Creative spirit is eternal at Blake Estates

Dozens of residents came out on Saturday to show the neighborhood their artistic skills.

Rosemarie Clinton, a painting instructor at the Mobile Arts Program and the Menino Arts Center, stood proudly in the community room of the Blake Estates on a rainy Saturday morning on November 3. She curated what was transformed into an art gallery, with more than a dozen of her beloved students, many of whom were octogenarians selling their wares to guests, friends and neighbors.

All of them were expressing a hidden passion that Clinton felt compelled to share with others once she had retired from the City of Boston as an administrator under Mayor Tom Menino and grant proposal writer two decades ago.

"I was inspired by the late Paul Nolan, who was a great artist in Hyde Park," she said. "He saw something great inside of me that I never knew that I had, and he encouraged me. When we started the art program here in Hyde Park at the Menino Arts Center, we later named the Paul Nolan Group after him, and it has been running for about 18 years or so."

Clinton became a talented watercolor painter in her own right. She won the prestigious Grumbacher award twice, as well as several Boston City Hall best watercolor painting awards over the years.

"I saw that many elderly people were trapped in their homes," Clinton said. "They have so many hidden talents. They are really the pros, but they have never been taught."

"I don't do anything," she

New construction presented at Pierce St. NW

The Pierce Street Neighborhood Watch (PSNW) gathered for its monthly meeting on Tuesday evening, Nov. 6, in the community room of the Foursquare Church, located at 28 Arlington St.

The brief session drew approximately 10 people and featured one appearance.

That appearance brought Lewis Crespo and his fiancée Jorelis Peguero to the front of the room to tell the group of the new 3 family house they are planning to build on the vacant lot at 30 Arlington St. which would be next to their 2 family home at 32 Arlington St.

As Crespo explained, they submitted paperwork regarding the project to the City this past August and had held an abutters meeting the prior Tuesday, Oct. 30, which was attended – according to PSNW Chair Melanie Daye – by two people, including her.

RTW and Ethos come together for Veterans

The Riverside Theater Works held a celebration for Veterans with Ethos out of Jamaica Plain. The show was based on USO shows from the 1940s.

The Hyde Park-based Riverside Theater Works (RTW) came together with the Jamaica Plain organization Ethos to bring the Stage Door Canteen Girls back to the future at the Hyde Park Menino Community Center.

The show came together on Sunday, Nov. 5 to a group of about 100 veterans, their families and volunteers.

Members of the English High School ROTC and students from the Boston Latin School also came to help out.

The show focused on the experiences of the Stage Door Canteen girls, which were made famous by the likes of Bette Davis in 1940s New York City as a last morale booster from civilians to military service members about to ship out to Germany. The small show had grown in its time to attract celebrities and future celebrities to perform, and RTW Executive Founding Director Marietta Phinney said she modeled the show around those experiences.

Several members of her troop came out to recreate the shows and the experiences of those who made them famous, and residents and officials alike were receptive to the idea a week before Veterans Day.

Hyde Park Library hosting
Biomimicry art exhibit

About a dozen residents came out for the reception for Biomimicry in Art, an exhibit to run in the Hyde Park Library until the end of November this year.

The Hyde Park Branch of the Boston Public Library held its opening reception for an art exhibit from Yves Rigaud on Saturday, Nov. 3, to a group of about 20 residents.

The pieces featured works based on biology from the artist Rigaud, who used the collection to graduate with honors from the Salem State University. He said he chose to work completely with butterflies, as there are so many different color combinations and intricate designs to play with.

“This is something so huge, I just picked up butterflies, but I have previously done all sorts of subjects and elements,” he said. “Butterflies are so important to nature and to our species as humans. If butterflies and pollinating insects disappeared, we as humans would have three years... Pollination is so important to agriculture, you know just soil, water and light is not enough to produce food.”

The exhibition runs from now until Dec. 28 and is set to the left of the entrance of the library. Rigaud is working with Artists at Large Inc. and the Haitian Artists Assembly of Massachusetts (HAAM) to bring the pieces to the neighborhood.

“We have a series of exhibitions with the (HAAM), and every month they chose one of us to display, and we have usually about five or six artists ever year and this was my turn,” he said.

Rigaud took a relatively unique approach to paint the butterflies, in that he looked at the insects through an electron microscope to get an idea of how each tiny piece of the insect was put together. The pieces also have a textured, three dimensional quality due to the medium he used.. He said he used oil-based paints in a kind of production line to work on several different pieces at once. He said while one piece was drying, he could work on the others.

Rigaud said he started drawing when he was very young.

“I remember, I was not even able to write my own name, let alone know how to read!” he said.

Rigaud said he asked someone to write his name for him and he copied it as a drawing, and it was the first thing he did in art.

“If you can see someone doing it, you can do it,” he said. “I started with doing portraits, I didn't do it for a living, but I got pretty good at it and I started taking classes when I was 14... and my first exhibition was when I was 16 years old.”

HAAM co founder and director Charlot Lucien said he started the organization in 1995, and he said he met with several big name painters at the UMass Boston.

“I heard about a few painters whose names I knew in Haiti as big-time painters,” he said. “I wasn’t a really big painter myself, but I thought about getting them together to reminisce about what they used to do in Haiti.”

Lucien said the organization grew out of word of mouth and started from such humble origins to become the HAAM.

“So we’ve had a lot of art exhibitions all over the place, including the Menino Arts Center,” he said. “Actually, the first exhibition we had was at the Boston City Hall, and former Boston Mayor Thomas Menino sponsored it. He had our paintings right behind his head in 1995.”

HAAM now has a working relationship with several artists still in Haiti, which grew out of a need they saw after the 2010 earthquake.

“Because of the whole noise about the earthquake, many cultural institutions came to lend a hand to support us,” he said. “We have had exhibitions with Harvard, Leslie College, William James College in Newton, the National Center of Afro-American Artists in Roxbury, the Boston Center for the Arts.”

Lucien said they have now created a book detailing all the work called Migrat-

Election a good day for incumbents

Jeff Sullivan

This year’s midterm election for 2018 saw some of the highest turnout in the country for such an election, with 114 million votes cast as of the date of publication. That’s compared to 83 million in 2014.

For Massachusetts, more than 2.4 million people came out to vote and the ballots are still coming in as of publication. For the actual big elections, not much has changed on the political landscape. Elizabeth Warren is more than likely to keep her U.S. Senate Seat against Republican Geoff Diehl with 1.3 million votes against Diehl’s 812,052 (60.8 percent to 35.8 percent) with 85 percent of precincts reporting with independent Shiva Ayyadurai coming in at 75,834 votes (3.3 percent).

In a showing of bipartisanship, more than 1.4 million voted (66.5 percent) for Massachusetts Gov. Charlie Baker with 85 percent of precincts reporting against Democratic Challenging Jay Gonzalez, who tallied 749,548 votes (33.5 percent).

West Roxbury’s State Rep. Edward Copping and State Sen. Michael Rush both ran unopposed. Hyde Park’s State Rep. Angelo Scaccia and the State Sen. Sonia Chang-Diaz, who represents Dorchester, Jamaica Plain, Hyde Park, Mattapan, Mission Hill, Roslindale, Roxbury, and the South End also ran unopposed. State Rep. Nika Elugardo beat out Rep. Jeffrey Sanchez in the primary and ran unopposed to now represent Jamaica Plain. For the Massachusetts State Senate, 29 democrats won their elections while Republicans won three, with each currently leading four other races currently too close to call.

Boston City Councilor Ayanna Pressley will be taking her seat as the first African American woman to represent Massachusetts in the U.S. House of Representatives. The only really close race for House race in Massachusetts was between Bill Keating, currently coming in with 60 percent of the vote and Peter Tedeschi, currently polling with 40.4 percent of the vote, with 86 precincts reporting.

Seth Moulton beat out Republican challenger Joseph Schneider easily with 65.3 percent of the vote versus Schneider’s 31.4 percent with 77 percent of precincts reporting. Democrat Katherine Clarke beat out Republican John Hugo with 171,935 votes (75.3 percent) and Hugo’s 56,471 votes (24.7 percent).

Democrat Lori Trahan won against both her Republican challenger Rick Green (33.9 percent of the vote) and her independent challenger Michael Mullen (4.6 percent of the vote) with 79 percent of precincts reporting. Richard Neal, Joe Kennedy, Ayanna Pressley and Stephen Lynch all ran uncontested.

Attorney General Maura Healey beat out her challenger

Editorial

IMPORTANT, BUT NO SURPRISES

To be perfectly honest, Massachusetts is a state that, especially in this year’s mid-term elections, ignores that old adage about every vote counting. Aside from ballot initiatives, watching ice cubes melt offers up more suspense than watching Tuesday’s vote totals roll in.

As expected, Gov. Charlie Baker was resoundingly re-elected. Other state posts went as expected to Democrats and incumbents.

Elizabeth Warren trounced underpowered challengers to retain her Senate seat. Beyond that race, the state’s various federal posts had a shocking dearth of challengers daring to challenge incumbents. The most surprising upset, in fact, was not on election night at all. It was Ayanna Pressley beating popular incumbent Michael Capuano in the Democratic primary for his seat in the House of Representatives.

Don’t get us wrong. We are blessed to live in a state that can resoundingly elect Baker, a moderate Republican, and Warren, an increasingly left-leaning progressive. Their common denominator isn’t rhetoric, although Warren resorts to invective ever more often as she mulls a presidential run. Both officials excel when they do their jobs outside of the public eye.

Baker, one of the nation’s most popular governors, exudes a quiet confidence. His job is to get “the job” done. He is hardly a perfect governor with an unimpeachable record. Case in point: the horror show that is the MBTA. In most instances, however, his instincts are sound, his work ethic is admirable and the results are measurable.

Let’s also praise Baker’s political instincts. He managed the tough trick of rejecting President Trump, while still being (in most instances) an in-state party stalwart.

What appeals most to voters may be his approach to the job. Even his distaste for Trump was never over-the-top. Baker walked the walk with his pledge of seeking bipartisan solutions, as well as talking the talk (as evidence by his genteel, sincere praise of challenger Jay Gonzalez).

“Here’s the good news, [a] collaborative, purposeful and humble approach to governing is exactly what you’re going to get from us and from our team for the next four years,” Baker said, addressing a crowd at the Hynes Convention Center during his post-victory speech. He later spoke of fiscal discipline “a reform-minded approach to governing, and a commitment to bipartisanship to state government.”

Those messages are why Baker won and why voters should be thankful that he did.

As for Warren, set aside her often divisive rhetoric and instead look at the work she has undertaken in the Senate. Many of those efforts are less politically charged than critics are willing to admit. She has forged bipartisan consensus and fought for veterans, quality healthcare and the financial security of middle class Americans.

A consistent theme: battling big banks and corporations that abusively grow their profits on the backs of common folk. Yes, her message can sometimes be Sanders-like in its liberal extremes, but they do have a necessary place in our national dialogue.

If this Tuesday’s election revealed one weakness in our state’s political system, it is that we still seem to have a hard time getting quality candidates to run. The surprising number of unchallenged Democrats means that, no matter how popular Baker may be, the local Republican Party still has plenty of work ahead if it seeks to be a ballast to an otherwise solidly “Blue” state. In the interest of democracy, we hope they can someday get their act together.

The new promised land

Back in the 1950’s when Ted Lepcio was playing for the Red Sox, most baseball players had to work in the offseason to augment their meager salaries. They worked as insurance salesmen and car salesman. (Ted Williams, earning an unheard of more than $100,000 annually, could enjoy fly-fishing in his offseason.)

Now professional players, regardless of their sport, draw such high salaries that they are not forced to work in the offseason. Their multi-million-dollar contracts are way beyond the average Bostonian’s ability to comprehend.

Furthermore, a huge number of Bostonians are in awe of those making more than $100,000 annually—well below the pay scale for profession baseball, basketball, football, and hockey players. While the average cop, firefighter, and public school teacher make this as an average, the tens of thousands of urban residents earning below some sort of Mendoza line cannot aspire to ever reap this type of paycheck.

The ongoing lockout by National Grid, now extending

My Kind of Town/

beyond five months, could have a happy ending right away. It would be interesting to hear United Steelworkers Locals 12003 and 12012-04’s side of the salary dispute.

National Grid currently has made an offer via a 5-year agreement of compounding increases totaling almost 15% that will elevate the current average employee salary to $120,000-$137,000 annually by 2022 (the salaries include an amount of overtime not specified). With no lay-offs coming to employees with five or more years of service, the offer also includes an 80% company contribution to premiums and an increase of pension benefits for current employees by 10% immediately.

There is also a newly defined 401(k) plan for new hires with a company contribution ranging from 3% to 9%. Furthermore, there will be increases in shift differentials for evening /weekend shifts, meal and clothing allowances, and off-hour coverage pay.

Working in the trenches, literally, for National Grid is not without frequent and imminent danger. It would be nice to hear if the injury/fatality packages for workers killed during work rival the generous ones accorded police and firefighters.

In the meantime, as the lockout continues, questions remain for those of us who are National Grid customers. May both sides come to an agreement soon—an agreement that also serves the needs of us paying National Grid’s high fees.

Thanking Veterans Today, and Every Day

Every year on November 11th, we remember the armistice, signed on November 11th, 1918, that ended the First World War. One hundred years later, it can be easy to forget why we celebrate this day of all days, as the living memory of that war fades. The fact is, thousands of young men from Boston’s neighborhoods, and from all across our country, put their lives on the line to defend our allies in the Great War. Today, the legacy of that courage and sacrifice is alive all around us — in the men and women in our neighborhoods who continue to serve our country; the families who continue to sacrifice; and veterans who continue to make Boston the great city that it is. It is essential, this year and every year, that we acknowledge and thank these honored members of our community.

More than 22,000 veterans call Boston home. They embody a commitment to service that doesn’t disappear when they hang up their uniforms. When they come home, veterans continue to serve their community as leaders, parents, teachers, mentors, first responders, and more. Their valuable contributions make Boston a better place, and we should be thanking them each and every day for that.

It’s also important for us to remember that veterans and their families often face unique challenges. Many deal with deep wounds, both visible and invisible. Since I was elected Mayor, I have worked hard to make Boston a city where veterans truly thrive, personally and professionally, throughout their lives. I believe that we need to show our veterans that we are grateful every single day. And one of the most important ways we do this is by showing vets that they can ask for help, and that they will receive it. It’s what we owe them in return for all they have given us.

Mayor’s Column

Martin J. Walsh

These are the values behind some of our most ambitious work in the City of Boston: from ending chronic veterans homelessness to improving access to supportive housing, healthcare, recovery services, employment programs for vets with and without PTSD, and much more. A question I hear all the time from residents is, “How can I help?” One of the simplest, and most powerful ways that every member of the Boston community can help support our veterans is simply saying “thank you.” And that’s exactly what we do through Operation Thank a Vet. Over the last few months, our goal has

Gas companies no show at city council hearing

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Boston City Council met last week and discussed safety measures taken by gas company National Grid after two incidents in the state.

The first incident, which did not take place under National Grid’s watch, was an over-pressurization of pipes in the Merrimack Valley that led to several homes exploding and at least one death. The second incident did occur on National Grid’s watch, in which a worker over-pressurized a line in Woburn, but no explosions or injuries took place. After that, the state’s Department of Public Utilities has put a moratorium on all non-emergency and non-compliance work in National Grid’s territory, pending results of the department’s review of National Grid’s safety practices.

The hearing began with a statement given to the City Council by National Grid, but the company did not send a representative to the meeting.

“We remain committed to keeping an ever-vigilant eye on safety, continuous improvement and best practices,” hearing cosponsor and District 6 City Councilor Matt O’Malley read from National Grid’s Director Joseph Carroll.

It should be noted that that phrase has been used in several other statements released by National Grid in those exact words, but from National Grid Spokesperson Christine Milligan.

“It’s disappointing, but it’s also unsurprising that National Grid has declined to join us today,” O’Malley said. “They offered to meet with city councilors to discuss gas safety, but apparently not in this forum.”

However, National Grid’s locked out workers did come to the hearing. After negotiations between the United Steelworkers Union and National Grid failed to come up with a new contract before the old expired, National Grid locked out about 1,100 workers on June 25.

Joe Kirylo, President of USW Union Local 12003, said he feels that the biggest obstacle to gas safety is the state’s DPU. He said he and other members of his union have sent hundreds of what they believed to be violations and the response was slow to nothing from the agency.

“I don’t state this lightly, but the DPU is a joke,” he said. “They have a lot of problems and we went to the DPU week after week demanding a meeting so we could tell them about the safety problems throughout Boston and other communities, and it wasn’t after three hours and 18 minutes after the Merrimack explosions that we got an email saying, ‘we’ll meet with you.’”

Kirylo said they had sent numerous violations to the DPU as far back as 2011.

“We are not here over a contract,” he said. “We are here over public safety... We did not start our campaign for public safety on June 25, and this is important, I don’t want people to think in any way shape or form that we just brought up safety because we got locked out. This has been going on since 2011, and I have sent 101 pages of safety incidents or things that needed to be discussed across the board to the Governor and the DPU and, more importantly, from 2011 to 2015 to two CEOs and two presidents of operation, so there’s a long history of National Grid not working safely.”

Kirylo discussed the city’s gas safety problems, mainly having to do with what he believed were out-of-date computer systems on many National Grid trucks. He said the systems allow workers to locate and mark gas mains and distribution lines for construction workers or gas utility repair teams (so they can fix a leak).

“If you get out in front of someone’s house at three o’clock in the morning to mark a gas main, house gas service or multiple gas mains and the computers are down, like they have been for one hour, two hours, two days, three days or more, you are literally in the dark,” he said. “Because you don’t know where the gas main is, you don’t know where the service is, and you do not know where to mark. And if you’re responding to a gas leak, and you show up with a crew that has to bar out the main and excavate, you are also without information. It is almost impossible to find and fix a leak when those computers are not working.”

Kirylo also pointed out that there is a level one gas leak (being the highest in severity out of three levels) found near the Haynes Early Education Center that he and his team logged on Aug. 23. He said National Grid went out and tried to fix it, but he said after they went back to the site to check, that as of Oct. 23, the leak was not fixed and showed 3 percent gas reading on their flammable gas detecting machines.

He said they have brought up numerous complaints of level 1 leaks with the DPU, and the response from the DPU was to ask where they got their readers.

On Jan.1 of 2017, the City Council approved an ordinance brought forth by O’Malley to require that any time the city’s streets were to be dug up, either for water main repairs, electrical work, construction, etc., the respective gas company in the area would have to fix any leak if it was detected there. National Grid sued the city and the courts repealed the ordinance based on a previous law that dictates only the state can create or enforce laws regarding gas infrastructure. Chris Osgood, the city’s Chief of Streets, said the city actually has a very limited authority when it comes to gas infrastructure.

“Our focus is really limited to the worksite itself, the work they are doing to the street and that’s sort of our span of control,” he said. “There are things outlined in Massachusetts General Law that are out of our control.”

He said there are four roles the Public Works Department (DPW) plays in gas infrastructure development and repair, the first of which is grant of location so as to make sure that any installation of gas infrastructure does not conflict with other public utilities or private property. The second is permitting, which allows for excavation.

tion and construction within the city. The third is inspections, which is overseen by Katie Choe and Mark Cardarelli, and they inspect the excavation work on city streets. The fourth area of work is capital coordination.

“It’s to make sure we are investing the city’s and taxpayer’s dollars in resurfacing roads in a way that also is in coordination with all the utility work that happens,” he said.

Osgood pointed out that O’Malley’s ordinance was actually helpful for the city, in that it required gas companies to share their work plans and information with the city, which allows the DPW to schedule excavation work in coordination with the gas companies for repair and leak fixes.

Choe said the information based on specifically gas leaks has been very helpful. She said they have the locations of all grade 2 leaks in the city as well as any grade 3 leaks in school zones in the city.

“Grade 1 leaks, we know them through emergency notifications,” she said. “We do have the location of all the grade 2 leaks, all of the emergencies that have been worked and any grade 3 leaks in school zones. We are getting the grade 2 and 3 leaks in real time as they are reported to us, and also any grade 3 leaks that are scheduled for repair.”

MIX AND MINGLE

Boston Centers for Youth Families

Artists connected with each other to broaden their own horizons and inspire each other to do more than they thought they could.

said humbly. “I just opened the door. They are the ones who come out to play.”

Joseph Rivera Morales is the most expressive artist in every sense of the word. A painter and clay artist, he is also deaf and mute. He is fluent in English and Spanish, and uses American Sign Language (ASL) and hand expressions to communicate with those who cannot sign. He communicated with The Bulletin through a mix of ASL, lip reading and hand expressions.

“It takes so much time,” he said. “I keep thinking about things and how to get them out.”

He gave a broad smile as he said, “I love you” and “Peace” in ASL as he showed his dynamic ceramics and explosive paintings.

One was an intricate latticed lime piece. Another was an upside-down bat hanging from a large yellow hive. He had about 20 pieces, many of which sold.

Another of Clinton’s most talented students is Geneva Kingwood. She has won the Best in Show award at an exhibition at City Hall this spring.

“I wasn’t even going to enter, but Rosemarie put a couple of paintings in,” Kingwood said. “She said I am really talented.”

Yet Kingwood is only a fledgling painter. She began painting two years ago at age 82, and only recently began the sculpting class with teacher Luke Bruffee.

“I love painting, but I also like working with clay now,” she said, displaying about 15 of her pieces. “I can’t believe what I do sometimes.”

“It gets me out of the house,” she continued. “Otherwise I would be sitting down watching soap operas.”

“We do two exhibitions a year – one in the fall and one in the spring,” Bruffee said. “Everyone looks forward to it. It would be nice to find larger venues for them to sell their work, because they could get so much more than what they charge.”

Bruffee has taught a sculpting class once a week on Mondays for the past two years.

“Now that we use professional clay we can fire it in a kiln,” he said. “The results are far superior. The only thing is that things

Tomas Davilu is the interpreter at the Menino Arts Center who volunteers at the Mobile Arts Program. He is fluent in “English, Spanish, some Portuguese, some Italian and a little French. That’s all.”

All of these languages come into use at Blake Estates, especially with the high Spanish and Haitian Creole population, said the retired businessman originally from Puerto Rico.

“I really enjoy working with them,” he said. “Some of them don’t speak any English, so they wouldn’t have come without my help. I also help them to translate their bills and documents for them.”

Mary Parham is one of Kingwood’s best friends at Blake Estates. She was motivated to come to the Mobile Arts Program because of Kingwood, she said.

“Geneva made me come down,” she said, smiling. “I really like doing it. It gives me something to do, and it keeps me very busy.”

Parham became involved in the art program after retiring as a sales clerk at Macy’s, where she worked for three decades.

“I am not really an artist, but I can dabble,” she said. “I keep trying to get other people involved.”

“I think they do such a terrific job,” said Pat Lombardi, who lives in the building. “I bought the horse piece that Geneva painted because my grandniece loved it. Because of that painting, now she wants a horse.”

Gladys Gondres loves to paint, she said. She has been taking classes in the program for eight years, she said, through Davilu.

“I sold two of my six paintings,” she said excitedly. “They are beautiful pictures with flowers.” “She is also taking English classes twice a week,” Davilu added.

“They should be in a place where they can get the money they deserve,” Barbara Russo said. “It’s great that they can sell things to the neighbors and their friends. But they don’t have a lot of money themselves because they are on fixed incomes.”

In addition to her art, Russo, 80, also has participated in the Walk for Hunger for 47 years, the Boston Marathon and the Susan G. Komen Breast Cancer “Race for the Cure” Run/Walk as a walker. Josephine Panzieri sold several pieces at the exhibition. She said she loves the class, and it also strengthens her hands.

“A woman was looking for Christmas gifts,” Panzieri said, noting she has been involved in the program for almost two years. “I sold my big angel, two little angels and an owl.”

By the end of the two-hour show, nearly a third of the one hundred pieces had been sold. Prices ranged from $15 to $100.

WWI MOBILE MUSEUM

Visit the Mobile Museum at Springhouse on November 29 & 30!

“Lest We Forget,” a traveling exhibit commemorating the centennial anniversary of World War I is coming to Springhouse! Based in Texas, the World War I Mobile Museum is a traveling exhibition of original artifacts composed of twelve sections depicting different themes, including trench warfare, photographic and cinematic treatment of the war and Christmastime on the battlefield. More than 200 artifacts and photographs are presented, including numerous personal items used by soldiers, one of the first battlefield movie cameras and an authentic trenching tool like those used to dig more than 25,000 miles of trenches during the war.

“When I was visiting the National World War I Museum in Kansas City, I realized that senior adults are the last direct descendants of World War I veterans and decided to create a mobile museum to bring these artifacts to them wherever they live,” said Keith Colley, curator and owner. “We’re finding people of all ages are drawn to the exhibit. Our hope is to keep the memory of World War I and its veterans alive, which is why we called it ‘Lest We Forget,’ a phrase that comes from a speech delivered by President Woodrow Wilson after the war ended.”

The WWI Mobile Museum is open to the public. Come visit: Thursday, November 29th between 10:00 a.m. - 7:00 p.m. or Friday, November 30th between 10:00 a.m. - 5:00 p.m. While admission is free, we ask that visitors bring a toy to donate to the Home for Little Wanderers Big Wishes Holiday Toy Drive.

Hyundai Kona Ultimate AWD

Hyundai rediscovered itself a few years back and is now building some of its best cars, either here in the U.S. or like the Kona, overseas. The base Kona SE starts out as a FWD, with a 2.0 liter, 4-cylinder, 147 horsepower engine and an Atkinson dual cycle CVVT transmission. Yes, CVVT is correct. Unlike the conventional CVT, the CVVT is much different in its design and its function.

Now to the feel of this Kona Ultimate powered by a 1.6 liter, turbo-charged 175 horsepower, 4-cylinder engine, via a 7-speed dual clutch automatic that feels just like a manual transmission when starting from a stop. The engine RPM rises up before the car moves, just like driving a manual transmission. The shifts are very smooth and seamless under normal acceleration. That all changes when the accelerator is to the floor – the shifting is firm and precise, the engine revs to the red line and sounds great.

The Kona is a four-door, small crossover wagon. Fold down the rear seats for additional cargo space. Before this car was dropped off to me this week, I had not heard about it. It is a multifunction vehicle that is available in FWD or AWD with a center differential lock button. The top-of-the-line Kona Ultimate is a fully equipped fun, practical, and affordable car with NO excuses. The Ultimate has a long list of standard equipment that is usually optional on other vehicles. Power driver’s seat, heated front seats, large sunroof, 18-inch tires, steering hub controls, 8-inch color multifunction touchscreen, auto dimming high beams, heads-up display, leather interior and steering wheel, blind spot monitoring, forward collision alert, rear cross traffic alert, lane keeping assist, plus more is available.

EPA: 26 city, 29 highway, 27 average combined MPG. The Kona FWD starts at $19,500 (destination fee: $980). Our Ultimate Kona, as tested, was $28,700.

ing Colors, which can be found for sale on Amazon. “This book is the culmination of putting together these artists and producing something,” he said. Artists at Large Inc. co-founder Thomas Seggers said “I’ve known Charlot since 2002, and I used to have a gallery across the street from him and I have been working with them since then,” he said. “On the anniversary of the book coming out in January, we thought about trying to showcase each artist in the book, or however many we could fit into the year, to give people an idea of what the art looks like.” “Today’s a perfect example; it’s a small group, but everyone is extremely interested and engaged,” he said. “We hung the artwork literally this morning and the librarians were distracted from their work. They were coming over and taking pictures and saying ‘oh! I want that one or that one’ and ‘where can I get these.’ They find out it’s HAAM, oh what’s that?” Seggers said it has just become a learned moment, and people have been really excited about the art there. “That really helps Artists At-Large’s mission, because we’ve been in the neighborhood since 2002 and have had shows from Cuba, Ecuador, Columbia, two year olds to 80 year olds,” he said. “Our next exhibit is Iliana Chery and she’s five years old and she’ll be doing her first exhibit in January.” Brockton Arts co-founder Stephanie Danielson said she came because they have worked with the HAAM throughout the years, first in poetry and then in the visual arts. “One of our poets, Danielle Legros Georges, who is actually a Poet Laureate of Massachusetts now, was a member of the Haitian Community and, after the earthquake, HAAM wanted to find a way to help the artists in La Chapelle who were affected physically in the community. The artists had actually stopped painting because they were so traumatized, and HAAM wanted to help encourage those artists to start painting again so they reached out through Danielle to our organization to help them raise money and direct money to the community.” Danielson said it was amazing to see that journey put down on paper. “We’ve helped to start an arts school, Brockton Arts, and HAAM has helped to make that happen and Migrating Colors is kind of a documentation of that journey,” she said.

the scope of the new construction to the group, using diagrams he had set up in the front of the room and with information packets handed out to everyone before he began.

The proposed 3 family building will be two and a half stories, with each unit to have three bedrooms and two baths. Each unit will also have parking for two cars that will be located in the rear of the building.

When asked about variances, Crespo mentioned setbacks, and the fact that the only the front is currently in violation, “just because we want to be in line with the other house and the church. Other than that, we meet the setbacks to the side.”

He went on to mention that the only other issue he anticipated was the fact that the proposed 3 family would be in a 2 family zone.

During the comment period that followed Crespo’s presentation, Pastor Karen Ricketts – whose Family Life Fellowship is based at the Foursquare Church, across the street from the proposed house – jokingly referred to the new house in relation to her weekly service, which is infused with music. “Just keep your windows closed on Sundays.”

Speaking more seriously,

Ricketts noted that – as the congregation has grown – parking has become more of an issue and that, if Crespo had any issues with anything, to please contact her. “We want to live as good neighbors,” she added.

Speaking after the meeting, Ricketts also informed the Bulletin that this year’s Thanksgiving Interfaith Thanksgiving Celebration has been canceled this year, which would have been its fourth. She said that there were too many scheduling conflicts between the celebrants to make it work this time.

“But the good news is that we are going to look forward to, and plan for – we’re starting to plan this month – next year,” Ricketts added, “We’ll plan for our fifth year anniversary and we’ll do it really nicely and really invite everybody to celebrate for Thanksgiving.”

In other business, Sgt. Dan MacDonald issued his annual holiday warning for residents to watch out for packages being delivered, because thieves follow the delivery trucks and then steal the drop-offs.

“Tis the season,” Captain Joseph Gillespie added.

The next Pierce Street Neighborhood Watch meeting will be held on Dec. 4 at 6:00 p.m.

Lewis Crespo presented his proposed 3 family house - which would be located at 32 Arlington Street - to the Pierce Street Neighborhood Watch at Tuesday's meeting.

Stage Door

“I’m so very honored to be among great veterans and families and so many who have served,” said State Secretary of Veterans Affairs Francisco Urena. “As veterans, it gives us great pride that we have new generations among us who have respect for the flag, respect for the uniform and are just quality citizens at their time in high school, regardless whether they go into the military after high school or not.”

Urena added that he was particularly happy to see this work go on in District 5 City Councilor Tim McCarthy’s district, as his son is currently serving in the U.S. Army. He said that as a veteran, he is extremely proud to see so many come out to the event.

“I know there are many World War II veterans among us, along with some Korean, some peacetime and some Vietnam in this audience, and to all who have served and worn our nation’s uniform, we are so very grateful, not only for your service but for the example you have set for our communities as veterans upon returning home.”

Residents Claire and Michael Weston said they came out to support the programming at Ethos and enjoy the show.

“My husband was in the navy for 20 years, and at Ethos they called us as members to see if we could come,” she said. “This is a great show, I’m very excited.”

Resident Mary L. Anderson said this was amazing to see so many come out for the veterans in Hyde Park and in the city.

“I found out through the senior group of Hyde Park, and we all come to these programs, seniors stick together,” she said. “It’s nice, it’s getting us out of the house and this might be the only time some of these people get to come out, because in the neighborhood, they don’t have anything.”

Ethos Chief Development and Community Relations Officer Raymond Santos said, “This is fantastic, it’s just great to see such a diverse group of men and women who have served our country honorably,” he said. “This is a wonderful opportunity for us to give back to them in whatever way we can. All of our staff have had such a great time putting this together.”

Santos said the English High School ROTC, a short jaunt south of the Ethos building, was a natural fit and they have worked together in the past.

“I think when Ethos calls and we ask for support for our older men and women, most organizations come out in full strength and it’s something that all our partners are really willing to help out with,” he said.

English High School ROTC Commander Sgt. Major Charles Hornbuckle said they jumped at the chance to help out and serve at the event.

“We were approached to come out and provide color guard and ushers for the event and I thought it would be a great opportunity for some of our young men and women to come out here and see some of the older veterans and mingle with them,” he said.

McCarthy kept his words short and sweet before the show, but let the audience know he’d be willing to speak to anyone after.

“And if you want to see a picture of my son, I have one!” he said.

State Rep. Angelo Scaccia also spoke during the event, kicking off with a joke.

“Now don’t believe what people tell you, I did not serve during World War I,” he said to laughter and a response from the crowd.

“It was the Civil War!” cried someone in the audience to more laughter.

But Scaccia went to a more serious note, detailing his experiences coming back from the Vietnam War, and recent experience he had with Urena.

“We had to hide; people at that time were angry at the people who had served in that war, and when Francisco got up to speak, he said, ‘it’ll never happen again, America will always be proud of those who serve,’” he said. “This Commonwealth of Massachusetts has done more for veterans than any other state in the Union by far. It’s because of people like Francisco in this government.”

Prayer to the Blessed Virgin
(Never known to fail!)

Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine, splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in this necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my mother. Oh Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth, I humbly beseech thee from the bottom of my heart to succor me in my necessity (make request). There are none that can withstand your power. Oh Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (three times). Holy Mary, I place this cause in your hands (three times). Say this prayer for three consecutive days and then you must publish and it will be granted to you. Grateful thanks. —Dr. Maryanne West

Miracle Prayer

Dear Heart of Jesus, in the past I have asked You for many favours. This time, I ask you this very special one (mention favour). Take it, dear Heart of Jesus, and place it within Your own broken heart where Your Father sees it. Then, in His merciful eyes, it will become Your favour, not mine. Amen. Say for three days, promise publication and favour will be granted. Grateful thanks. —M.O.

been to personally reach out to all 22,000 veterans in our city. We wanted to make sure each of them knows about all the resources that our city has made available to them. We’ve connected with thousands of vets so far, but we have thousands more to go. That’s where you come in. On Saturday, November 10th, we will go door to door delivering thank you packages and information about opportunities available to veterans. By joining us as a volunteer, you can help us reach our goal. And most importantly, you will make a meaningful difference in people’s lives—connecting those who have served their country with a community who is ready to serve them and their families.

A century ago, the events of November 11th gave people hope for a more peaceful and prosperous future. This week, we’ll recognize those among us who have continued that mission and put their lives on the line in the name of those same values. In Boston, we never forget the sacrifices people made for the good of our community. We know that our strength comes from our willingness to lift our neighbors up in good times and hard times. And we will always be grateful to our veterans, not just on November 11th, but every day.

If you are a veteran who would like to be connected to services in Boston, please reach out to Boston’s Veterans Services, <https://www.boston.gov/departments/veterans-services>, email veterans@boston.gov, or call 617-241-VETS (8387).
