's family reunions because of the vast number of MULTI (as beyond 5)-bedroom rentals, which are very hard to come by on Cape Cod. Elevated on stilts to preclude flooded basements after raging storms, these very large summer houses, with the accompanying number of bathrooms, accommodate extended family get-togethers. Sadly, the rental costs are not as low as one would hope for below the Mason-Dixon line.

One of the few downsides of OBX rentals are the hurricanes, the approach of which necessitates the evacuation of tens, if not hundreds, of thousands of vacationers. Even without forced evacuation, traffic on the weekends is brutal, I'm now told, in the entire area. And we think the approaches to the Sagamore and Bourne bridges are sluggish!

The Outer Banks has warm water because of the Jet Stream; the surf is robust for boogie-boarding and surfing. The sandy beaches are not crowded ala Nauset Beach.

While porpoises (dolphins?) may cavort in the water, there are no seals. Which means, for the most part, no sharks. Regrettably, rip currents also occur.

Here on our Cape Cod, until somebody from Senator Warren's or Senator Markey's family is bitten by a shark, our congressional delegation refuses to put pressure to thin the vast hordes of sharks propagating off Chatham on Monomoy Island. Because of the absence of a land mass connecting Monomoy to the mainland and the proliferation of housing/development in Chatham, there are no coyotes—the seals' natural predators—to perform the gruesome culling out of the seal population. Moreover, hunters are prevented from doing their share of seal thinning.

As the fish leave the area because of the seals, even fishing off the shores of Cape Cod is not as productive as it once was.

Until a Patty Page clone croons about Cape Hatteras, Cape Cod will be a favorite for many Bostonians raised on the southern side of the Charles. As for people raised in the North/West Ends, Charlestown, and East Boston, the siren summer call of New Hampshire and Maine will lure them—truly shark-free, for the most part.

Health Officials Announce First Human Case of West Nile Virus in Boston

Residents urged to take precautions

The Boston Public Health Commission (BPHC) today announced that the first case of West Nile Virus has been confirmed in a Boston resident this year. The patient, in her 50s, was hospitalized and has since been discharged home. Although mosquito pools throughout the City have tested positive for West Nile Virus, it is not known whether this patient acquired the infection in Boston. The investigation is ongoing.

This is Boston's first confirmed human case of West Nile Virus this year, and the third confirmed in Massachusetts. On Tuesday, August 21, 2018, the Massachusetts Department of Public Health raised the risk level for West Nile Virus from low to moderate throughout the State. In 2017, there were no human cases of West Nile Virus infection diagnosed in Boston residents.

West Nile Virus is most commonly transmitted to humans through the bite of an infected mosquito, and poses greater health risks to the elderly and those with pre-existing medical problems. Though temperatures are beginning to drop, West Nile Virus remains a threat until at least the first hard frost.

There is no vaccine or specific antiviral treatments for West Nile Virus infection. The most effective way to avoid West Nile Virus is to take measures to prevent mosquito bites. Residents who are participating in evening outdoor events in the city through initiatives like the recent lowering of the citywide speed limit to 25 mph and efforts at site-specific traffic calming through the Vision Zero process and Slow Streets, there is still work to be done.

“Hardly a day goes by when my friends, neighbors and constituents, even my elderly parents, often walking my special needs nephew that they don’t tell me about speeding vehicles and close calls in a crosswalk,” he said. “We have more vehicles, commuters and more ride shares with vehicles cutthigh through our neighborhoods. We experience these and worse, tragic crashes in the City of Boston. Most recently a beautiful young boy, Colin McGrath was tragically taken from us in a crash on L and East 6th Street in South Boston last month. His sister was also injured there as well.”

Flynn said he has been working on an action plan for South Boston. He said for that neighborhood at least, he believes a 20 mph speed limit could help to reduce pedestrian fatalities in the neighborhoods. The city did lower the citywide speed limit from 30 mph to 25 mph starting in January of 2017. During that year, speeding tickets were actually issued at a far lower rate than in 2016. In South Boston specifically, The Boston Police Department issued 33 speeding tickets 2016 and 26 in 2017. The State Police issued 1,971 tickets in South Boston in 2016 and 946 in 2017.

For the entire city, BPD issued 1,518 speeding tickets in 2016 and 1,383 in 2017. The State Police issued 13,565 speeding tickets in 2016 and 6,181 in 2017.

“Our community has become mobilized around this issue,” he said. “The city continues to make progress on this issue, but it is my position that 25 mph is still too fast for our streets. On many of them, I just don’t believe one could stop in time traveling at that speed if a pedestrian suddenly emerged from behind a car. I’ve recently offered a 12-point plan for safer streets in South Boston, including traffic calming measures like speed humps, raised crosswalks, road diets, speed boards, and blinking pedestrian crossing signs like we have on Summer Street. I also called for a 20 mph speed limit throughout South Boston.”

Flynn said the Boston Transportation Department announced they will include many of these suggestions as well as the 20 mph zone as part of their South Boston Action Plan.

Baker said he feels Flynn’s plan for South Boston to be a good start, and he wants to allow the BTM and Commissioner Gina Fiandaca to create municipal speeding zones where the speed limit is lowered to 20 mph in heavily-trafficked areas.

“Like senior centers, MBTA stations and business districts,” he said. “Helping to reduce the overall speed of vehicles increases public safety and will improve the quality of life for the residents of Boston

At-Large City Councilor Ayanna Pressley also spoke and called for a hearing to require landlords to provide renters with voter registration information and forms when they sign a lease.

“I remember that when I first started to attend neighborhood and civic group meetings and we would discuss the issue of development, the assumption was always that those greater invested in the community and have a greater stake in the community were homeowners,” she said. “Stakeholders and homeowners, that was a synonymous statement. Unfortunately, for a confluence of reasons, the opportunity for people to own homes has become farther and farther out of reach for most. About 64 percent of Bostonians are renters.”

Pressley said getting more renters out to vote would help them advocate for themselves and help to keep housing costs down.

“The ordinance that I’m putting forward for a hearing, this has already been done in other municipalities, it’s been done in Seattle Washington, St. Paul Minnesota, and I think it’s an innovative strategy we should think about implementing here,” she said.

50s, basically people who used to party with him years ago and they’re now a bit older.”

Brennan said he now plays a ‘Name that Tune’ game with the audience. Basically anyone who shouts out which song he is playing a snippet of wins a beer from his cooler.

“People then dance and have a good time, it’s just an interesting set up and everyone really enjoys it,” Brennan said. “We did very good last year and we got a little under 100 people at $25 a ticket.”

Brennan said the inclusion of Jim Plunkett has made selling the tickets a bit easier than if they had chosen a more serious music group.

“People just come and the Victory Grille in Dedham is letting us use the space for nothing,” he said. They know they are going to get a lot of sales from Jim.”

Brennan said the money raised both at this event and the upcoming auction allows the Kiwanis to help charities in the community. He said their usual organizations like the Parkway YMCA and the Jason Roberts Challenger League get some of the funding, and Sullivan said they consider any organization that comes to them.

“We try to give money to anyone who asks, and we try not to say no,” he said.

Brennan said this year they are also donating funds to help the Parkway In Motion group with its youth scholarship program it hosts every spring. He said they used to fund their own scholarship through the Cooperative Bank, but that ended this year and they then hooked up with PIM.

“Because Kate Sullivan from the Boston Credit Union asked us to give,” he said. “We also do a softball game against John Sullivan’s Businesses Connect group and the money we make from that goes to the Jason Roberts Challenger League.”

Brennan said they also work with the Parkway Rotary to fund an ad for the Paul Harris Program, as well as helping to sponsor the Taste of West Roxbury.

“We also give money to the Roslindale Food Pantry, usually around $1,000, and I know we donate time to the West Roxbury Rose’s Bounty Pantry,” he said. “John Sullivan is always trying to get people to donate their time to load and unload the trucks.”

The fundraiser is set for Oct. 5 at Victory Grille in Dedham. For tickets you can stop by McNeil Insurance on Washington Street or Rockland Trust on Centre Street in West Roxbury. You can also order online at kiwanisboston.org/kiwanis-online-store.

SEPTEMBER 11 DAY OF REMEMBRANCE BLOOD DRIVE AT FENWAY PARK

The American Red Cross, Boston Red Sox, Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center, and Boston's first responders are once again teaming up to help save lives – as a tribute to those lost in the September 11, 2001 terror attacks. Hundreds of blood donors will gather on Tuesday, September 11, from 5:30 a.m. to 10:30 a.m. inside Fenway Park to mark the 17th anniversary with a generous act of service. Donors will be able to take photos with Red Sox World Series trophies and enjoy a cup of chowder, courtesy of Legal Sea Foods. Governor Charlie Baker and other VIPs are also expected to attend. Attached you'll find a news release with important information on the blood drive, for any specials marking this somber day of remembrance. Donors are encouraged to make appointments in advance by using sponsor code FENWAY at RedCrossBlood.org, and to fill out RapidPass on the morning of their donation. The Red Cross also invites you to join us that day to document what has become a special annual event to honor those who lost their lives and those who rose in service in the wake of the 9/11 attacks.

Park Neighborhood Association, among other endeavors.

“Every event I went to she was there and involved,” Smith said.

Her lifelong friend, Martha McDonough, who spearheaded the garden effort, talked about the layout of the garden and some delays that were encountered between issues with the Department of Conservation (DCR) as well as a group of citizens who rented the land and drove on it.

“Where the shell is, if you go off to the right, you will see a big triangle,” McDonough said. “DCR put in a lot of composting. There will mainly be roses and daisies there, Barbara’s favorite flower.”

She added that there will be other perennials including daffodils and narcissus spread out from the overlook to the tennis courts. They will be planted in clumps so that they will multiply over time.

“We were very lucky that there was no pollution at all found by DCR in the soil,” McDonough said. “That’s a rarity. But this area is above Factory Hill, so all of the pollution is below.”

Jeremy Dick was the landscape architect who designed the garden, noted McDonough. “There will always be something for each season that will be beautiful to look at.”

The two benches currently at the park will be replaced by two black benches facing the flowers. There will also be a water bubbler.

One factor that delayed the project was that the edging could not be completed. After originally proposing brick, DCR had decided upon gravel.

Volunteers will be needed to maintain the garden. The Green Team and Keep Hyde Park Beautiful have offered to help. Donations to fund the plantings are also being collected through the project’s fiscal agent, Hyde Park Main Streets.

“If anyone would like to make a donation, they can send a check to Hyde Park Main Streets, and write ‘Barbara Baxter Memorial Garden’ in the subject line,” McDonough said. She hoped that the money raised could fund additional plantings throughout Hyde Park. $700 has been raised to date.

Another delay was caused by people who rented the park for a private event the week before the meeting, McDonough said.

“Rita Walsh and I went to look at the area, and there were tire tracks all over the grass,” she said. “When Maggie Brown from DCR came to check it out, she was shocked.”

“They may not have been aware of the guidelines,” Smith said. “But they should know they are not supposed to drive on the grass.”

Smith announced that the annual Neponset River cleanup will be coming up on September 22. Volunteers will be needed for the event. It will coincide with the planting of flowers in Baxter’s honor.

A big victory for the FHNA is the completion of the Fairmount Hill Neighborhood Association sign by DCR, which the group has been advocating for for many months. The sign will be erected at a ceremony on Monday, August 27 at 4 p.m. at Fairmount Ave. and Truman Parkway.

The sign will read, “Welcome to Historic Fairmount Hill” in large letters. Underneath, it will read, “Settled by the Twenty Associates 1856. Incorporated in Hyde Park 1856.”

The bottom will be 30 inches from the ground. The top will be two feet above that. It will be metal, and may eventually have magnets attached alerting residents of upcoming meetings, events and elections.

Walsh expressed concern that a sign that low might be damaged by snow plows, especially being at the base of hills including Beacon Street. Smith said it is the same size as other signs that the DCR has in other communities, but understands the worry.

“The wooden sign that had originally been designed may be kept by Keep Hyde Park Beautiful as a reminder of sorts,” Smith said.

Smith also announced that the annual FHNA Yard Sale will be held on Saturday, September 15 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. The rain date will be the following day. It will begin on Fairmount Hill on the Milton Line at Brush Hill Road to Truman Parkway between Dana Avenue and Metropolitan Avenue. It will encompass the area of Neponset Ave., Williams Ave., Warren Ave., Summit St., and surrounding streets. Maps and further information will be given out later, as this may affect the bus schedule.

In other news, three front yards on Pond Street have been paved over, raising concerns from residents over its legality.

Although the numbers of the houses could not be released, Stephen Maguire from City Councilor Tim McCarthy’s office said that his office is “taking a better look at why it was done.”

“As of now, we are looking into if and when it was permitted, what the process is, and if there is a fine before and after the fact,” Maguire said. “ISD (Inspectional Services Department) and ONS (Mayor’s Office of Neighborhood Services) are fully aware of this and are checking to see if this is technically illegal to do this.”

The Bulletin placed a call to Lisa Timberlake, Director of Publicity for the Inspectional Services Department, seeking comment and clarification on the rules and possibility of fines for paving over a yard. The call was not returned by press time.

Foundation for the Arts' Creative City Program, as well as with additional money from the Barr Foundation and the Boston Foundation – Teens WRITE was inspired by her own experience of becoming involved in theater as a university student:

"I reflected on that and I saw that a lot of my peers in college were absorbed in theater as youth: in middle school and high school, they were involved in school plays and that sort of thing," Decius explained. "So I've always wanted to, essentially, give back to the community and help blossom the next group of theater artists at a young age."

Leading the six student playwrights through her curriculum, Decius also brought in members of the local theater community – playwrights, actors, directors, and other specialists – in order to provide a comprehensive overview of what goes into a play.

Carolyn Parker-Fairban of Jamaica Plain – at 17 years of age, the oldest Teens WRITE member – shared some thoughts on the program:

"It was really a good experience in being able to open up the world of theater and it not just being, 'Okay, write a play.' Like a one day workshop for little kids or something. It was really an intensive, long, thought out process, which was really nice."

Parker-Fairban's play, "When This Track Plays Out", deals with the looming separation of two young people in a relationship, and she spoke of her aim to change what she calls the "dominant narratives" of mainstream media in the way that she wrote the two parts:

"I wanted it to be either same sex, or have it be either a fem person or an androgynous person, just to show not the status quo of... feminine woman and masculine man in a relationship. It was also really important to me that it wasn't a white dominated story."

Several of the plays dealt with the personalization of events current and pertinent to students today, including "What Was Left" – by 13 year old Victoria Marcano, also of Jamaica Plain – the topic of which is the aftermath of a school shooting from the perspective of three people not directly involved but greatly impacted in different ways.

"It's a current topic that is going on now, and it is having an effect," Marcano said, before going into detail. "You don't have to be anywhere near it, but it also affects people who are connected to the people that were involved. It affects more than the people who are involved, it affects everyone around them."

The festival itself was arranged with the seven plays (Decius' play, "Free Before Eleven", was also performed) bracketed by opening and closing songs performed by Kennedy Campbell, and followed by a post-festival discussion in which all of the playwrights and actors sat at the edge of the stage and took questions from members of the audience.

Amiyr Ahmad, of Hyde Park – whose play "Pressure" focuses on the consequences of a teen caught for distributing drugs and was informed by his observations of society – spoke a little later at the after party held at the Fairmount Grille (81 Fairmount Ave.).

There, the 13 year old described his feelings at seeing his play come alive onstage and, in doing so, he likely articulated the thoughts of his fellow Teens WRITE playwrights:

"As it was happening, I guess I was just scared of judgment: of people judging your play. When I was coming to the play, I was shaking because I didn't know what to expect."

Judging by the festive mood in the crowded function room, things turned out just fine.

Ask The Doctor

Junior Damato began servicing vehicles in 1969. He owns a 10-bay auto repair service center in Hyde Park and an 8-bay center in Middleboro. Junior is an ASE-certified Master Technician, ASE-certified L-1 and ASE-certified Natural Gas.

2018 Ford F150

Ford has been building trucks for many years and some of those years were not the best. They say time changes everything and it did with the new F150. It's no secret that I was never a fan of Ford trucks – I've always been a GM guy. But, after spending a week in this F150 Limited, my mind has changed. Ford has got it right on this truck.

First, the outside body lines and style are very smooth, with no sharp edges or body bulges. The paint finish is that of a high-priced import, very smooth and with a deep shine.

I always liked a V/8 engine in a pickup, but Ford has mastered the twin turbo V/6 and, at 375 horsepower mated to a 10-speed automatic, it is a perfect combination that works. Power is instant from idle to the red line. The 10-speed transmission (a joint venture with GM) puts the engine in a perfect RPM range at any speed. Towing capacity is 10,700 lbs. Gas mileage is unheard of in a full-size pickup at 17 city, 23 highway MPG.

The interior is more in keeping with a high-end vehicle. The front seats are heated and ventilated, as well as multi-adjustable. The heat/AC and entertainment systems are updated and all controls are simple to use. There are LED lights everywhere, even in the cargo bed. The tailgate has a built-in helper so it doesn't fall down when opened. Factory powered sidestep running boards make it simple to enter and exit. Open any door and the running board comes down; close the door and it folds up. A large power moonroof gives an open air feeling. Push-to-start and a remote engine starter are another plus. The ride and handling are very carlike, unlike the F150 of the past. If you are interested in a pickup, the F150 should be on your list. The base two door XL starts at $27,705 and the models go up from there. Our test truck was the top-of-the-line Super Crew Limited with a price of $ 64,275 (destination fee: $1,395).

Boston's own Junior Damato, "The Auto Doctor" has agreed to field auto repair questions from Bulletin and Record readers. Please forward your questions to news@bulletinnewspapers.com and we will do our best to get your questions answered.

West Nile

should take precautions to minimize the risk of a mosquito bite. The City of Boston, in partnership with the Suffolk County Mosquito Control Project, has placed larvicide in catch basins in the city, a process designed to reduce the adult mosquito population.

Avoid Mosquito Bites
* Apply insect repellent when outdoors. Use a repellent with DEET (N, N-diethyl-m-toluamide), permethrin, picaridin (KBR 3023), oil of lemon eucalyptus [p-methane 3, 8-diol (PMD)], or IR3535 according to the instructions on the product label. DEET products should not be used on infants under two months of age and should be used in concentrations of 30% or less on older children. Oil of lemon eucalyptus should not be used on children under three years of age.

* Be aware of peak mosquito hours. The hours from dusk to dawn are peak biting times for many mosquitos. Consider rescheduling outdoor activities that occur during evening or early morning.

* Clothing can help reduce mosquito bites. Wear long-sleeves, long pants, and socks when outdoors to help keep mosquitos away from your skin. Protect Your Animals
* Owners should also speak with their veterinarian about mosquito repellents approved for use in animals and vaccinations to prevent West Nile Virus and Eastern equine encephalitis. Mosquito-Proof Your Home

* Drain standing water. Mosquitoes lay their eggs near standing water. Once a week drain or discard items that hold water. Check rain gutters and drains. Empty any unused flowerpots and wading pools, and change water in bird baths frequently.

* Install or repair screens. Keep mosquitos outside by having tightly-fitting screens on all of your windows and doors. Repair holes in screens to keep mosquitos outside. Use air conditioning when available.

More information on West Nile Virus is available in multiple languages at www.bphc.org/mbi or at (617) 534-5611.
