Subcommittees formed to address air traffic noise in Boston

Boston South Fair Skies (BSFS) met on Nov. 15 to share re-advocacy efforts and potential solutions on addressing the increasing air traffic noise burdening the West Roxbury, Roslindale and Hyde

“We want to talk about potential solutions that have already been put forth,” Sandak said. “I want us to really roll up our sleeves and start talking about what we can do.”

Trillium Brewing to weather winter at the Roslindale Substation

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Roslindale Village Main Streets and Trillium Brewing announced last week they are partnering to bring a beer garden to the Roslindale Substation for the duration of the winter.

While not the permanent tenant RVMS had been hoping for – Dorchester restaurateur Chris Douglass announced in September that he could not continue plans to open a restaurant there – RVMS Executive Director Alia Hamada Forest said the beer garden will be a welcome addition to the Square.

with an indoor version of that,” she said. “They’re doing a bit of work in the substation to make it a little more accessible, but it’s going to be a kid-friendly, family-friendly venue. It will be a nice, warm place to go in the winter, and it definitely complements the businesses and the beer seller very well.”

The occupation of the space marks at least the light at the end of the tunnel for RVMS’ 16-year effort to redevelop the long-vacant main floor of the Substation. The Substation underwent a $4.8 million renovation conceived and undertaken by RVMS, Historic Boston Inc., and Peregrine Group, LLC of

Interfaith Service brings diverse community together

On Friday, Nov. 17, the Hyde Park Interfaith Thanksgiving Service was hosted by the Family Life Fellowship Church.

It was joined by a number of other Hyde Park Churches including Most Precious Blood (MPB), St.

Anne’s, St. Elizabeth’s, the Fellowship Christian Church, the Hyde Park Presbyterian Church, and the New Hope Baptist Church.

Over 100 people filled almost all of the seats for the third annual event – when they weren’t standing or dancing in praise.

After starting the service off with a sincere and Churchlike welcome and invocation from host Pastor G. Agabus Lartey – and followed by a responsive reading by Father Madi Charles (of MPB and St. Anne’s) – Associate Pastor Karen Ricketts took the pulpit with her “Praise Team” split evenly on either side of her

City talks problems for rapid transit on the Fairmount Line

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Fairmount Line, which runs from Readville in Hyde Park to South Station Downtown, has been the subject of some controversy over the last few years in terms of service problems and equity issues.

It’s had regular delays, trains pulled for use on other lines and severe delays in station construction. Boston elected officials, state legislators, transportation advocates and equality advocates have criticized the MBTA for years due to its apparent lack of urgency on the creation of the Fairmount Line in general and its apparent lack of priority on the line’s effectiveness as well.

State Rep. Evandro Carvalho of Dorchester first presented Bill H.2723-An Act Establishing a Rapid Transportation Pilot for the Fairmount Corridor back in January, and last week the bill was endorsed by the Boston City Council as part of an initiative from advocates for the Fairmount Line Advocacy Week last

First responders shoot hoops for cancer research

Boston Firefighters and police officers faced off on Sunday during the Fast Attack Basketball Tournament to raise money for Dana Farber.

Staff Reporter

Firefighter Jorge Diaz has felt the impacts of cancer in his family firsthand, and after helping his father to survive lung cancer for almost four years now, he felt he needed to give back to the community and help others dealing with the disease.

On Sunday, his first Fast Attack Basketball Tournament brought together firefighters and police from the city as well as central Massachusetts to help raise awareness for cancer among firefighters and raise funds for Dana Farber.

“So far so good, we ended up getting four teams, with the Worcester Fire Department, we have the MassPort Fire Department, the Boston Fire Department and the Boston Police Department that stepped up,” he said.

Diaz said his own personal experience with the Dana Farber Hospital motivated him to organize the event at the Archdale Community Center in Roslindale. Cancer diagnosis among firefighters is extremely common, and while firefighters generally join up aware of the risks commonly associated with the job, many are not aware of the risks of cancer from the chemicals released during a building fire.

Diaz said it was a long road to get the tournament together, but he’s happy it finally came together as it did.

“It’s finally here and going well so far,” he said. “I’ve been working on this since the beginning of the summer. It’s been six months I’ve been working on it, calling people and chasing people down. I’ve got a few guys talking to the guys about cancer awareness and health regimens, it was also a struggle to get the venue but I got it.”

Diaz said the time he spent getting the event together told him it’s never too early to start organizing.

“For next year, I’m probably going to start right after this, at least letting teams know hey next year it’s coming,” he said.

Dr. Michael Hamrock, a former primary care physician for Boston firefighters, also came out to the event to help raise awareness of measures firefighters and first responders can take to help prevent cancer while covering a fire. He said while firefighters have a much higher risk, as they are exposed to more chemicals burning through closer proximity, they are not the only ones near the fire when it happens. Police traffic details and EMS personnel taking care of potential victims can also be exposed, and it’s important they are also educated as to precautions against cancer.

“I was a former Boston Firefighter, but now I’m a primary care physician at the St. Elizabeth’s Medical Center, so I treat a lot of Boston Firefighters now, and unfortunately, there’s been a predominance of cancer diagnosis for Boston Firefighters,” he said. “Every three weeks, a Boston Firefighter gets diagnosed with cancer, so events like this to raise awareness of cancer with firefighters and also raise funds for cancer research are extremely important.”

Hamrock said any fire has large amounts of dangerous chemicals that get everywhere, and firefighters need to take as many precautions as possible.

“We’re really trying to raise awareness and make sure firefighters wear their masks on a fire ground, wear their hoods, use a wet napkin, taking a shower afterwards, eating healthy, getting exercise, comprehensive physicals and anything related to immune boosting,” he said. “You know, during a typical house fire, like the one we saw last night in Roslindale, contains cancer-causing chemicals. So the flame retardants, when they combust,

Moving into an affordable unit can take years, despite law

Richard Heath
Staff Reporter

In the past five years, 844 units of housing in seven developments between Montebello Road and The Casey Arborway have been approved; one is completed and two are under construction.

One hundred and forty of those units are designated as affordable under the city's Inclusionary Development Policy. But moving families into those affordable units is a long process that depends on when the developers actually start building; and this could take years.

When the Boston Planning and Development Agency (BPDA) approves a project through its Article 80 Process for a development, an agreement is made that requires the developers to enter into an Affordable Rental Housing Agreement with the BPDA for the required number of affordable units. Then they must submit an Affordable Fair Housing and Marketing Selection Plan with the Boston Fair Housing Commission.

There is no deadline on when that Affordable Marketing Plan has to be submitted. Alexis Buckley is the Affirmative Marketing Specialist with the Office of Fair Housing.

"It's the developers' responsibility to get this process moving," she said. "These standard forms must be completed and we have 120 days to review and approve these plans."

"We would typically see about 10 plans a year," Buckley said. "We have 26 in review currently and have approved 19 within the last few months. I review and have recently received assistance from a DND staff person and two Fair Housing interns."

Once the plan is approved the developer begins the lottery process by which applicants can apply for the affordable units in their building.

MetroMark Apartments at 3593 Washington St. on the edge of Forest Hills was approved by the BPDA on Dec. 17, 2013.

On Jan. 21, 2016 The BrennAn Group and Corcoran Companies the joint developers, contracted with Stockard, Englert and Brigham (SEB LLC) of Needham to administer the lottery for the required 40 apartments with income levels of between 50 percent and 70 percent area media income (that is $39,000 to $55,000 respectively for a two person household). The deadline to submit applications was March 9, 2016.

"The developer needs an approved plan," Buckley said. "But they have to submit and we approve what we call Compliance I which includes rents, prices, locations of applications and deadlines."

"Fair Housing reviews and approves lists of applicants," she said. "Hard marketing cannot begin until the development is within six months of the target certificate of occupancy."

"The developers or their agent is responsible for processing applicants after the lottery has been concluded and the sorting and ranking has been approved by Fair Housing. Once the developer certifies that an applicant is eligible, it's confirmed and verified by BPDA or DND."

MetroMark Apartments is a 283-unit complex of four buildings. Lease up began in earnest in the spring of 2017. "We're 75 percent leased up," said John Brennan in May 2017. "Two hundred and ten units have been leased. Our demographic is the 25 - 35 year old age group."

"There's no requirement that market rate and affordable units must be leased concurrently," said Buckley.

Brennan -Corcoran did not respond to a query about how many of the 40 affordable units had been leased.

Tim Davis is the BPDA Housing Policy Manager and his office oversees compliance of the affordable agreement. According to Davis thirty six affordable units have been leased to date at MetroMark.

"The developers or their property manager must submit an annual re-certification of the affordable units," Davis said. "The affordable units cannot be leased out to the market rate. We have a fifty year compliance relationship with the developer."

Affordable Marketing Plans have not been received for 3521-3529 Washington St. (the Flanagan and Seaton site) approved by the BPDA in November 2014. Originally developed by SSG and New Boston Ventures of one hundred thirty two units; 88 rental and 44 condominiums in row houses. Also included is a four-story, self storage building currently under construction by SSG.

Unanticipated and expensive soil contamination costs have delayed the project and New Boston Ventures has backed out of the 88-unit component (called Lot 1).

David Williams is Director of Development for SSG which is taking on a partner.

"We have been involved with a very expensive environmental clean up on the site," he said. "The amount of time that has taken has delayed both residential parts of the project but they are now moving forward."

"The sale of Lot 1," Davis said, "is not finalized yet but it is our intention to joint venture the front portion to Back Bay Development and we will still be involved. New Boston Ventures has nothing to do with this. It is our intention to live up to our commitment on the affordable units that we committed to during our approvals which is 12 units in the front part of the property. New Boston Ventures is building 44 units [at Burnett Street] and are responsible for seven affordable."

The battleground for affordable housing in Jamaica Plain was 3200 Washington St. approved by the BPDA in August 2015 with 12 affordable units. This has also been delayed.

A year after approval, developers Dan Mangiocotta and Paul Iantosca sold the development for $6.2 million to Berkeley Investments. It has not yet submitted an Affordable Fair Housing Marketing Plan.

"The affordable agreement goes with the sale," said Davis.

Esther Chung Byun is project manager for Berkeley Investments.

"Berkeley assumed the affordable housing requirements associated with the 3200 development," she said. "Nine rental and three condo units, and this was formalized in a Cooperative Agreement that was executed with the BPDA in Dec 2016 as a requisite part of receiving the building permit. The unit selection was also reviewed and approved." "We are aware of the lottery process," said Byun, "including the tenant selection plan and have planned towards submitting and implementing those plans closer to lease up or occupancy date."

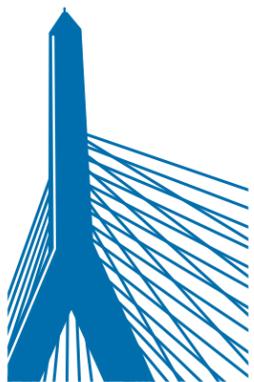

Construction began on 3200 Washington Street in August 2017.

Advocates rally against new fossil fuel infrastructure

Twenty-six Massachusetts residents joined by approximately 300 supporters launched a sit-in around noon on Thursday in the office of Massachusetts Gov. Charlie Baker to advocate for no new fossil fuel infrastructure in the state. The individuals, affiliated with 350 Mass Action and various faith groups, refused to leave until Baker signed an executive order that effectively stops the building of new fossil fuel infrastructure projects in Massachusetts.

Capodilupos Establish College Scholarship

Diane ('68) and Peter Capodilupo ('67), graduates of Stonehill College, have established an endowed scholarship to benefit Stonehill students from West Roxbury, Roslindale, Dedham and Hyde Park.

The scholarship was awarded for the first time this fall to Emily O'Connor ('20), an accounting major from Dedham.

"Stonehill has been an important part of our lives for over a half-century," said Diane Capodilupo. "The College set us up for success after graduation, both as professionals and in our community. We are proud to pay-it-forward by helping local students access the same world-class education that helped us achieve our goals."

"The Capodilupos have been active alumni and benefactors for many years," said Doug Smith, Associate Vice President for Advancement at Stonehill College. "Their gift to the College will greatly benefit students for years to come, allowing individuals who might not otherwise be able to afford tuition the opportunity to attend Stonehill."

Stonehill is a selective Catholic college located near Boston on a beautiful 384-acre campus in Easton, Mass. With a student-faculty ratio of 12:1, the College engages over 2,500 students in 80+ rigorous academic programs in the liberal arts, sciences, and pre-professional fields. The Stonehill community helps students to develop the knowledge, skills, and character to meet their professional goals and to live lives of purpose and integrity.

Thanksgiving for kicks

"I'm on the top of the world looking 'down on creation. . ."

Karen Carpenter

To accomplish the harmony in the above song, the popular belief is that Karen Carpenter had to harmonize with herself several times via tapes to record the inimitable chorus in this hit song.

Now I'm not one much for heights. Early on I realize that the hubris was missing for me to consider being a firefighter, window washer, lumberjack, or ironworker. Torture for me several years ago was dining at the Top of the Hub Restaurant.

But West Roxbury's elevated Millennium Park, admittedly not the top of the world, is different. It offers a spectacular view of our city.

Sited on the former old LaGrange Street landfill, the park, spearheaded by the late Mayor Menino and activist Alice Hennessey, presents the opportunity for an unobstructed view from the heightened elliptical walkway around the perimeter of soccer fields. No fear of falling off awaits those who meander on top of mountains of trash, covered by Big Dig dirt, industrial membranes, loom, special plantings, and grass.

A brisk walk on a cool autumn weekday enables tens of miles of observation, much of it natural. While the view from many city parks encompasses nearby triple-deckers, the one from the top of Millennium could be in Berkshire County if one did not know better.

Teeming on weekends with children from many neighborhoods in the city, the park has relieved the crowding on Roslindale and West Roxbury playgrounds; the level of soccer in the city's high schools is undoubtedly improving because of the feeder Parkway Youth Soccer program offering thousands of kids the chance to improve their kicking.

A second benefit is that autumn and spring soccer no longer are elbowing softball and baseball activities at nearby open field. Softball and baseball players do not have to worry about their long drives to right center caroming off a soccer player's head.

On weekdays devoid of youth activities, ambulating around the top orbit at Millennium Park offers the time to clear one's brain, think, meditate, pray, or recite the Rosary. The ellipse gives seniors the opportunity for exercise and parents the place to push strollers. It gives exercisers the opportunity to jog and dog-walkers the site to take Fido out for a walk (but, alas, beware of all the unleashed dogs romping around).

Sixty Pilgrims and 92 Wampanoags sat around the first Thanksgiving table 396 years ago. No matter how many gather at your table on Thursday (and, hopefully, not for three days as characterized the first Thanksgiving), give thanks to your Maker for myriad blessings, among which should be that Menino arranged for and Hennessey implemented a wonderful park on top of what was once an unsightly dump.

CALL GOVERNOR ON RENEWABLE ENERGY

To the Editor:

I live a stone's throw from the Spectra/AIM WR Lateral fracked methane Metering and Regulating station that went into operation last January at Grove and Center streets. First, I'd like to acknowledge that, though certainly an eyesore in a residential neighborhood, it's not nearly as imposing or ugly as I thought it would be. Still, those buildings hide a very real risk of catastrophic incineration from its super high-pressure gas lines if ever, by any chance, there were a valve malfunction or "welding anomaly." It's well-documented those routinely cause accidents in pipelines all around the country, including a Keystone one in April 2016, which just last Thursday again experienced a 210,000 gallon rupture of dirty tar sands oil into the ground near Amherst, S.D. They discovered it at 5:30 a.m., got it shut down in 15 minutes and reported it to the govt at 10:30 a.m. The computers that manage safety for our WRL M&R station are monitored out of Texas.

In August of this year, the agency that is meant to protect our community from pipeline failures, PHMSA: the Pipeline and Hazardous Materials Safety Administration was called to task by the US Govt Accountability office for the way it prioritizes safety inspections. PHMSA acknowledges this reality and states they rely on self-reporting by the industry and that they are just too understaffed to successfully fully monitor the vast mileage of pipelines under their care. In October 2016, the Office of Inspector General of the US Dept. of Transportation – out of which PHMSA operates – released an Audit entitled: "INSUFFICIENT GUIDANCE, OVERSIGHT, AND COORDINATION HINDER PHMSA'S FULL IMPLEMENTATION OF MANDATES AND RECOMMENDATIONS." This doesn't leave me feeling too safe. Does anyone know if the mandated "emergency procedures" plan for the WRL has yet to be filed?

On that same Thursday last week, over 300 Massachusetts residents came to the office of Gov. Baker, and 25 received summons to Court (including me) for refusing to leave as part of a Stand-In campaign that began last January, asking the governor to refuse all NEW gas pipeline infrastructure projects in Massachusetts because, contrary to heavy industry propaganda, they are primarily destined to sell fracked methane ("natural gas") to overseas markets, they will raise, not lower utility prices, risk safety of local communities (like ours), destroy historic forests, and because methane is actually 85 times more impactful to global warming than carbon. That is a recently proven fact. Please call Gov. Baker to say that the future is in Renewable energy only and the "combo platter" (oil, hydro, nuclear & gas) is not a sensible meal for Massachusetts.

City to put Flynn Park on microgrid

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The City of Boston Planning and Development Agency's (BPDA) Economic Development and Industrial Corporation (EDIC) is looking to put the Raymond L. Flynn Marine Industrial Park on a microgrid.

A microgrid is an independent power generation grid that serves a specific area. The EDIC is now making the preliminary steps to start a public-private partnership to create a District Energy/Microgrid Project, which generates heat for a given area, as well as electricity.

Director of Energy Policy and Programs, City of Boston, Office of the Mayor, Environment, Energy & Open Space Bradford Swing said the proposal for any such public-private partnership – even for something completely in the bounds of the city – has to go through the state legislature in the form of a home-rule petition, on which the Boston City Council will most likely vote on in the next meeting next Wednesday.

"This home-rule petition is necessary because we do not have general authority under state law to procure a public-private partnership," Swing said. "By public-private partnership, I mean the alternative delivery structure of a major asset using a private partner."

Swing said the private side of the venture would be temporary and only used for the development of the energy grid and generation portion of the project.

"It's an important tool that we need to develop in order to finance a climate-ready Boston," he said. "This would allow us to qualify an energy services company to service our private partner and provide us with an investment-grade design, a plan to build, and operate and finance a district energy microgrid in the Raymond L. Flynn Marine Park."

Swing said the heat generation portion of the initiative would also help to keep costs down, and the small nature of the microgrid would help use energy more efficiently, since it is not being transferred over great distances as in normal grids.

"District energy microgrids are a proven technology, there are many examples throughout Boston, they are prevalent when you're dealing with a single-owner campus situation, where the district of buildings is owned by a single owner. Maytep is a microgrid of multiple hospitals; Biogen in Cambridge is a microgrid, Harvard University as well. We very highly value the technology, the cost-effectiveness and the greenhouse gas reductions that come with this efficient use of an energy plant that's called a combined heat and power unit. It is an approach towards generating electricity onsite. In this instance, we would use natural gas an input tool to generate electricity and instead of the heat that is usually simply wasted from any electricity generation process, a combined heat and power unit captures that waste heat and creates hot water and chilled water that is piped through thermal energy pipes."

Swing said the separated aspect of the grid would also come in handy for blackouts.

"If there's any kind of incident where the major grid goes down, either a storm like we've seen so may this month or God forbid some kind of national security situation, the onsite electricity generation can continue to flow to those buildings within the district," he said. "They're extremely important to our resilience strategy as we move forward and prepare the city for the known effects of climate change."

He said they have not seen any specific plans for the generators themselves, but said they can be modular and stackable, and would not necessarily have to be in one place.

"There is the need for a specific site for the energy plant, we are not certain where that's going to be," he said. "Basically, we're talking 10 feet by 49 feet; they can be in modules so you could either have like one location where the central energy plant serving and entire district could be but you could also modularize it."

Swing added that because of the contract process and legal aspects of the microgrid, even if the home-rule petition passes quickly, it would be years before they could break ground.

"We have a long road ahead of us where we're not even close to breaking ground," he said. "We would need to create a special purpose vehicle that would be a legal unit within the EDIC that would be that SPV that would legally issue the request for qualifications."

they give off these cancer-causing chemicals that the firefighters ingest them in the mouth, inhale through the lungs and absorb them through the skin. They travel to different organs, create damage in the cells and cause mutations that cause cancer. It's a common cause of cancer among firefighters, unfortunately."

Commissioner Joe Finn said cancer is one of the leading causes of death among his firefighters, and he's always trying to support more efforts to both prevent the disease and raise awareness.

"This is great to raise awareness, raise some of the funds we need and plus, it's getting people engaged, bringing it to another level," he said. "I think half the battle is awareness, not only with our own guys but with the community."

Finn said he's happy to see his firefighters taking up the mantle and getting involved, as he knows it's a hard road to get something like this organized.

"Jorge is unbelievable, he's just an outstanding guy," Finn said. "He's really been a good firefighter and he took on the challenge, was always promoting and pushing it and it's just awesome."

Firefighter Jeff Brewington said he's known Diaz for years and was very happy to play alongside him on the court to help those battling cancer.

"I'm a fireman and Jorge, we play basketball all the time," Brewington said, adding that like so many, he has been personally affected by cancer as well. "My mom, a couple of years ago had a bout with breast cancer, so to me, it's in the plus side. It's a good day for me to get some exercise, be with the guys and support a good cause."

Brewington said the event and Diaz's spirit have been real positive for the firehouse.

"I've known Jorge since he's been on the job, he's a real, real good kid," he said.

Diaz brought much of the community and his own family together. Volunteer Zurianny Franco said when Diaz married, he came into the family and they all banded together around this effort.

"We've been doing Dana Farber walks and then Jorge came into the family and his father has also been affected, so when he mentioned raising funds for Dana Farber, to us it's a charity that's very close to our family and close to hearts," she said. "We're here to support him and Dana Farber as much as we can."

Franco said the event itself has been a great time, and she's happy with the turnout and the outcome.

"It's very interactive, we've got kids involved, wives, sportspeople, all the families, it's a big variety of people who showed up so we're very excited," she said.

Wednesday. The bill calls for 15-minute gaps between trains on the Fairmount Line (which would be known as the Indigo Line if and when it gets the rapid transit designation) and the use of Charlie Cards.

Originally, the MBTA planned to put in either diesel or electric multiple units (DMUs and EMUs respectively) like the Red or Orange Lines to create that rapid transit, but the problem was that the DMUs and EMUs operate at a lower height than the current commuter rail trains that the stations on the line were set up for, and would have required millions in capital investment to facilitate the lowering of the stations. In lieu of that, Carvalho has posited that rapid transit could be accomplished by having each Commuter Rail train carry two to three carriages, increasing each train's acceleration rate between stops.

The MBTA said that was a problem, mainly because the trains were not designed for that and it would limit the availability of replacement trains when problems occur on other lines.

District 5 City Councilor Tim McCarthy said funding for the rapid transit portion of the line is the key, but the MBTA is caught in a supply and demand quandary.

"The resolution supports increasing the frequency of the line. The question that has not been answered - besides cost-is ridership," he said. "Ridership is like the chicken and the egg, does more frequency bring ridership, or does ridership bring frequency? We believe that more would ride if more times were available."

44th Annual William S. Conley Thanksgiving Dinner

On Thanksgiving Day the Exalted Ruler, Richard Disalvo and the Boston Elks #10 invite all senior citizens to the 44th Thanksgiving Dinner at the lodge located at 1 Morrell St., West Roxbury behind the West Roxbury VA Hospital. Doors open at 11 a.m. and dinners will be served at noon. FREE! For Meals to go, get in touch with ETHOS at 617-522-6700.

McCarthy said he recently went down to Philadelphia with several Boston officials to see how Philly does public transit.

"One thing we did learn in Philadelphia was the problem with the commuter rails themselves," he said. "One Carmen Union guy put it the best, he said 'if you're an Uber driver, you get a Camry or a Ford Fusion, you don't get a semi.' That's what the commuter rails are, they're not designed to stop every 300 or 400 yards, or even every one or two miles. They're designed to go miles and miles at a time before stopping. This is something that the MBTA has to take a look at."

McCarthy said the current situation for Hyde Park and residents along the Fairmount Line is not sustainable, and can incentivize residents to take cars instead, increasing traffic all over the city.

"As you know, I've stood in this spot many, many times railing against - that was a little pun, railing against the MBTA, thank you very much," he said. "This ongoing relationship with the MBTA has been tedious, but it is getting better... I've said this before, it just simply costs too much money to get from District 5 to Downtown Boston. They don't run on every 15 minutes, they run every hour and 15, every hour and a half, so if you have to be at work at 9 a.m., you might have to get up and get out at 6:30 in the morning and then hang out in town for an hour before you go to work. A lot of this doesn't make sense."

McCarthy added that the cost of riding the commuter rail from Readville - which is a $2 difference between the Hyde Park Station and Readville - also creates affordability problems for what is meant to be public transit. He said with the additional cost of parking at the station, residents could find it tough to come up with the funds to ride the T.

"I will continue to hound the MBTA regarding the commuter line costs - the thought of paying just under $4,000 to go to work is ridiculous!" he said.

The resulting traffic has a significant impact on the arteries leading to Downtown. From Hyde Park Avenue to Washington Street to the VFW Parkway, there is hardly a corridor that is not currently afflicted with congestion and gridlock during the morning commute.

"Rapid transit from my area is intense, because every community meeting we go to and as a district city councilor, I know one of the biggest concerns we have is traffic," McCarthy said. "Too much traffic can't get through too long to get Downtown and everybody in here knows I usually come in very, very early or I have my community meetings in the morning in my area because if I left my house at 8 a.m. from Readville to get here, I would probably get in at 9:15 frazzled and angry. It's a tough commute, so this is something that we need to support. I urge everybody to sign on and I certainly urge everybody to continue an open dialogue with the MBTA to help them understand what the constituents of Boston, the economic engine of the Commonwealth need from that."

viating flight paths. District 5 City Councilor Tim McCarthy also attended the meeting along with several other city representatives including City Councilor President Michele Wu and Chief of Staff for Matt O'Malley's office, Bill MacGregor. Councilman McCarthy spoke to residents and calmed the angst some residents had of wanting answers on what can and will be done.

"Your calls do matter," McCarthy said. "I hear the airplanes here in Hyde Park. I know that people hear it in Roslindale, Mattapan and in Dorchester and it's very important. My job and other city representatives jobs is to make sure that the drum we are banging here is heard somewhere else, not just in our own zip code."

McCarthy, along with District 4 City Councilor Frank Baker and Katie King, Interim Director of Intergovernmental Relations for Mayor Martin Walsh's office, visited Washington, D.C. on Oct. 3. They had two meetings with two U.S Representatives for Massachusetts 7th and 8th Congressional Districts Mike Capuano and Stephen Lynch.

"We went down there and we had two long meetings with both congressmen," McCarthy said. "The FAA did not want to meet with us, ironically enough, and that's okay. We had a great meeting. And I want you to know that they hear us and they're really pushing to try to make sure that there is some fanning with this."

McCarthy also expressed sentiment on how he believes that this issue is a social justice issue.

"I don't throw the word 'social justice issue' around very often because it's a sacred term that needs to be used when it's justified. I think sometimes we throw it around too much. It needs to be thrown around like a sewer cover, not a dime. And I throw that issue out today. I believe this is a social justice issue," McCarthy exclaimed.

McCarthy expressed that he has read articles in the Hingham Journal that read "hey listen how quiet our skies are." He said that his in-laws have a summer home in Hull and he's noticed the uptick on a Sunday afternoon.

"We've noticed the noise to the point where my wife and I were on the beach and we had to stop our conversations because the planes were flying so low," said McCarthy. "What's the difference between Hull and Hingham?"

The crowd responded in unison, "money." McCarthy then responded, "Right."

After Councilman McCarthy addressed audience members, and before splitting everyone into groups, Alan Wright, member of BSFS, provided everyone with a brief history on the development of the airplane noise. Wright said that part of the issue is due to a change that was made in 2014; the FAA switched to a system called RNAV. Essentially, RNAV is a GPS navigational system that allows more consistency and concentration within landing and takeoff paths.

Since the switch, the FAA has been fielding complaints about airplane noise and its pollutants from all over the country.

Another issue is construction on runways and the use of runway 27. This runway puts airplanes in the direct path to travel through residential neighborhoods. Due to construction on other runways and Logan Airport expanding their international flights, there has been an influx of traffic and the expressed need to use runway 27.

"Even after construction was done on the affected runways, the issue did not go away," Wright said. "It's going to continue to get worse as the economy continues to grow."

MIT also conducted a two-part study in which two conclusions are expected and will be presented before the Massport Board. The request is to have the planes come in slower. When the planes are going slower, the engines are not as loud as when the airplanes are traveling at a faster speed. The second conclusion is that the pilots would be given more discretion in how they stick to the paths. They would be allowed to turn early in their destination direction.

Once Wright wrapped up giving the audience a brief history behind the airplane issue, everyone was broken into groups to discuss how they can be of help with getting this issue addressed. Each group had a subject to focus and build on. The six subjects were facts of the issue, public health, legal research and strategies, political strategy, Grassroots organizing and outreach to neighbors and marketing and communications. Each person was allowed to pick the group they wanted to participate in. Once residents chose their group, they sat down and they discussed solutions and ideas.

Sandak and Mainzer both implored everyone to get involved in this cause. They asked that you join their Facebook group: <https://www.facebook.com/groups/bostonsouthfairskies>, register at www.bostonsouthfairskies.org to stay up to date, talk to your friends and neighbors about the problem, file complaints by calling 617-561-333 or online at <http://www.massport.com/logan-airport/about-and-host-a-house-party> to inform people and engage them in action.

"This is truly becoming an issue about the quality of life," McCarthy said.

KATAYAMA

Sho was born in Dinuba, Calif., on June 13, 1919 to Tomoji and Takeno Katayama. He graduated from Orosi High School in 1937 where he ran track and pole vaulted (with a bamboo pole into a sawdust pit) and played football under coach Pete Biden. He worked on the family farm with his dad and brothers (twin) Yo and Mike. He married Midori (Dora) Mori in Fort Riley, Kan. on Dec. 30, 1942 after he had enlisted in the army. He joined the 442nd Regimental Combat Team, serving in the infantry as a bazooka man. It was an all-Japanese unit that became the most decorated unit in the history of American warfare, years later receiving a congressional gold medal. Sho spoke of walking from the bottom of the boot of Italy up into southern France and later serving in Germany. He was wounded twice and he helped liberate the town of Bruyeres, France, and rescue the Lost Battalion from Texas.

Returning home, he went back to farming but later pursued other careers in mutual fund sales and in the trucking industry. He was an active member of the Lions Club. He was named Man of the Year by the Cutler/Orosi Latin American Club in 1998. He served on the Board of Directors of Orosi Foothill Citrus Association, the Nisei Center, Orosi Chamber of Commerce and is a lifelong member of the VFW. He worked for years as an Orosi Memorial Board Member and volunteered at Bingo for the Community Youth Program. Sho enjoyed his life to the fullest and was constantly on the go. He was an avid hunter and fisherman. He loved going clamming and abalone hunting. He bowled for years in the local league. At one time he had a boat and could water ski on double and single skis. He spent many hours in his vegetable and flower gardens and tending all of his different fruit trees. He loved playing pinocle, gin rummy and poker but his favorite pastime was going to the casino with friends and family, just edging out eating donuts and drinking coffee with his buddies. At age 90, he moved to Boston to live with his daughter's family and made a remarkably smooth transition to the East Coast. Sho was a generous, fun-loving, quick witted and wise man. He laughed a lot. He was a grateful person in his later years, almost daily expressing appreciation for a long, happy and healthy life and especially for his wonderful family and friends.

He passed away at the Brockton VA Hospital on Nov. 12, 2017 after a long bout with a severe case of shingles. He was preceded in death by his parents, his siblings, Yo, Mikio and Fumi, and their spouses, Rosie, Grace and Yuk, and by his wife of 47 years, Dora. He is survived by his daughter, Barbara, her husband, Kevin, and grandchildren, Tana and Kyle, as well as many well-loved nieces and nephews. Services were held Nov. 17 at the Lawler and Crosby Funeral Home in West Roxbury and he was laid to rest in the Smith Mountain Cemetery in Sultana, California on Nov. 21.

Evelyn specialized in pen and ink and created fashion ads for local retailers. She is credited with illustrating the original Chutes and Ladders game box cover. In her later years she designed and sewed high quality flags. Evelyn continued to paint throughout her life and passed on her love of art to her two grandchildren. She is survived by her daughters Jamie Vickers and her husband Daniel of West Roxbury and Karen Lothrop and her husband Jonathan of Dover, her grandchildren Jonathan "Jack" and Hannah Lothrop also of Dover, and her aunt Stasia Chwalek of Chicopee. Miracle Prayer

Dear Heart of Jesus, in the past I have asked You for many favours. This time, I ask you this very special one (mention favour). Take it, dear Heart of Jesus, and place it within Your own broken heart where Your Father sees it. Then, in His merciful eyes, it will become Your favour, not mine. Amen. Say for three days, promise publication and favour will be granted.

The Holiday Market will also feature over 20 visiting vendors, offering everything from French soaps, to art and prints, pottery, locally-made honeys and sauces, jewelry and accessories, children's books and clothes, and more. Vendors will be located inside the Emerald Society Building at 10 Birch St., as well as two vacant storefronts at 22 Birch St. and 756 South St.

Infinity QX30

This week I drove the new 2018 Infinity QX30, a small size luxury SUV in this very crowded and popular market. The first thing I noticed was that the ignition key looks just like my Mercedes key. A closer look at the QX30 and it's virtually a copy of the Mercedes GLA.

This all-wheel-drive SUV is powered by a turbo-charged, 4-cylinder engine via a 7-speed dual-clutch, automatic transmission. The engine is quiet and responsive, with abundant power at any speed. The 7-speed transmission is quick to shift, with multiple driving modes. The suspension absorbs all the bumps over broken pavement.

There is quality workmanship throughout, from the interior to the exterior. There are some familiar interior knobs and switches, right out of the Mercedes' parts bin. The exterior of the QX30 has smooth lines – unlike the long, angular lines of some other SUVs. You can choose either a front-drive or all-wheel-drive version. Our test car was equipped with all the latest safety features.

The base price for a nicely equipped front-wheel-drive starts out at $29,950 (plus $995 destination fee), and goes all the way up to $38,500 before you load it with options. EPA gas mileage: 21/24, highway 30/33, depending on FWD or AWD.

This SUV seats two up front with comfort and kids in the back have ample room. Adults will find the rear seats a bit tight, especially if 5'7" or taller. If the QX30 is too small for you, check out the QX50.

Boston's own Junior Damato, "The Auto Doctor" has agreed to field auto repair questions from Bulletin and Record readers. Please forward your questions to news@bulletinnewspapers.com and we will do our best to get your questions answered.

Immediately, people in the congregation began to move and then dance as tambourines materialized in peoples' hands and increasing numbers of the faithful spilled out into the center aisle moving up and down it in a rhythmic march as Pastor Ricketts' fellow celebrants standing behind her onstage clapped and swayed in place.

After another dance-inducing song prayer by the Fellowship Christian Church's Praise Team, Fr. Ron Coyne (also of MPB and St. Anne's) stepped into the crowd with a microphone to share his own testimony of thanks for all of those who helped to fill the void left by his mother's death 15 years ago before handing the microphone over to anyone who wanted to share.

This Interfaith Service was, in fact, Coyne's idea – something he started when he was stationed in Randolph and then started anew three years ago after he had been assigned to the Blue Hills Collaborative, comprised of MPB, St. Anne's, and Milton's St. Pius X.

The next day, after 4 o'clock Mass at MPB, he shared his thoughts on the prior night, and his idea.

"I am no better than anyone else in this world," Coyne said. "I believe that – and just because I happen to believe a certain thing or speak a certain language or come from a certain country doesn't make me any better in God's eyes – the God that I believe in today – so that's what that's all about, from my point of view."

He went into other aspects of the Interfaith Service, as well.

"For me, I've always been a community person," he said. "I grew up in Roslindale, West Roxbury, so I'm a local boy, so I'm very much into it."

He used Hyde Park's upcoming 150th Anniversary as an example of his hopes for the involvement of local Churches with both that celebration and the community in general.

"I want to be involved in that," Coyne said. "I want the Churches to be. I want to encourage all of the above, because it's not just about the religion; it's about everything that makes Hyde Park what it is, and that's the business community, the law enforcement, the social service agencies. It's all of the above."

Pastor Karen Ricketts, involved with the Interfaith Service since its inception three years ago, sought Coyne out when she first heard of his plan, and has been with him on it since then.

"He won't lose me now. I'm stuck to his side," Ricketts said.

Speaking at the post-Service reception, she shared some of her thoughts on this latest installment.

"I was overwhelmed because all of the Churches that represented here," Ricketts said. "It just... I think it solidifies this neighborhood, and it brings something to the neighborhood that's intangible."

Both Coyne and Ricketts made clear their hopes to keep enlarging that number.

After a solo performance by Ms. Virine Morris, Pastor Dexter Jenkins of the Fellowship Christian Church delivered the homily, the title of which was Contentment: The Key to Being Thankful.

After starting with an examination of the daily pitfalls of a world that breeds discontent, Jenkins went into a three point talk that culminated with an optimistic message.

This was the Fellowship Christian Church's first year participating and the experience, according to Jenkins, was a positive one.

"It was a great time for a number of different reasons, but I think the number one reason that it was great was just because of the different age groups, ethnicities... I just think that – the way our country is – our world needs to see that," Jenkins said.

After Pastor Jenkins'

homily, a collection was taken, the proceeds of which will go to the Hyde Park Food Pantry. Reverend Elizabeth Wieman of the Hyde Park Presbyterian Church then delivered her litany of thanksgiving, after which Jenkins returned to the pulpit to give the benediction, which he delivered to the congregation, their hands interconnected and uplifted.

Pastor Lartey, spoke about the service as the last guests were leaving the reception.

"I believe that this evening was a special evening, just to see the collection of different Churches worshipping and praising God. It's a beautiful thing. Thank God for tonight. Amen," Lartey said.

Rumford, R.I. Trillium will join Craft Beer Cellar Roslindale, a retail craft brew business, that opened earlier this year on the ground floor.

Forest said they are definitely still looking for a long-term tenant for the top floor of the building, but she said this should help.

"We're hoping that maybe Trillium brings some people that are interested in potentially renting out the substation or maybe Trillium wants to stay longer because they see how welcoming Roslindale," she said. "We've been showing the space to potential permanent tenants along the way as well. We asked Trillium; they weren't interested in something permanent because they're working on a restaurant at Fort Point, but they were totally into a beer garden in the winter. Hopefully this brings a lot of people into the space, I mean who doesn't want to go into a substation? This will be the first tenant that the main floor has ever had."

Forest allowed that RVMS has already held several events in the space, but said she doesn't really consider those to count as even temporary tenants.

"RVMS has put on some tiny one-day events for sure, but I don't know if we'd be considered a tenant if Trillium is actually paying rent," she said with a laugh.

Trillium, for its part, said the company is really excited to continue its beer garden program that started on the Greenway.

"We had a killer time with the Garden on the Greenway this summer so we jumped at the chance to bring Trillium to another Boston neighborhood," said Trillium co-owner Esther Tetreault. "Our goal has always been to build a strong community and share what we do."

Tetreault said the space itself is perfect for a beer garden, and as of the date of publication, work should have already started to get the space ready.

"The Substation is such a unique and iconic space, in a welcoming neighborhood, making Roslindale a perfect winter home for the Trillium Garden," she said.

The garden is scheduled to open either at the end of November or early December, running through April 2018. RVMS and other local organizations plan to operate arts and cultural pop-ups, including local music, art, and restaurant collaborations on days Trillium will be closed and, when complementary, during times the beer garden is open. The beer garden will run five days a week.
