WRBPA and Ward 20 hosts D6 Candidates Forum

The West Roxbury Business and Professional Association (WRBPA) and Ward 20 Democratic Committee hosted a District 6 Candidates Forum at the Corrib Pub on Aug. 23. The three candidates, William King, Kendra Lara (incumbent), and Ben Webster are running in the preliminary election scheduled for Sept. 12, with the final to be held Nov. 7. Two of the three will advance. The format included an opening statement and then the same questions directed at each candidate by designated questioners.

During opening remarks, King spoke to his ties to the community: "I'm born and raised here in Boston. BPS grad. My wife and I, we live here in West Roxbury. I got into the race this December because I thought District 6 needed new leadership." For King, he said the core responsibility is constituent services. His priorities are improving education, affordable housing, and a senior center.

"I've been an attorney for 18 years and been working for my clients' rights," said Weber, focusing on his professional experience in the law. Education is also his focus. "Both my kids went to Mission Hill which was shut down because they weren't educating kids. I want to be sure BPS makes decisions that are good for our kids." Like King, Weber said the housing crisis and a senior center are important."

"I want to talk about what constituent services look like in my office," said Lara. "It means calling everyone over 65 to get help and support shoveling out snow and pairing them with neighbors to make sure we got that done." Lara said she works with neighborhood associations, looking for funding for the senior center, and communicates with neighbors about transportation issues. Like King and Weber, Lara said housing and education have been her areas of focus.

Steve Morris, founder of the West Roxbury Safety Association (WRSA), asked the first question, directed at Lara. Morris asked Lara why she recently gave $1 million for low-income housing in East Boston, which is in District 1.

"I am also the chair of the housing community which spans the entire city not just my district," said Lara, explaining that city councilors sit on various committees with responsibilities for city-wide issues. She said a developer threatened the affordable housing units in a development in East Boston when there was no councilor representation, as Lydia Edwards had been elected to the state senate and Gabrielle Coletta had not yet taken office. "We advocated that we had an additional $1 million that stayed with those units. In that role we've absolutely continued to fight for $1 million for the (West Roxbury) senior center."

Lara said that the money for a senior center in West

Roxbury comes out of the capital budget. "This is under Mayor Wu's control." Money was allocated to do a study on a location for the senior center in West Roxbury and also is being done for the whole city.

King said he would have liked to have seen those funds used in District 6, maybe for a senior center. Lara remarked that the money was not earmarked for the district, it was federal money. There was some debate with audience members as to how money was specifically allocated for projects. Weber added that it is a complicated issue and would have wished for more information and more transparency.

Ward 20 Democratic Committee member and Charles River Spring Valley Neighborhood Association President Stephen Smith asked if the candidates support the move of the John D. O'Bryant School to West Roxbury.

"West Roxbury is well overdue since the closure of Westie High. We deserve a good quality high school, and the O'Bryant does do that," said King. But he said transportation is a problem. "We need to solve our transportation infrastructure issues. West Roxbury is kind of a transportation desert. I would like to see us get a commuter rail station right over there."

"The short answer is I'm in favor of the move," said We-

Condos planned for Notre Dame Street

Richard Heath

Sigourney Street resident Taba Moses is wagering that market-rate homeownership will work on a narrow side street at the Walgreens side of Columbus Avenue in Egleston Square.

Moses bought four lots—three of them vacant for decades plus one with a vacant, woodframe house – at 24-34 Notre Dame St. in the valley below Dimock Health Center.

On a narrow street that only locals know about, Moses and his architect, Khalsa Design, propose a five-story, 26-unit condominium building with 15 parking spaces on the ground floor.

This is the second Egleston Square residence plan proposed by and built by Moses and Khalsa; the first was at 118-120 School St. Moses first proposed this in October 2018. Moses razed two old houses and built two, three-story buildings with six market-rate condominiums.

These sold in 2022 and 2023 for listing prices of $1.1 million to $1.25 million.

The Boston Planning and Development Agency (BPDA) held a virtual Article 80 small project review meeting on the Notre Dame Street housing on Aug. 21 with about 25 residents on the call.

BPDA substitute project manager Camille Platt opened the meeting with what in the past few months has been the standard review of "Mayor Wu's vision for the BPDA."

"This is what's coming," Platt said, "as the BPDA transitions to the City of Boston."

Allston wants needs assessment for Harvard ERC

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Harvard Enterprise Research Campus (ERC) Advisory Committee met recently with about 20 local residents and stakeholders to start putting together a plan for what the area will look like after the 14-acre site is developed.

The committee is to figure out what's needed in Allston and help the project reflect and respond to those needs.

This committee meeting had no public participation however a public meeting is scheduled for Sept. 6 at 6:30 p.m. For more information on the project and to register for that meeting, go to the Boston Planning and Development Agency (BPDA) project page at <https://tinyurl.com/4ah8wbc7>

The committee meeting was focused on what kind of amenities and community benefits the ERC should bring to the community and what pitfalls it should avoid. While the needs themselves might not be surprising – in order of importance according to a survey of the committee they are affordable housing, environmental sustainability, mobility and accessibility, greenspace, cultural amenities, local job growth and education and social services – the methods of meeting these needs suggested by committee members may seem to be.

For transportation, member and frequent Allston committee contributor Galen Mook said he wanted to make sure public transportation could keep up with the developing neighborhood. The BPDA and WXY Architect Bahij Chaney reviewed the extensive development the neighborhood is facing in a couple of years – the Western Avenue Corridor rezoning project and the Beacon Yards

Tom Kelley Mural dedication

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

Captain Thomas Gunning Kelley

The City of Boston announced this week that it will be hosting a dedication ceremony on Thursday, Sept. 7 at 10:30 a.m. at the side wall of the Boston Ale House on Centre Street for resident Captain Thomas Gunning Kelley.

The ceremony will also be the kickoff to a new city holiday, Tom Kelley Day, as offered by the Mayor's Office of Arts and Culture. Boston Mayor Michelle Wu, Veterans Services Commissioner Robert Santiago and State Secretary of Veterans Services John Santiago will be in attendance during the dedication ceremony, which will be followed by a reception at the Boston Ale House.

Kelley's military distinctions and honors are many. He holds a Medal of Honor citation for "conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of his life above and beyond the call of duty." According to the United States Army Center of Military History, Kelley earned this citation while he was serving as a lieutenant in the United States Navy during the Vietnam War. On June 15 in 1969 when his command of eight river assault craft were extracting a company of U.S. Army troops on the east bank of the Ong Muong Canal in Kien Hoa province, one of the troop carriers suffered a mechanical failure.

Almost simultaneously, enemy forces opened fire from the opposite bank of the canal. Kelley ordered the remaining boats to form a defensive posture around the crippled vessel, but apparently he could see that was not enough to both protect the crippled vessel and the rest of his command. So he ordered his monitor – a combat variant of the LCM-6 troop transport – to put itself directly in the way of the enemy and began returning fire.

According to the Medal of Honor citation, a rocket then hit his boat and shot shrapnel in all directions, injuring Kelley in the head. He then disregarded his injuries – including the loss of an eye – and attempted to continue directing the other boats through relayed voice commands only, as he could not reach them directly or reach a radio.

The enemy attack halted and he was able to move his boat and all those under his command to safety. The citation reads: "His extraordinary courage under fire and his selfless devotion to duty sustain and enhance the finest traditions of the U.S. Naval Service."

Despite the loss of an eye and the Navy's decision that he was no longer fit for service, Kelley requested repeatedly to remain on active duty and was assigned first as an executive officer on the U.S.S. Sample and then as a commanding officer on the U.S.S. Lang. In addition to the Medal of Honor, Kelley was awarded the Legion of Merit three times and also a Purple Heart.

Kelley worked for the Department of Defense for several years and then returned to Boston to become the commissioner of the Massachusetts Department of Veterans' Services in 1999 and was named secretary in 2004. He was noted for starting programs to help returning Iraqi Freedom veterans deal with traumatic brain injury and suicide prevention, and hired young disabled veterans to facilitate these initiatives. He retired from public service in 2011, and from 2015 to 2017 he served as president of the Medal of Honor Society.

This past spring, the U.S. Navy announced that one of the planned Arleigh Burke-class guided missile destroyers will be named in his honor. The mural in West Roxbury also depicts an artist's interpretation of this particular ship, as it has not been actually completed yet.

BPDA approves Hyde Park, Allston Brighton projects

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Boston Planning and Development Agency (BPDA) Board met recently for its regular meeting and approved several projects in the Hyde Park, Allston and Brighton neighborhoods.

All of these projects will also have to attain approval from at least the Boston Zoning Board of Appeals (and possibly other entities) before starting construction.

First up, the Board voted unanimously to approve 44 condominium units at 1702 Hyde Park Ave. in Hyde Park. The project would create about 50 construction jobs and build about 4,560 square feet of commercial space, 36 below-grade parking spaces as well as building seven income-restricted units as per the city's Inclusionary Development Policy (IDP).

BPDA Planner Eileen Michaud said the BPDA staff successfully lobbied for the project to also create pedestrian realm improvements on Hyde Park Avenue, which include new sidewalks and landscaping, as well as the inclusion of the previously-mentioned commercial space.

Development Attorney John Pulgini, of Pulgini & Norton, represented the project and said the site is a former scrap yard and is a "stone's throw" from the Readville MBTA Commuter Rail Station, and will be named "The Apex."

"These units will be homeownership condominium units, which is something that has been elusive to Hyde Park during the last building boom," he said. "The owner will also grant an easement to the city, which allows us to build larger sidewalks with street trees and areas for bike lanes and will provide seven affordable units."

The Board also approved 28 residential rental units at 1081 River St. in Hyde Park. BPDA Project Manager Daniel Polanco said the building design with six IDP units (which is 21 percent of the project's unit count) also received a letter of support from District 5 City Councilor Ricardo Arroyo's office and State Representative Rob Consalvo, as well as the Hyde Park Central River Neighborhood Association.

BPDA Planner Angel Guzman said the agency's staff wanted to concentrate on open space for the project and to mitigate the impact of the building's massing in a two-family zoning sub-district.

Housing Affordability for Our Seniors

"As the city moves forward, we can't afford to leave behind our neighbors who helped build the community we all call home.

"I am committed to keeping our communities affordable to our seniors. We need to build more senior housing, increase the Senior Circuit Breaker credit, and bring a Senior Center to West Roxbury."

Expanding Opportunities for Our Kids

"Youth sports is more than running around and scoring goals. Youth sports teach teamwork, resilience, and the value of working hard. Youth sports are also an opportunity to bring Boston families across different backgrounds together.

"As your next Councilor, I will fight to improve existing facilities like White Stadium and to eliminate financial barriers to participation."

A Tenant's Right to Counsel

"I have spent most of my professional life representing workers against gigantic corporations with armies of lawyers. I know the value of legal representation.

"Housing is a human right, and as a City Councilor, I will work to establish a Tenant's Right to Counsel to ensure renters have a chance to make their case and stay in their home."

LABOR DAY

I toed the edge of the abyss. Seven o'clock on an 18-degree January Sunday morning. Wind whined and, with slight shift, whistled through red and grey sandstone formations jutting from walls and rising from canyon floors. Early sun-cast rays pinked overhead clouds. Stillness harnessed sound, snow crunched under boot a hundred yards off clearly audible. Someone called from a canyon trail and the echo reverberated among passageways until it amplified, just before dying. The air was so suspended, so caged, that when a raven winged past, its whoop-whoop-whoop was clearly discernable, and sole sound.

Once, in Istanbul, Turkey, I worked in a factory where most of the men refused to wear company-issued work shirts. I noticed and asked why, and was told the men were too proud, that to wear company shirts suggested a subjugation to which no self-respecting Turkish man would accede.

Bryce Canyon is technically an amphitheater, not a canyon. Layers of sediment laid down over millennia form crests and lines of this remarkable scene. Indian legend relates that people and animals once inhabiting the area were bad people and bad animals, and so were cast in stone; an extensive, rubicund Mount Rushmore to the wicked.

A red world; crimson sky, vermilion cliffs and roseate crevices, crayon canyons leaning layered toward the emerging sun, mesas, spires, tables of rock and sand crumbling, tumbling, weathering, and wearing; the months, the years, the ages a relentless leveling. Whispers of snow dust higher elevations, enhancing the scene. As I stood above, I wondered of its impact. I wondered why a scene of grand beauty so affects. What is it in our being, our constitution that causes us to come and stare? How does it induce such serenity? I stared over distant Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument, against which Bryce Canyon nudges on its western edge, and simply embraced.

In Sacramento I missed a turn and drove back around. I saw a man, a bum, roadside, and he was—what was he doing? Naw, couldn't be... I turned about, just to pass the man again. When I came back upon him, I slowed and peered, verifying my original impression. The bum was standing on the side of the highway clutching a fistful of dollar bills, under which he held a lighted match. He was burning his money.

Historical records are revealing. Original journals of discovery often convey awe in which Americans stood when confronted with the freedom of broad, open vistas. George Armstrong Custer wrote of his experience first viewing the great plains. "...to gather inspiration from nature and to attempt to paint the scene as my eye beheld it, is a task before which a much readier pen than mine might well hesitate. It was a beautiful and ever-changing panorama which at one moment excited the beholder's highest admiration, at the next impressed him with speechless veneration." There is something primal in our reaction, something instinctual. I saw the sun, having broken free over distant plateaus, had reclaimed sky crimson. Clouds moments before so colorful stood slate grey.

I'd worked hard for twenty-five years. I was in pretty good shape, kids out of college, a place in Vermont. For the first time I had choices, I had some money. I had a 401K, company-paid medical insurance. I had five weeks' vacation. The letter from Social Security indicated that if kept up, I'd be able to retire in fifteen years. Yeah, I was in pretty good shape.

Yet instinctually I experienced that exhilaration of wide, open spaces. I yearned to cast off that company-issued shirt and burn that money, that safety, that intellectual subjugation no self-respecting American man should accede to.

I stood and gazed over the remarkable landscape as the sun blared a new day over distant plateaus, illuminating vermilion below in new light, the red world evolving before me. I struggled to understand what vastness gave me, and what I took away. What I remembered, and why. We plan vacations years ahead to do it, drive hours to see it and then fill photo albums to remind. For some reason our souls simply long for the wild.

I quit my job at Butler Automatic.

SPEEDING ON WOOD AVE.

To the Editor:

Having lived on Wood Ave. for most of my life I think I am qualified to talk about the area. Decades ago I brought up this issue with the Boston Police and was told that putting speed bumps on a main secondary road like Wood Avenue could jeopardize the safety of firemen and other first responders speeding to an emergency.

People really do not think before they start throwing out ideas and politicians like Arroyo don't care. They just parrot what people think are easy solutions so they can get electoral support. You claim to be a "Neighborhood" group. Have you explored the issue of how a four-year-old child got through a group of adults standing on a porch and walked into the street? Were the adults drunk or stoned?

I think legal action of some kind should have been taken against them by the City. Secondly, the problem of speeding will not be solved with speed bumps or by politicians but by actual law enforcement. I have had numerous meetings under the umbrella of the now defunct Ross Field Neighborhood Association with the Boston Police including sergeants and captains. The way you change drivers' behavior is by making them PAY! When you get a chance, ask the cops how many actual speeding tickets with FINES have been written on Wood Ave. No warnings, FINES!

I suggested that they put a cruiser next to the church wall hidden from cars coming down the curved hill on Wood Ave. near Safford Street. Captain Armstrong AND Captain Gillespie said they did not want to do this. I told them that in the evenings they would be able to collect gang members, drugs and guns. You should have felt the pity they showed in their voices for all the people they would have caught. The problem on Wood Ave. is not speed bumps. The problem is to get the police TO DO THEIR JOBS!!! And frankly, I don't think people like the ones that run the East River Street Association want them to.

After my latest interaction with the police, they put a cop right in front of my house. It was around 4PM on a weekday and this cop stopped car after car after car. He never checked anything. He just wrote warning after warning and let them go. He must have used an entire ticket book. This display mocked people who want to see the cops unleashed to do their jobs occurred under Captain Gillespie's watch. City Councilor Kendra Lara would never have a problem driving on Wood Avenue.

BPD hosts party and backpack giveaway at Archdale

The Boston Police Department (BPD) reported that recently, officers assigned to the Community Service Office of BPD District E-5 in Roslindale/West Roxbury, along with Deputy Kozmiski, and BPD Recruits, teamed up with the Gardens of Gesthamane Cemetery and Boston Housing Authority Archdale Housing Development to host the annual cookout to give out backpacks and school supplies. Scores of residents and soon-to-be students came out to enjoy the day and pick up supplies for their coming studies.

Correction

In last week's issue of The Bulletin, the story entitled "WRNC denies Vermont Street approval," the story headline and subject matter stated that the West Roxbury Neighborhood Council (WRNC) voted to disapprove the proposed project on 370 Vermont St. The WRNC votes to support or oppose projects headed to the Boston Zoning Board of Appeals and does not stop development projects from going through in and of itself, and in this case, took no action on the proposal at that time. Zozula, of McDermott, Quilty & Miller, pointed out the project is within a half-mile walk of both the Fairmount and Hyde Park Commuter Rail Stations and is also near several bus lines too.

Next, in Allston, is 1270 Commonwealth Ave., where a large CVS once stood. The project calls for 206 residential rental units, 35 of which will be affordable units under the IDP. The project also includes 2,100 square feet of retail space and 68 vehicle parking spaces (.33 spaces per unit).

BPDA Project Manager Tyler Ross said the project was originally opposed by several city councilors, but has since worked with them to be "in good standing" with local elected officials.

BPDA Planner Yari Cortez said the BPDA focused on leveraging the project's proximity to public transit to reduce parking and, hopefully, traffic in the neighborhood. She said the team also successfully lobbied for raised crosswalks along the adjacent Gorham Street to support safe pedestrian access to the area, as well as other public realm improvements.

Development representative Rob Hagan said the project's IDP units will have an Area Median Income (AMI) range limited to 50 percent to 70 percent. He said the project will also contribute $50,000 to the Allston Brighton Homeowners Fund and $250,000 to fund the solar project at 1295-1305 and 1309 Commonwealth Ave., which is owned by the Allston Brighton Community Development Corporation.

The building will also be all electric and is looking to have a LEED Gold certification.

Also in District 9, the BPDA Board voted to approve two projects in Brighton. First up was the proposed 116-rental unit complex at 500 Western Avenue, which will include 2,800 square feet of retail space and 21 IDP units. BPDA Project Manager Mike Sinatra said the project has the support of District 9 City Councilor Liz Breadon.

Architect Gary Hendren said this project will feature public improvements around public infrastructure and bike infrastructure, in part to conform with the Western Avenue Corridor Study and Rezoning (WACSRZ) study and to encourage use of the project's 147 bicycle parking spaces. He said this includes an east-bound protected bike lane with street trees, as well as a Blue Bikes station and new crosswalks.

Hendren said they are also planning to build a 3,300-square-foot urban park for residents of the building and Allston residents in general to use.

"We don't want to call it a pocket park, because this is a real park," he said. "It's quite large, completely open and completely flush with Richardson Street."

Hendren added that this building will be all steel and concrete. The Board voted unanimously to approve the project.

The Board also voted unanimously to approve the 44-rental unit Dighton Gardens Project at 37 Dighton St. The project will include 54 bicycle spaces, seven IDP units and 28 vehicle parking spaces. The Board voted to approve the project and to execute and deliver an affordable rental housing agreement and restriction, as well as a community benefits agreement.

Prayer to the Blessed Virgin

(Never known to fail!)

Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine, splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in this necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my mother. Oh Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth, I humbly beseech thee from the bottom of my heart to succor me in my necessity (make request). There are none that can withstand your power. Oh Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (three times). Holy Mary, I place this cause in your hands (three times). Say this prayer for three consecutive days and then you must publish and it will be granted to you. —V.C.

Miracle Prayer

Dear Heart of Jesus, in the past I have asked You for many favours. This time, I ask you this very special one (mention favour). Take it, dear Heart of Jesus, and place it within Your own broken heart where Your Father sees it. Then, in His merciful eyes, it will become Your favour, not mine. Amen. Say for three days, promise publication and favour will be granted. —V.C.

Novena to St. Clare

Ask St. Clare for three favours, 1 business, 2 impossible. Say nine Hail Marys for nine days, with lighted candle. Pray whether you believe or not. Publish on the ninth day. Powerful novena. Say “May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be praised, adored, glorified, now and forever, throughout the whole world. Amen.” Your request will be granted, no matter how impossible it may seem. —V.C.

Do we deserve better?

It’s bad enough that we have a former president guilty of all sorts of crimes. It’s bad enough that our current president is making occasional blatantly poor decisions. It’s bad enough that three former Speakers of the House in Massachusetts have been convicted of crimes while in office. Our former attorney general has a speckled record. Some city councilors have had to pay fines for breaking laws. And now Jamaica Plain, Roslindale, and West Roxbury residents have to face up to the fact that their city councilor has garnered a trove of RMV violations stemming from a car crash.

My Kind of Town/and rules set forth by the Registry of Motor Vehicles, there would have been no indictment of her actions.

The charges stem from a motor vehicle accident involving a car running into a house at 53 mph in a 25-mph zone. Fortunately, the councilor and her young son did not sustain serious injuries—the child not buckled in properly had to receive a few stitches. But had she been following guidelines

I’m pining now for a candidate to represent our district who, having the integrity of former councilor Matt O’Malley, promises to site the O’Bryant School of Math and Technology at the former West Roxbury High School, with a new MBTA station on the Needham Purple Line built nearby to help students arrive there as well as to serve the burgeoning number of adults in the area. It would also be nice for such a candidate to amend the city budget to lower taxes, fix potholes, and repaint crosswalks and yellow/white lines on busy two-way streets. Know anybody?

redevelopment being the big examples – and Mook said all of these projects need to have cohesive transportation in mind as they build. He noted the new MBTA Commuter Rail West Station is slated for construction in the next decade, but pointed out many new developments will be in operation before that happens and transportation infrastructure needs to be in place before gridlock takes over the neighborhood streets.

“If we are going to think of this as transit-oriented or multimodal, knowing that the development of West Station and the rest of Beacon Yards is years and years out, not even quite on the timeframe at this point, in the interim, what kind of traffic will we be able to accommodate here?” he asked.

Mook also wants to see fewer parking new development space requirements in the ERC so as not to encourage more driving in the small neighborhood footprint.

“If we build parking we know that will induce people to drive,” he said. “If we build bus connections, transit ways and transit routes in the interim while we’re waiting for the commuter rail station to come online, we will induce bus trips. If we build wonderful separated welcoming bikeways, we will induce people to walk and bike.”

For affordability, several members said they wanted to see diverse housing options for all types of residents. Several committee members said they were worried about a “monoculture” developing in the neighborhood. Committee member Karen Smith said she is concerned that the neighborhood would only cater to wealthier residents coming to work in the biotech industry.

Member Jessica Robertson said she believes more residential development is needed to help increase access and decrease housing demand, and in turn, rents.

“Commercial development has not been matched by housing development,” she said. “That has put massive pressure on the housing market. In particular, I’m also concerned about the potential for the ERC and the Beacon Yards and the development we’re already seeing on Western Avenue that we’ll get a bit of a monoculture of lab development and potentially a monoculture of new residents who come along with that. I think I speak for a lot of folks on this call that the diversity and cultural richness of the people who make up Allston is the reason we live here. I want to make sure we’re still creating space for lots of different kinds of people who do lots of different kinds of things and not just lots of ‘Pharma Bros.’”

The biggest open space and greenspace discussion was the proposed public greenway running through the two large developments proposed for the site (phases A and B, which are detailed at <https://tinyurl.com/bdtucsp>). Committee member Bryan Chou said this could be another connection to the Charles River, like the Muddy River or the Emerald Necklace that gives all local residents a connection both to the ecology and the landscape of the city.

“I’m curious to see what this evolves into, becoming potentially a high performing landscape that brings together stormwater and flooding mitigations and open space and becomes an icon of a new way of developing a site,” he said.

Chou also asked that the team look at Assembly Row, Kendall Square and the Seaport for examples of what can go wrong when developing without a sense of community.

“And how that has kind of lent itself to becoming less strong as neighborhoods, and I think there’s a lot to learn from the mistakes of those projects,” he said.

Member Andrew Giannino-Curtis said one thing the team needs to do is to get the state Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR) on board as soon as possible so as to smooth out interactions down the road.

“An ongoing gripe in this neighborhood is how hard it is to get DCR to do much of anything,” he said. “Show up to meetings; commit to plans, to communicate well with us, and so I think if we can get DCR onboard and at these meetings early, that would go a long way as to mitigating these issues later.”

Notre Dame Street Condos

“The goal is to make the planning process more predictable and to build trust.

“One goal is to legally end urban renewal, which will be huge,” Platt said.

Platt introduced Jamahl Crawford, the BPDA community engagement manager for JP, Roxbury and Mission Hill.

Attorney Nick Zozula, of McDermott, Quilty & Miller, presented the plans and introduced Will Chalfant of Khalsa.

Zozula said it’s a four-parcel, 11,900-square-foot lot with an existing single-family house that will be razed.

The lot is located near the corner of Bragdon Street and is zoned for multi-family use, Zozula said.

The fifth story of the six-story building will be set back and include a community room and a roof deck. Most of the condos -18- will be two-bedroom.

Chalfant explained that there will be no parking access from Notre Dame Street; parking will be accessed from an alley off Bragdon Street below the long row of brick apartment buildings on Washington Street.

The development team had pre-filing meetings with the BPDA to discuss parking and street improvements.

The narrow sidewalk in place now will be widened to six feet with a four-foot planting bed against the first floor parking floor.

The fifth floor will be set back ten feet, Chalfant said,

“so the building will seem like a four-story building.”

There will be four affordable units, one of which is a three-bedroom home on the fifth floor. Zozula said “the (number of) IDP units exceed the 13 percent required by the BPDA. It’s at 15.4 percent.”

The building is essentially a long box broken up by wide, four-story bays between which are tucked balconies; each condo will have its own balcony.

The most dramatic feature is the prow of the building facing Bragdon Street in which are cut four, deep corner terraces.

Zozula concluded by saying the new building is “adding more affordability to the neighborhood, more homeownership and more equity to the neighborhood.”

Carolyn Royce, from the Egleston Square Neighborhood Association (ESNA), wanted to know what affordability meant.

“We have no idea,” Zozula said. “We’re happy to have a discussion with the BPDA or whatever it’s going to be called when we get to that.

“Now the requirement is one half at 80 percent (area median income) AMI and one half at 100 percent AMI.

The 24 -34 Notre Dame Street site as it stands today.

Moses said.

“The market might shift completely. What the interest rate is, we will revisit this later.”

Attorney Joe Hanley added “this is a privately financed development.”

“No one on this call can predict what the market will be [when this is completed],” he said.

There were three Notre Dame Street residents on the call and none spoke about the buildings’ size; one was concerned about parking.

Criticism about size came from Roy Thompson of the Garrison Trotter N/A who lives on Waumbeck Street, outside Grove Hall.

“I’m not a direct abutter,” he said, “but my main concern is this is a huge building. Why five stories? This is a side street, a pretty small street. This is over-scaled. Can you reduce the size?”

Moses said that reducing the size reduces the number of units, including the number of affordable units.

“How many [units] can you create to give away affordable units? Lessening the units increases the cost of units. That’s a barrier to people in the neighborhood who want to buy,” Moses said. “I’ve got to hit a certain number of units before the banks will support financing. I’m interested in creating a quality project that best fits financially.”

Zozula added, “We want to get as much homeownership as we can.”

“There’s a housing shortage,” Moses said. “This is a great project. I hope everyone can support it. Homeownership is important.”

Novena to St. Clare

Ask St. Clare for three favors, 1 business, 2 impossible. Say nine Hail Marys for nine days, with lighted candle. Pray whether you believe or not. Publish on the ninth day. Powerful novena. Say “May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be praised, adored, glorified, now and forever, throughout the whole world. Amen.” Your request will be granted, no matter how impossible it may seem.

ber. "We get to expand a school that works... BPS can do a move like this well." He said there are plans for a commuter railway stop near the school and improved bus service. "I think that the other issues can be solved. Because of the expanded access, I support it."

"There were very few options available that were not a private or parochial school in West Roxbury," said Lara. She told Mayor Wu that the West Roxbury Education Complex needed to be rebuilt. Lara secured the funding to do a study on rebuilding that complex. "We did not ask the O'Bryant to move into the neighborhood. We thought we were going to have a different high school that would be serving the students here in West Roxbury." She said the process has been fraught. "I have a laundry list of concerns. I would say that my stand is that I am skeptically optimistic."

Another question came from Joe Impellizeri of the West Roxbury Highland Neighborhood Civic Association. Impellizeri said there is no development plan for West Roxbury and the commercial district. "How are they (the candidates) thinking about approaching economic development and the development plans for our district?"

"I support the mayor to bring the (Boston Planning and Development Agency) BPDA under the mayor's office and make it more accountable," said Weber. "We do need a plan. We need to integrate housing on Centre St. The neighborhood should be able to advocate for things like having the street setback for trees." He favors development that fits in. "The community should definitely be involved with that."

"Not all development is bad, and it often leads to situations where we can thrive economically," said King.

"But we have to be sure we have a robust community process when it comes to planning. What we don't want is for Centre Street to become a canyon in the middle of high rises." He pointed to the condo building on LaGrange Street as a nice building that is not too high and looks good.

"Joe and I are familiar with what it's like to go against a developer. Those are big fights," said Lara, who favors abolishing the BPDA. Her office has been talking with the BPDA to develop a plan with the businesses on Centre Street. "That is something we are working on."

Ginny Gass, president of the Bellevue Hill Improvement Association asked about the behavior of the city councilors. "Mayor Wu has talked about personal, ethical, and legal lapses among city councilors...this is not a good look for Boston. If you were in charge, how would you handle lapses in judgment and inappropriate behavior by city councilors?"

"There are moments when city councilors either individually or collectively could have made better decisions," said Lara. "One of the things we are seeing on the Boston City Council is that Boston is a changing city... there is a lot of clashing. Democracy is a messy process."

She noted that the old political ways are gone. "In the past, decisions were made behind closed doors. Now it's in the open." She said that the Council has passed every single piece of legislature and every ordinance it has put to a vote, though, many of those pieces of legislation were home-rule petitions to the State Legislature, which have been known to languish for years on the voting floor.

"I spent 18 years fighting highly contentious cases," said Weber. "I know how to fight for the rights of my clients but also do it in a way that is respectful and respects the other side. We're here to solve a problem."

"We're all in this fight for a better Boston," said King. "What we deliver is what I'll be conscious of. We need to work together. That's when we find common ground and start delivering for our communities. I will bring civility to the city council."

Lastly, Jim Hennigan, president of the WRBPA, brought up the elephant in the room for West Roxbury—the proposed safety improvements on Centre Street, also known as the "road diet." He asked each candidate to explain where they stand on it.

"None of us are against road safety...but we need to have a community process," said King. "We want to make sure our side streets don't have increased traffic. What's the plan to slow down traffic? What are we going to do about the enforcement of the double parking?"

King said he wants a community process with all involved.

"I am, have been, very public and supportive of the redesign of Centre Street," said Lara. "We know the street is unsafe. I know there is a lot of disagreement." She said that agreement is not necessary to work together. "There is a plan to study the traffic on the side streets and make changes. There is a plan to look at double parking."

"I'm in support of the road diet," said Weber. "This plan will address those problems. I will fight like hell to change the plan for people in West Roxbury. I think these are valid concerns."

The meeting ended with Hennigan encouraging everyone to vote. "People have to vote. If you cannot vote that day, vote by mail. We have to drive up the vote because this is important to our community."
