The Lower Fairmount Hill Community Group, formerly known as Fairmount Hill South/Wakefield Community Group, held their first meeting of the fall on Monday, Oct. 15 at the Boston Police Academy. The meeting was led by community member Marcia Kimm.

The community group “has been wrestling with a new name,” Kimm stated, since many neighbors felt the title should be more specific. The members have been discussing a name change for about a year now, and have been voting on it since last winter. Some community members liked the name “Fairmount Hill South at Wakefield”, but community members ultimately decided on the new name, “Lower Fairmount Hill Community Group”. Kimm plans on making a new logo for the neighborhood group, and members offered to hand out flyers to neighbors.

The hot topic of the meeting was the Community Pres-

Weather not a factor for Sherrin Woods cleanup crew

Despite the near-freezing temperatures and unrelenting drizzle on Saturday morning, more than 20 volunteers came out to help clean up Sherrin Woods in Hyde Park.

Bright and early on Oct. 13, the crew from the Boston Urban Wilds, within the Boston Parks and Recreation Department, struck out to take down invasive species and clear out the brush at the site.

“We do these cleanups probably every week in April, May, September and October,” said Urban Wilds Manager Paul Sutton. “Then in the summer we hire the students to work Monday through Friday. In the spring and the summer we work with a lot of adult groups, nonprofits and corporate volunteers.”

The cleanups span throughout the city, but in Sherrin Woods the cleanup is to prepare the site for additional renovation and restoration. The city has allocated $400,000 in construction budgeting to renovate the Council looks to tackle dockless transit

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

On Monday, Oct. 15, the Boston City Council held a hearing on dockless bikes and scooters in the city and how they could be regulated.

The city has seen an increase in said modes of transportation, and many residents have become concerned with the way some users are leaving the bikes and scooters lying around.

Boston Chief of Streets Chris Osgood said the issue of shared “micro mobility,” which includes docked transportation like Blue Bikes, presents opportunities and problems for the future.

“We know that we need to move in ways that cause less congestion, that cost less for our constituents and cause less emissions,” he said. “Obviously, what is also ahead are the two devices that are right over my right shoulder, which are the E Scooters, and that is why we are putting together a regional framework that would allow E Scooters on our streets as soon as the spring of 2019.”

Osgood said that framework includes making sure each scooter and bicycle would be available to residents in all neighborhoods. He also said the framework would decide if scooters would be allowed on the sidewalks or not. Boston Transportation Department (BTD) Commissioner Gina

P. J. Terranova returns to take over the helm at Riverside Theatre Works Shakespeare wrote that “All the world’s a stage.” For Hyde Park native P.J. Terranova, this quote perfectly characterizes his life.

Terranova, the producing artistic director at Riverside Theatre Works (RTW), knew since age nine that he wanted to be in the theater. He had two key mentors in his life: his father, entertainer Paul Terranova, and Riverside Theatre Works executive founding director and matriarch, Marietta Phinney.

Factory Hill Neighborhood Association safety issues with police

Mary Ellen Gambon
Staff Reporter

The Factory Hill Neighborhood Association held a brief meeting on Wednesday, October 10 with about 20 members to discuss traffic and area safety issues as dusk turned to darkness at the park, at the intersection of Town and Sunnyside Streets.

A woman in the Ellis Street area reported several incidents of dangerous driving. She did not give her name in case of retaliation.

“Recently, I feel like my voice does not want to be heard,” she said, noting that she has lived in Hyde Park for more than two decades.

She described being hit in the parking lot of the Stop & Shop plaza when a “car put his car in reverse.”

Boston Area E 18 Police Captain Joseph Gillespie

The Factory Hill Neighborhood Association met last week and talked about several crime and police issues currently facing the neighborhood.

asked if the incident was reported and the information taken. She replied that she did report the accident to the police, and there is video footage.

“Since that time I have called 911 because cars have been blocking my driveway,” she added. “I feel like there is a change in the environment in the way people drive around here. There is much more aggressiveness in drivers. They are going at high speeds.”

“Definitely report all of that,” E 18 Community Service Officer Matt Conley said. “Then we can follow up on the issue.”

“A call is worth a lot,” added FHNA president Randy Haynes said.

Traffic was a recurring issue during the meeting, as was noise and drug use behind the Channing Elementary School in the early morning hours on the weekends.

“Part of why we moved here was because of the wide open spaces,” Ellen Scalse said. “Now there are issues with traffic and speeding.”

“We live in a growing neighborhood,” Haynes said. “We see a lot of nice crosswalks in other areas. Maybe we can see if the City can put some here, or some speed bumps.”

Linda Rose O’Conner requested that a stop sign be put on Roxanna Street.

Bryan Flynn, the Hyde Park liaison to the Mayor’s Office of Neighborhood Services, explained why that would not be possible at this time.

“We haven’t been chosen for the City’s Slow Streets program,” he said.

According to the www.boston.gov website, the 2018 neighborhoods chosen this year are in Mattapan and Dorchester.

He said that a lot of the “red tape lies with the Boston Transportation Department.” However, they can respond to requests from neighborhoods if they see a high volume of calls from an area, and if there is an increased demand for safety issues such as crosswalks.

“There is power when you do that,” Flynn said of posts to the 311 app, calls to 311, and calls and emails to his office. “They will send me the tracking numbers. If I have 15 to 20 people calling, BTM is more apt to put the request in. The squeaky wheel gets the oil.”

Flynn can be reached at bryan.flynn@boston.gov.

The group also reported drinking and smoking behind the Channing Elementary School, at 35 Sunnyside Street between Friday and Sunday nights “around one o’clock in the morning on.”

Also, regarding the police report, Conley said there was an assault on August 29 at 14 Hillis Road. A person was shot, and an arrest was made.

On September 25, there was a larceny on Winslow Street of a package taken from a porch.

The FHNA meets every second Wednesday at 6:30 p.m. Although meetings usually are held in the park, due to the winter, they will be held at the Area E 18 police station at 1249 Hyde Park Avenue.

SCHOOL DAZE

You are forgiven if the City's plan for school infrastructure is overly confusing and, perhaps, may even strike you as contradictory.

In recent days, there have been multiple reports of both school closings and grand opening plans. The Boston Globe summed it up this way: "Boston plans to build or renovate a dozen schools." Over at Universal Hub, a different take: "BPS plans to shut West Roxbury high schools; more schools could follow."

So which is it? Well, in the grand tradition of Boston's cluelessness when it comes to its school system, the current, evolving plan calls for both shuttering and opening schools.

Yes, there are closures in the works. Urban Science Academy and West Roxbury Academy will close in June, because of what interim Superintendent Laura Perille described as their deteriorating conditions. The McCormack Middle School in Dorchester is also on the potential chopping block.

What the City takes away, it also gives. Mayor Walsh has announced plans to spend as much as $1 billion to rebuild and reconfigure 125 schools. An early recipient of that funding: the brand new Boston Arts Academy in the Fenway.

We do not dispute that tough decisions are par for the course when managing a school system as large as the one Boston grapples with. We do, however, have questions.

What will happen to the 750 students, many of them with special needs, who will be displaced from their schools in West Roxbury?

Are some students, under this new plan, rewarded with stability while others face uncertainty and being pushed into classrooms throughout the system?

Why is the city, according to its current strategy, so focused on closing middle schools?

Is either extending lower-grade schools to eighth grade, or starting secondary schools as early as seventh grade, a smart move that is in the best interests of students?

How will teachers be reassigned?

What effects will all this have on exam schools (if any)?

To what degree is deferred spending in maintenance responsible for the poor condition of many schools?

In the coming weeks, expect plenty of discussion on this evolving school plan, both favorable and irate. When it comes to local education, there is no way to please everybody. Many mayors and school superintendents have learned that the hard way over the years. What we do hope is that our elected officials craft and pitch a defensible plan, one that makes sense both fiscally and educationally.

MCCARTHY OPPOSES SPRAGUE ST. PLAN

Dear Neighbor,

We as property owners have the right to a full vetted process when requesting a variance to build on our asset. Whether you are building several structures, adding a deck to your home, or expanding your living space, this process is your right.

My role as your Boston City Councilor is certainly multifaceted - supporting and delivering basic city services, attending meetings to be your sounding board for issues, deliberating on a $3.3 billion budget, and guiding you through any issue to make your life a bit easier. I have said from the beginning, my roots are deep here in District

5, and "What you see outside your front door matters to me" has become our motto.

When I worked for Mayor Ray Flynn, then Boston Police Commissioner Mickey Roache came to Readville to attend an event. He said to me, "Readville is Boston's best kept secret." Maureen

How we're creating more affordable housing

Boston is going through a period of historic growth—the kind our city hasn't seen in decades. More people are choosing to put down roots and start families here. More businesses are choosing to open their doors here. Students from all over the world come to attend our universities and colleges each year. As Boston grows, we must keep our focus on the families and communities that make our city the diverse, welcoming and world-class place it is. To do that, residents must be able to afford to live here in the city they love, families must be able to grow, and young people must be able to make our city their home.

To achieve that, we're working hard to increase Boston's affordable housing stock — that includes building housing across a range of incomes, and focusing on ensuring there are income-restricted homes being built throughout Boston.

Just last month, we increased our overall housing goals from creating 53,000 units to 69,000 units by 2030 to meet Boston's growing population and increase the number of housing opportunities available to residents. These new housing goals, which were first set in 2014 through our housing plan, build on our commitment to increasing access to home ownership, preventing displacement and promoting fair and equitable housing access.

Mayor's Column

As we build more housing in Boston to relieve housing pressure, our regional partners are also working to ensure their cities and towns keep up with the demand for affordable housing. Boston can't do this alone — and that's why I'm proud earlier this month, I joined leaders from 14 surrounding communities who are part of the Metro Mayors Coalition to announce a new regional housing production goal for coalition cities and towns to meet the demands of a robust regional economy and a growing population in Boston and surrounding areas. Together, the 15 members of the Metro Mayors Coalition announced a target to create 185,000 new units of housing across the region by the year 2030.

We are at a pivotal time in Greater Boston as our economy continues to grow and thrive, and more people move to our communities. I know housing is the number one concern for so many families in Boston, and addressing it is my top priority. Of the 69,000 new units that will be created by 2030, 15,820 of them will be income restricted. By 2030, the total number of income-restricted housing units in Boston will be nearly 70,000. We are also committed to acquiring 1,000 market-rate rental units from the housing market and making them income restricted units.

If you think finding affordable housing, or becoming a homeowner, isn't a reality for you — explore the resources the City of Boston offers. Take a home buying class. Apply for an affordable home buying opportunity. Apply for an income-restricted apartment. All our resources are available at <https://www.boston.gov/departments/neighborhood-development>, and we'll continue to work hard to make sure all families who want to live in Boston are able to.

Duped

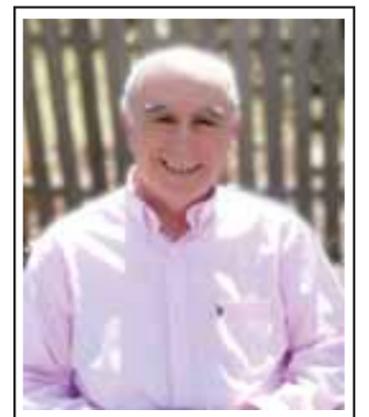

As kids, we all thought that television advertisements ending with "Satisfaction guaranteed, or your money back" was failsafe: it was a win-win situation. After a while the ads stipulated that shipping and handling for the original mailing were not included in the money-back part of it. Then it became known that trying to get one's money back became, for the most part, a long and arduous effort. Eventually older people did not fall for the ruse any more: with age comes wisdom. But there was always the next generation, who could be fooled, as P.T. Barnum once postulated.

In my eighth decade I fell victim to a questionable banking procedure. On-line banks, it seems, have better interest rates than brick-and-mortar institutions. Having been informed that an investor could somewhat easily—either totally on-line or by a partial telephone conversation—extract one's funds from on-line money market accounts, I went ahead and set up such an account. Some federal agency was there

RVMS participating in Partners In Preservation

As a participant of the 2018 Partners in Preservation campaign, Roslindale Village Main Street is encouraging the public to visit VoteYourMainStreet.org/Boston to secure funding to help preserve the Roslindale Congregational Church, UCC (RCC) by installing a lift, ramp, and handicapped accessible bathroom. A lift that enables people to access both the basement and the main floor will ensure that this community-oriented building can fully welcome and be accessible to all for generations to come, while preserving the main facade of the building and its historic integrity as a building that has already served the community for over 125 years.

Residents can vote for projects in their neighborhood with this Partners in Preservation program to provide funding for historical sites.

RCC is a place that matters: an Open & Affirming church, welcoming all, and a pillar of community support. Service projects include the Roslindale Food Pantry (50 years). RCC hosts community meetings for Alcoholics Anonymous, Adoptive Families, Roslindale IS for Everyone (RISE), Jazz, Open Studios, and more. This accessibility project will enable RCC to increase community events hosted and participation for those with disabilities and/or mobility issues in Roslindale.

American Express and The National Trust for Historic Preservation, in collaboration with Main Street America, announced today that their annual Partners in Preservation campaign is headed back to Main Street with a focus on sites that celebrate diversity and the fight for equality.

Partners in Preservation is a community-based partnership, created by the National Trust for Historic Preservation and American Express, to raise awareness of the importance of preserving historic places and their role in sustaining local communities. To-date, it has committed over $22 million in support of more than 200 historic sites across the country. Drawing on the success of the 2017 program, this year the campaign will award $2 million in grants to historic sites on America's Main Streets. Each of the 20 sites featured in the campaign played a role in the development of a diverse nation or the struggle for equal rights.

Partners in Preservation: Main Streets seeks to inspire long-term support from local citizens for sites on Main Street. Each local partner is receiving an initial grant of $20,000 to increase public awareness of the importance of these historic places and build grassroots support for their Main Street district. The public will decide which historic sites will receive a share of $2 million in preservation funding by voting for their favorite main streets through October 26 at VoteYourMainStreet.org, hosted by media partner National Geographic. Winners will be announced on October 29.

Partners in Preservation: Main Streets Open House Weekend

Roslindale Village Main Street will host an Open House Weekend event on October 20th for the public, highlighting the importance of Main Street preservation efforts in Boston. Roslindale Village Main Street is one of twenty diverse and historic Main Street districts across the country participating in the Partners in Preservation: Main Streets Open House Weekend.

As part of Roslindale Village Main Street's Open House Weekend, residents and guests of Boston will not only learn about this important accessibility project, but attendees will also enjoy Roslindale Open Studios that same weekend (<https://roslindaleopenstudios.org/>). The Roslindale Congregational Church, UCC is one of the group sites and will showcase 10 artists, live music, and the RCC Café.

Open House Weekend activities in Roslindale Village Main Street are one of many local events taking place nationwide on October 20th and 21st.

2018 VW Tiguan 2.0T SE 4Motion

Since its multi-vehicle diesel problems, Volkswagen has redesigned and repowered their vehicles with powerful and efficient gas engines. The 2018 Tiguan has all of that and more. It is a really comfortable and good looking mid-size SUV with third row seating available in the 4Motion model. The one engine is a 2.0 liter, turbo-charged 184 horsepower via an 8-speed automatic (not a CVT). I do like the idea of a multi-speed transmission versus the CVT transmission, even though the CVTs have improved. The 4Motion is a permanent all-wheel-drive system. I did turn the steering wheel all the way, each way, very slowly and did not feel any tire binding.

VW has redesigned this and other models to attract new buyers and I have to say, the style of all of these vehicles is very modern. Open the hood and yes, there is room for easy service – nothing is jammed into a small engine compartment.

The Tiguan has all the style and comfort an owner would want. The dash layout, radio and heat controls are all in reach. The push-to-start feature in my opinion, is great and we will see it in the majority of vehicles in the next two years. The Tiguan is available in either FWD or AWD, like our test car. The base FWD starts out at $24,595 (destination fee: $900). The top-of-the-line SEL Premium 4Motion is $37,550.

Our test SE 4Motion's base price is $31,775. Optional equipment included the panorama roof for $1,200 and Habanero orange metallic paint for $295. The heated seats and steering hub controls are standard in this model. EPA: 21 city, 27 highway MPG. The bottom line: I like what VW has done in a short time to turn the company around.

Fiandaca said that currently, cyclists are allowed on sidewalks.

"We do encourage them to utilize the bike lanes to create a low-stress network and reduce conflicts with pedestrians," she said.

The question of clarification between these motorized scooters and mopeds and motorized wheelchairs became an issue during the hearing. Osgood also reminded the council that under current state law, E Scooters are classified as motorized scooters and would require things like brake lights, turn signals, have to operate between sunrise and sunset, and would require helmets.

"These are things which are obviously done in the name of safety and if the vehicle types do not meet Massachusetts State Law, they would not be something we would be able to permit on our roads," he said.

Director of Active Transportation Stefanie Seskin said motorized scooters and mopeds are not allowed on sidewalks, but mobility aide devices are. Regardless, councilors and officials agreed that E Scooters would not be allowed on sidewalks.

Mayor's Office of Persons with Disabilities Commissioner Kristen McCosh said that the current speed limit for motorized wheelchairs or mobility aide devices is 7 miles per hour. She said she is concerned with both the bicycles and the scooters, as they can block sidewalks for disabled persons who cannot move them out of the way. Fiandaca said the speed limit she foresees for such scooters would be far lower than the car and vehicle speed limits.

Osgood said penalties, tickets, vehicle impounding and enforcement are all still being worked out. He said he hopes to have the framework done during the winter.

Government Relations Manager for the E Scooter company "Bird" Hannah Smith said the company utilizes what it calls a Bird Watcher Program, in which people patrol streets and would work with the BTD to make sure the scooters are not impinging on public ways. She said they also provide revenue sharing with cities it works with and, for a city like Santa Monica, keeping in mind that the fleet size can change, it provides hundreds of thousands of dollars a year that can be utilized for shared street infrastructure.

Brighton resident Olivia Richard and member of Mass Adapt, a disability advocacy group, said she has negative feelings about the scooters, to say the least.

"No one is a fan of this technology in my community," she said. "It's another piece of technology that we are getting left behind on. I can't use it; my friends can't use it, what's the point? It's like Uber and Lyft, where we had to bully them after the fact into providing minimal service. I got to see these Bird and Lime Scooters in live action when I went to Denver, and rider behavior is different than what you think you can ordinance and legislate. I saw people riding it everywhere and anywhere, and I saw very little helmet usage."

Director of Livable Streets Alliance Stacy Thompson said that these transportation technologies can be beneficial, but she does have some worries.

"One of the first things to consider is what is the appropriate role and possible burden on municipalities as we continue to partner with more companies like this," she said. "Companies rely on the use of public space, specifically our streets. Proactively putting in regulation to ensure our cities are not on the hook for dealing with complaints, broken devices and other unforeseen issues is really important... I would say that this has happened to a certain extent, in terms of Ant Bikes being thrown down. We know we can have undue burdens."

Thompson said that the city should be considering regulating the size of each fleet with a cap based on need. She said also that the city needs to consider making sure that options are available to residents in every neighborhood and not just to a select few.

At 45, he now is achieving a trifecta in his career. For the first time since he premiered on Broadway in "Jesus Christ Superstar," he is returning to the stage in the RTW production of "A Chorus Line," which runs from October 26 through November 4.

Terranova is also this season taking over the reins of RTW from Phinney, who is retiring from the company she started 37 years ago. He now has earned the title of Executive Artistic and Education Director. Over the course of his career, he has taken the time to produce, direct and teach the craft to which he has devoted his life.

"For 17 years, I have been on this side of the table," said Terranova. "I have always wanted to do 'A Chorus Line.' In all these years, it has never been done on this stage. I feel like performing it with the original choreography was essential, especially for the iconic moments, such as, 'I Hope I Get It.'"

He noted that "A Chorus Line" won a Pulitzer Prize in 1976 for drama. It also won nine Tony Awards.

Serendipity played a factor in this decision as well.

"Pam Scheiber, who works with Riverside, was a first replacement in the Broadway production and was a dance captain," Terranova said. "So when I told her that I wanted to do it, I told her I really wanted to have her direct it."

In addition, Terranova was able to procure the costumes from the original Broadway show.

"My heart is really in this production," he said. "I actually auditioned and got the role of Paul. I have a four-page monologue. Who does that in theater, especially nowadays?"

Another factor influencing his decision to return to the stage was the passing of his father on March 15.

"My dad had given a benefit performance for the theater in February," Terranova said. "This project came about at a time in my life when I really thought, 'Life is short.' I am doing this for him."

"His dad had been such a big part of the theater," Phinney said. "All three of his children have been involved. And P.J. was my first student."

Phinney started the theater in her backyard on River Street, hence the name.

"I was a music teacher then, but when the school year ended, the kids were begging me that they needed a place to go to continue," she said. "Mother Brook is right in my backyard. So I held the theater in the yard, down by the riverside."

"I knew early on that he had a special talent," she continued.

"I remember when he strutted up to me, stuck out his hand, shook it firmly, and said, 'Hello, Mrs. Phinney. My name is P.J. Terranova, and I'm very pleased to meet you.' He had pizzazz."

After graduating from Boston Latin School in 1990, Terranova studied acting at Emerson College, where he was also a member of The Emerson Dance Company. "I took ballet and vocal lessons on the side," he said. "I began teaching young students here when I graduated, and then I got the call on December 1, 1994."

His training prepared Terranova for the role of a lifetime, joining the cast of "Jesus Christ Superstar" as King Herod.

"I toured all over the country and Canada," he said. "The greatest part was touring alongside Carl Anderson and Ted Neeley, who played Jesus and Judas, respectively, in the film and stage versions."

"My proudest moment was watching P.J. go out to deliver his first lines," said Phinney, her face radiant. "I was sitting in the wings between Jesus and Judas."

Terranova later toured with other musicals, working with the legendary Eartha Kitt and Mickey Rooney in "The Wizard of Oz" and with Maurice Hines in "Guys and Dolls"

In addition, he has worked with the likes of Kelly Clarkson, Patti Labelle and, his idol, Jennifer Holliday, who starred in "Dreamgirls."

After this success, Terranova returned to his roots to teach at RTW, later producing shows and becoming artistic director as well as teaching at the school.

Over the course of the past year, Phinney and Terranova have made significant cosmetic improvements to the historic building, which was once French's Opera House. It survived two fires over the course of its history, in 1915 and 1983. The facelift was part of the ultimate goal of the pair for the past five years – to proclaim Fairmount Avenue as the "Avenue of the Arts." Phinney and Terranova currently are working with the City and community groups to bring this dream to life.

"You have the Fairmount Grille here at one end, which has music and art at the restaurant," Phinney said. "You have Riverside as the anchor. There are exciting things gong on with The Switch, Antonio's Bacaro and the Everett Square Theater. We have a great arts community here."

Terranova also is working on grooming the next generation of stars.

"At Riverside, we are not only teaching these kids acting and vocal lessons," he said. "I am teaching them what it takes to get a role. I never got that guidance in school. I am showing them how to present themselves as soon as they walk into an interview."

Phinney recently was honored with a lifetime achievement award from EACT, the Eastern Massachusetts Association of Community Theatres, for her contributions to both RTW and the field of musical theatre.

"It was a total surprise to Marietta," said Terranova. "I told her to come to the awards night with me, not knowing that she was being honored."

"When they started reading the biography, I wanted to get up and say, 'Hey, that's my life!,'" she said with a laugh. "Then I said, 'Well, I have to meet this woman. Next thing you know, they called my name, and so many of my friends and students were there. It was an honor.'"

Reflecting on her tenure at the theater as Terranova looked forward, Phinney said she keeps a pair of rose-colored glasses on her dresser.

"People may think I view the world with rose-colored glasses, because I look at the positive," she said. "But when I look at what we have done at Riverside, we have created roots here. We are a family. Some of our students have gotten married. Our motto here is, 'Only those who see the invisible can do the impossible.'"

Social Security Announces 2.8 Percent Benefit Increase for 2019

Social Security and Supplemental Security Income (SSI) benefits for more than 67 million Americans will increase 2.8 percent in 2019, the Social Security Administration announced today.

The 2.8 percent cost-of-living adjustment (COLA) will begin with benefits payable to more than 62 million Social Security beneficiaries in January 2019. Increased payments to more than 8 million SSI beneficiaries will begin on December 31, 2018. (Note: some people receive both Social Security and SSI benefits). The Social Security Act ties the annual COLA to the increase in the Consumer Price Index as determined by the Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Obituary Policy

The Bulletin Newspapers and The Boston People's Voice publishes obituaries from information supplied by funeral homes. Relatives and friends also may supplement information by e-mailing to news@bulletinnewspapers.com by Monday at 1 p.m. Photos also will be accepted.

Some other adjustments that take effect in January of each year are based on the increase in average wages. Based on that increase, the maximum amount of earnings subject to the Social Security tax (taxable maximum) will increase to $132,900 from $128,400.

Social Security and SSI beneficiaries are normally notified by mail in early December about their new benefit amount. This year, for the first time, most people who receive Social Security payments will be able to view their COLA notice online through their my Social Security account. People may create or access their my Social Security account online at www.socialsecurity.gov/myaccount.

Information about Medicare changes for 2019, when announced, will be available at www.medicare.gov. For Social Security beneficiaries receiving Medicare, Social Security will not be able to compute their new benefit amount until after the Medicare premium amounts for 2019 are announced. Final 2019 benefit amounts will be communicated to beneficiaries in December through the mailed COLA notice and my Social Security's Message Center.

The Social Security Act provides for how the COLA is calculated. To read more, please visit www.socialsecurity.gov/cola ervation Act (CPA). In November 2016, Boston voters approved the Community Preservation Act (CPA) by voting “yes” on Ballot Question 5. The city of Boston finances the CPA fund in part by a 1% property tax-based surcharge on residential and business property tax bills, which began in July of last year. This revenue funds initiatives around Boston, which include affordable housing, historic preservation, open space, and public recreation. A CPA group met with community members from Hyde Park over the summer to discuss possible projects.

Community member Nathaniel Thomas was inspired to submit a plan to upgrade Moynihan Playground after learning that many parents take their children to playgrounds in neighboring communities, such as Milton. Parents have commented that there are more items for their kids to play with at other playgrounds, and Moynihan playground is not compliant with today’s playground standards.

“The initial plan was to submit a CPA application to add play-value. Prior to submitting the application, DCR decided it was best to further evaluate. DCR staff and I then conducted a site visit with Councilor McCarthy’s office on the 11th to confirm the new play area. The area agreed to preserve trees and is mostly flat. The new area is intended to be more interactive and is planned to include a net climber and hill-slide,” explained Thomas. “DCR and city staff are now committed and collaborating for the play area. Next steps are to finalize DCR’s plans for a design to provide a more comprehensive application during the next CPA round.”

The community group applauded Thomas for taking action to make a positive change within the neighborhood. “This proves that one person can make such a big difference in our community,” Kimm stated.

Stephen Maguire, the Community Liaison from Councilor Tim McCarthy’s office, was present at the meeting. Maguire stated that Councilor McCarthy has spoken out against the Sprague St. project, and that he has concerns about the developers not listening to the concerns of neighbors. Many community members agreed and are pleased with this news. “We need developments that are more family focused in Hyde Park,” remarked Kimm.

Officer Broderick read the police report, which covered incidents from August 1st to October. Neighbors were concerned with the multiple reports of domestic assault and battery. There were also a few reported incidents of packages being stolen from porches.

Kimm reminded attendees of the upcoming “Keep Hyde Park Beautiful” events, including a Costume Cleanup and Planting Day on Nov. 2, Planting Winter Greens in Hyde Park Main Street Planters on Nov. 11, and a Wreath Distribution on Nov. 24. For more information on upcoming Keep Hyde Park Beautiful events, visit www.KeepHydeParkBeautiful.org/events.html.

ANNUAL MEETING - On Thursday, October 18, Boston Globe advice columnist Meredith Goldstein will talk about her book, Can't Help Myself: Lessons and Confessions from a Modern Advice Columnist. The best-selling book is a disarmingly honest memoir about giving advice when you're not sure what you're doing yourself. For over nine years Meredith has provided guidance and sympathy to many people through her Love Letters column in the Globe.

Can't Help Myself is the extraordinary (and often hilarious) story of a single woman navigating her mercurial love life, and a moving and poignant portrait of an amazing community of big-hearted, love-seeking allies. While Meredith gives advice to readers, they in turn provide her with insights that enrich her life. The program will run between 6 and 8 PM on Thursday, October 18, at the West Roxbury Branch Library on Centre Street. The meet-and-greet session begins at 6 and the presentation starts at 6:30. The event is free and open to the public and refreshments will be served. For more information please call (617) 469-0044.

For the past four decades, Mustard's Retreat has been entertaining audiences with their special brand of folk music. strumentalists (guitar, electric bass, dulcimer, mandolin, harmonica, and penny whistle), the trio's large repertoire draws on the dual influences of the folk revival of the '60s and the explosive singer-songwriter movement. In addition to her versatile, elegant vocal style, she plays soothing classical guitar music at the bedside for people at the end of life and runs a palliative care program in a retirement village. Sherrin Woods continued from page 1

Volunteers from the neighborhood and local organizations all pitched in to make Sherrin Woods a more welcoming place for residents.

trailheads (signs leading into the trails), remark the trails and bring back the wetlands in the area.

The cleanup is progressing slowly but steadily as the groups keep coming on the site to make it shovel-ready.

“Today we have volunteers from the Charles River Watershed Association,” he said. “We have some area residents and we also have the American Physical Therapy Association.”

Sutton said regardless of the weather, many brave souls had the moxie to make the cleanup happen.

“I’m really impressed that they came out to join us, we rely so heavily on volunteers and this makes all the difference,” he said. “We’re working outside what was our construction contract area, and this is really going to advance us quite a bit as far as recreation work. So the area we’re working on today, we’re cleaning up trash, removing construction debris and we’re raking it out so it can be seeded. We’re hoping to finish that this month.”

Sutton said they’re in the tail end of the season, but they might be holding another cleanup at the Allendale Woods in West Roxbury this coming weekend.

West Roxbury resident Jennifer Bottomley and Jamaica Plain resident Colleen O’Brien said they came out to help raise awareness of the need to volunteer and as part of the Physical Therapy Association’s volunteer program for Physical Therapy month.

“It’s our PT day of service, and we have a few physical therapists here giving back,” O’Brien said. “You’re definitely getting your workout and staying active.”

Bottomley said even though the weather wasn’t really cooperative, it was still a great looking park for the city.

Resident and member of

Keep Hyde Park Beautiful Cathy Horn said they were helping to restore the natural balance of the area through removal and restoration.

“We’re helping to do the renovations here and the big part of it is not just the new things they’re building, but it’s also taking out all the dead stuff and old stuff so new growth can happen,” she said. “Right now we’re chopping up all these invasive trees they cut down and when you cut them into good lengths they can decompose and help fertilize the new growth.”

Resident and Southwest Boston CDC member Pat Alvarez said it was her first time in the Sherrin Woods and she was amazed with the area.

“I didn’t know it existed, but I’m a fanatic about keeping things neat and clean,” she said.

to protect out-of-state investors, right?

Although feeling a tad of guilt at betraying the bank that has been my stalwart rock ever since an aging, compassionate Celia Yoffe marched my wife and me down to her local bank to procure a mortgage for us some 44 years ago (when no other bank would accommodate us), I still felt comfortable about doing business from a distance.

The on-line bank was connected to my credit card company, which has served us well over the decades, no matter what the problem was. The assumption was made that the on-line banking account would do the same.

Au contraire. When time to extricate the funds——fortunately not for a sudden financial problem——the extraction became long and arduous. All sorts of barriers were raised seemingly to thwart the transfer of funds to a brick-and-mortar financial institution in our neighborhood over a procrastinated three-week period.

When informed of our tribulations, our local banking people seemed to give me an “I told you so” look, and right they were.

On-line banking may work for a lot of people, but as for me, I don’t think so.

“Caveat emptor” is a well-known adage for buyers; there has to be a Latin noun for “investor” to follow the Latin “caveat” or perhaps “investor” did not exist in Caesar’s time. In any event, an ancillary intention as a result of our whole banking hassle is now to keep local people employed.

and I chose to raise our sons here because we believed that this neighborhood, where she and I grew up, was the best place to buy a home and raise two boys. Readville, however, is no longer a secret. We have tracks of land unlike anywhere in the City of Boston, land that is becoming harder and harder to come by. Industrial development is being pushed to the far corners of the City as residential building continues to flourish. This land is prime property. Thus, I will continue to work to do what is best for my neighborhood; I will continue to focus on our needs and concerns; and I will always be a steward of a fair and transparent process.

I have fulfilled my duty as steward of the City of Boston's long and arduous process regarding the Sprague Street Development. I've met with the development team on several occasions in an effort to mediate constituent concerns, opinions and suggestions; I've listened and responded to hundreds of voices – both for and against. During this process, I have been under great pressure to make a statement regarding where I stand on this project. I always felt grandstanding or making a premature decision during the process for headlines is not professional and doesn't serve my neighborhood. My role is to provide an opportunity for voices to be heard, on both sides of an issue. I refused to weigh in because I believe that we all should have our opportunity to make our case. As a Readville resident, this project would affect my family as much as anyone reading this today. But after meeting on October 1, it is clear to me that the development tram has failed to make a case to Readville and our Dedham neighbors that this plan would benefit our community. Therefore I will not be supporting this project as it was presented.

Sincerely,
Timothy P. McCarthy
City Councilor, District 5
