Two neighborhoods: One River

The Hyde Park/Mattapan Neponset River Neighborhood Forum was held on Thursday evening, Nov. 30 at 912 River St. The meeting featured a handful of pertinent speakers from different entities and organizations who presented their areas of expertise regarding the River to a group of over 50 people from both the Hyde Park and Mattapan neighborhoods.

Introductory speaker Vivian Morris, Chair of the Mattapan Food and Fitness Coalition and Coordinator of the Edgewater Drive Neighborhood Association, got at the reason for the meeting in her remarks. “A big part of why we had this meeting tonight is so that we who live here can feel greater ownership of the river that runs through our neighborhood,” she said.

Morris went on to speak of organizations who presented areas of expertise regarding the River to a group of over 50 people from both the Hyde Park and Mattapan neighborhoods.

Enchanted Trolley brings Christmas wishes at Readville Tree Lighting

Mayor Walsh’s Enchanted Trolley Tour pulled in to Wolcott Square last Friday night, where Santa and Mrs. Claus did some entertaining, along with Mayor Walsh and others.

The chilly night brought out a full crowd to the sidewalk in front of the shops facing Jeremiah Hurley Memorial Park.

Adding to the Holiday mood was the spread of hot chocolate, coffee cake (from Hyde Park’s My Grandma’s), and donuts (from Dunkin’ Donuts) made available for everyone on folding tables that had been set up before the event got underway.

As the time drew closer to 6:30 p.m., the crowd seemed to draw a little closer to the curbside and toward the unlit tree at one point of the Park.

City Council says yes to plastic bag ordinance

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Boston City Council voted last week on an ordinance to ban thin plastic bags in the city and require stores to provide thick plastic bags for 5 cents apiece.

Ordinance sponsor and District 6 City Councilor Matt O’Malley said the unanimous vote was a great victory for climate change advocates in the city and a good way to reduce litter in Boston. He feels the businesses are more than ready.

Residents will have some changes coming to their grocery routine next year.

Grew Park talks needles, goats, and dogs

The Grew Park Neighbors met on Monday evening, Dec. 4 at 6:15 p.m. in the community room of the Area E-18 Police Station for its monthly meeting.

The one appointment on the agenda was Cathy Horn, making her latest neighborhood meeting stop on behalf of Keep Hyde Park Beautiful.

She founded this group back in May as her response to the litter problem in the neighborhood.

In her brief presentation led to exchanges with the Grew Park audience that touched on a couple of different topics related to KHPB’s mission. Both were brought up by Pat Alvarez.

She first brought up the growing concern of used hypodermic needles, noting Dell Rock as a place where many are found and also mentioning that one of her summer workers had been accidentally stuck with one (without negative consequence) while cleaning.

The goal of KHPB as spelled out by its new business cards is to empower the people and institutions of Hyde Park to make it “a cleaner, greener place to live, work, study, and play.”

About a dozen residents and officials met on Tuesday night at the Hyde Park Foursquare Church on Arlington Street for the Pierce Street Neighborhood Watch.

The main issue of contention was the property at 88 Pierce St. and 71 Davidson St. The owner of the two parcels, listed by the BPDA as 71 Davidson LLC., has filed plans with the city to put in a two-family home at that location. Residents said the two-family would be too big for the site, as it would require several variances.

“They have numerous variances for the 88 section and the other side of Davidson,” said one resident, who said they were a neighbor and did not want to give their name for fear of reciprocity. “I doubt very much all those variances will pass because one, they don’t have enough space for the type of house they want to build and two, they can’t support that type of house structure there.”

Another resident, who said they wished to remain anonymous for the same reason, pointed out as well that the owner is also using part of the land as a parking lot for a landscaping company, for which the company pays the owner rent. “I don’t understand how they can store equipment in there because there’s no commercial zoning and there is no curb cut or anything, so any time they want to go in and out they have to drive over a curb,” the resident said. “We spoke to a representative of (District 5 City Councillor Tim) McCarthy’s office about a year ago... nothing has ever changed.”

The resident went on to say that the lot used to be vacant—with brush and scrub the only occupants—and the owner has since paved over the area while not putting in a curb cut, which would require going through the city’s Public Improvement Commission to do so.

Resident James Michel questioned the legality of using the lot for income. “It’s a residential neighborhood, you shouldn’t be able to rent for commercial use,” he said.

Another resident replied. “You can do whatever you want until you get caught.” McCarthy’s representative at the meeting said residents should not count on variances to stop a house being built. “Unless they have 6,000 square feet they are going to need a variance anyway,” he said. “I know houses are getting approved, single-families are getting approved between 2,900 square feet and 3,200 square feet... Most people who are trying to build on lots are triggering a whole bunch of variances because of the zoning code, but people are getting relief, which is why it’s very important to get input from the neighborhood.”

Mayor’s Office of Neighborhood Services Hyde Park Representative Bryan Flynn said the project went before the ZBA in November, but the owner asked for a deferral. “I talked to the architect, he said he was going to take a look at it again and revise the plans and come back to the community at a later date,” he said.

In other news, Michel also updated the Watch on the Hyde Park Youth Basketball program. “We had a bumpy start to the season, but we hopefully will open next Saturday,” he said. “We have 150 kids signed up, but we have room for more.”

Michel said they have a good deal of spots for younger kids for the skills and drills program at the Ohrenberger School in West Roxbury. “Our mission is to serve the youth of Hyde Park and the neighboring communities, which we have been doing for 35 years,” he said. “We’re looking to have an alumni basketball game as part of the Hyde Park 150th anniversary celebration,” he said. “Hopefully some of these 40-year-old guys and gals and 20-year-olds will get out there and have some fun.”
The Fairmount Hill Neighborhood Association gathered at the Boston Police Academy on Wednesday evening, Nov. 29 for its monthly meeting.

On its agenda were several zoning cases, an update on the purchase and installation of a new Fairmount Hill sign, holiday activities, the police report, and new business.

The first zoning case moderator Joe Smith brought up had to do with the abandoned house located at 56 Williams Ave., which he and five abutters tried to block from going through.

The development required variances to the recently established Fairmount Hill zoning code, the most major of which allowed for two single-family homes to be built one behind the other on the lot.

All except one having to do with placement of the two-car garage were approved by the Zoning Board.

The building, which is still standing, is now cleared to be demolished and replaced with two new single-family homes.

The other extended discussion on property development was a follow up to a two-hour meeting held the week before.

It concerned a proposal in which the house located at 892 Metropolitan Ave. would be moved toward Beacon Street in order to construct a new house between it and 900 Metropolitan, which would be located at 896.

When attendees were given the opportunity to share their thoughts on this, Jim Lafond-Lewis stepped to the front of the room and handed out a list of salient points to send to the Boston Planning and Development Agency (BPDA) regarding the new property regarding potential zoning problems.

He also brought up the fact that the existing house might, in fact, be a good case for consideration by the Boston Landmark Commission.

“That is the oldest house on Metropolitan Avenue,” Lafond-Lewis said. “It was built in 1890. They combined two lots when they built it and they positioned the house on the center of those two lots to face the triangle. The house was designed to be where it is and it did create an effect that is lasting now and that would be lost if they move the house.”

Regarding this case, both Lafond-Lewis and Smith recommended sending comments regarding this development along to Marie Mercurio at the BPDA (Marie.Mercurio@Boston.gov).

Lafond-Lewis also suggested sending comments to Marc Joseph at Inspectional Services (Marc.Joseph@Boston.gov).

“It’s important that they hear from us,” Smith said. “If they don’t hear from you – whether you’re for it or against it – they’re not going to make it a priority.”

Smith went on to add that based on a conversation with Mercurio, he didn’t think the Dec. 1 deadline on public commentary was an issue.

No variances are required for this development.

The last zoning case had to do with 101 Milton Ave. and, due to the lack of familiarity by the FHNA, required some explanation from Stephen Maguire, Community Liaison from City Councillor Tim McCarthy’s Office, who was also in attendance.

According to him, the plan is to build a new house on the 7,800 square foot lot between 101 Milton Ave. and 95 Milton Ave. There has already been an abutters meeting, at which one was opposed. The development would require side variances (it doesn’t qualify by 2 feet).

In other business, Scott Kriscenski, Coordinator for the Fairmount Hill Sign Project, gave an update on its progress.

As Kriscenski explained it, he’s targeting April 14, 2018 as a dedication date in order to roughly coincide with Hyde Park’s 150th Anniversary, which will be celebrated on April 22.

The sign, the basic dimensions of which he gave as 6-feet-by-2.5-feet, may be raised.

SPRAGUE STREET
EXTORTION

To the Editor:

As reported in the Nov. 30, 2017 edition of the Hyde Park Bulletin, a recent meeting was conducted by BRA/BPDA for the Impact Advisory Group (IAG) regarding the proposed massive 521-unit apartment complex along the side of the Sprague Street Bridge in the Readville neighborhood. If the reader is unfamiliar with an IAG, it is a group of neighborhood residents nominated by local elected officials to sit with the BRA and the project proponents to ascertain the appropriateness and future ramifications of the proposal if implemented. This writer attended the aforementioned meeting and, quite frankly, left with a good bout of nausea.

For virtually the entire meeting, the city Councilor and the BRA manager were coaching the IAG members on how to ask the proponents for things the members might like to have. They were urged to prepare a “wish list.” BRA, oddly in my view, repeatedly gave an example of asking that the developer provide some of the new solar-powered trash cans throughout the Readville neighborhood. BRA prefers to call this procedure “mitigation.” But indeed it is more accurately described as extortion. On this night the Impact Advisory Group appeared to be serving as an extortion committee. One of the IAG members rightfully proclaimed that in his view the group should be assessing whether the proposal is acceptable before drafting up a list of requests.

It should be noted that a neighborhood group, Citizens for the Preservation of Readville (CPR), conducted a thorough petition drive throughout the entire neighborhood and gathered close to 400 signatures from residents opposed to changing the current light industrial zoning so as to accommodate this apartment complex. At the end of the petition drive, we could see that 89 percent of the residents opposed were 9 percent were unaware of the proposal or needed more information before forming a decision, and 2 percent were not apropos. These opponents were vehement in their decision and did not make it contingent on what “goodies” we could extract from the proponents.

The Bulletin

Seasonal traditions bring a smile

As a young boy, I was fascinated by Jordan Marsh’s fifth floor annex: that’s where the Christmas toys were, a long time before toy stores came to populate the area.

And on that floor only was a huge electric train display, featuring Lionel trains running every which way.

As a teenager, I was mesmerized by Downtown Crossing in mid-December. Jordan Marsh’s windows, Filene Basement’s hustle-and-bustle, the all-encompassing products of Woolworth’s, the sports equipment in Raymond’s, and the milieu of Gibchri’s.

As a young father, I delighted in my children’s eyes as they viewed the Enchanted Village of Jordan’s/Macy’s and tasted the ice cream sundae of Bailey’s served by Dewey’s in pewter.

As a father of teenagers, I was not stirred by the modern malls’ blaring of seasonal music. Repulsion set in upon viewing various impersonations of Santa outside grocery stores, virtually destroying the magic in the eyes of very young shoppers in strollers.

But now in the autumn, if not the winter, of my life, there’s one store that seems to capture the “old-fashioned-ness” of Christmas, right out of a L.L. Bean catalogue or a Hallmark made-for-television show. It sells plants, food products, various non-edible items, and even artificial ones at this store.

The few aisles are not numbered, nor do they have cutey road names, such as Park Street, Centre Street, and Belgrade Avenue. Nor does this store feature numbered aisles.

Just as an aside, how many grocery shoppers would calmly tolerate being told, after a question about the location of say, gluten-free maple syrup, that “It’s is in the Hastings Street aisle.” Hmmm. Why do stores think we need this familiarization with local streets? And what’s with one supermarket’s idea of posting the numbered aisles with a useless zero, perpendicular to the products? Thus aisle 8 appears as 80 written at a 90-degree angle next to generic categories.

Back to the quintessential Christmas store: it straddles the Jamaica Plain-Brookline border on Allandale Road. There’s a dirt parking lot. Don’t bother looking for any white lines indicating parking spaces. There might even be a fire in an outside barrel to warm your hands, with an aroma of burnt pine wafting across the parking lot. There are no flyers mentioning sales or prices. There’s not much heat inside: most clerks wear flannel shirts and stocking hats. Only heaven knows if there’s a public restroom available.

For some great seasonal warmth, head to the Allandale Farm and Roadstand, shortened by locals to merely Allandale Farm. There’s always produce but no meat; yes, the prices are - well, you be the judge - and there might even be a truck there selling fresh fish on Wednesdays.

Indeed, a great place for starting or maintaining the (secular) Christmas spirit.

Consulate awards Waite the Légion d’Honneur

Friends, family and city officials gathered on Dec. 2 to witness World War II Veteran and West Roxbury resident Edwin “Bud” Waite be awarded the French Legion of Honor.

There wasn’t an empty seat at the ceremony, which drew in a crowd of about 100 people. Rev. Enid Watson, Co-Pastor of Stratford Street Church, helped to host the event.

“We are very proud and delighted to welcome you all here today,” Watson said.

O’Malley then took to the podium to commend Waite on his accomplishments.

“I have had the great pleasure of getting to know Bud and his family over the last several years,” he said. “I knew Bud was a veteran, but I did not know the extent of his legendary service.”

O’Malley explained that for Bud, it wasn’t about receiving accolades and it wasn’t about events like this. It was about supporting others,” he said.

O’Malley also gave a brief history of Waite’s life and expressed how much of an amazing person he believes Waite is.

“To the people of France, we are incredibly honored that you are recognizing one of our Native sons. In a time when we have such discord in this world and uncertainty in this country, one thing is certain: the men and women who served in World War II truly were the greatest generation,” O’Malley concluded.

Councilor Annissa Essaibi George and O’Malley then presented Waite with a Councilor proclamation and congratulated him for being awarded the French Medal of Honor. Commissioner of Veteran affairs and Lord Mayor of West Roxbury and Post 2902 Commander Richie Gormley both spoke and congratulated Waite for a job well done.

The ceremony concluded with Boston’s French Consul General Valéry Freland presenting Edwin Waite with the French Legion of Honor.

“My, I am so honored!” Waite exclaimed.

Waite served in the Company L, 260th Infantry Regiment from July 1944 to August 1945. Stationed 16 months overseas as an automatic rifleman, Private Edwin Waite participated in assaults on enemy positions in France, Germany and Austria. After arriving in Metz, France, the 260th Infantry Regiment joined General Patton’s 3rd Army in an attempt to breach the Siegfried Line.

Around the Neighborhood working his way through a donut, looked up and shared what he planned to say to Santa Claus. “I want a present,” he said.

Two other women with children of their own stood nearby. Neither was from Readville, but one woman, Eleni, worked at Olympic Pizza on the corner with her husband, the owner. This was her first time experiencing the Tree Lighting from the outside. Every other year she had been inside working but, this year, she had made it to the event. Curran and Varney are both from Mattapan Square.

“Pizza on the corner with my babies,” she said. “I’ve been inside working but, this year, I decided to come here for the first time with Santa’s lap,” she said. “I think that it’s wonderful that Mayor Walsh and I think that it’s wonderful that Mayor Walsh has been elected. According to Varney, they’ve been coming to this Tree Lighting “every year since he’s been born. It’s all about the kids.”

But Curran looks a little anxious as Michael passes by. “He was so anxious to come down this time and all of a sudden he’s nervous about meeting Santa Claus,” she said. “I think that it’s just fine with that anyways, she bursts out laughing. “I don’t think so,” the woman said.

She continues watching the goings on in the Enchanted Trolley with a smile on her face, but with Mrs. Claus hovering over Santa’s shoulder, never makes her move. Between the table of mincing coffee cake and Olympic Pizza, Ann Marie Curran keeps an eye on her 6-year-old grandson Michael, as does his grandfather, Chucky Varney.

Michael has not yet paid a visit to Santa’s Enchanted Trolley and the Trolley and Rudolph and a tall Toy Soldier come walking over to where Curran and Varney are standing.

Michael slows down long enough to have his photo taken with them and his Great Grandma and Grandpa, with Santa Claus making it into the frame. Close enough for this year. The Trolley is fastened down, Santa boards a bus, the motorcycles rumble to a start, and the Enchanted Trolley Tour is on to West Roxbury for its last stop of the night.

Correction
In the Nov. 30 edition of the Hyde Park Bulletin POHWER article beginning on Page 1, Alex Nadel’s last name was incorrectly spelled Navel.
Also, in the Nov. 30 HP150 article beginning on Page 4, Bob Vance’s email address is listed incorrectly. It should be Vance02136@gmail.com
Cathy Horn spoke about her anti-litter/neighborhood beautification group Keep Hyde Park Beautiful. Her brief presentation led to a discussion about discarded needles, the possibility of cleaning urban wilds, and the use of goats as weed whackers/fertilizing machines.

Anne Clark built on this, complaining about the lack of response when she called 311 for assistance removing needles in the West/Austin Street area, forcing her to take matters into her own hands (she was worried about her grandchild and other children picking them up) to collect them herself.

In response to this, Sgt. Dan MacDonald recommended calling the Sharps Hotline to have found needles removed. The hotline number is 617-534-3967.

Mayor’s Office Hyde Park Community Liaison Bryan Flynn also emailed the Parks Department as the meeting was underway regarding the reports of Alvarez and Clark.

As for KHPB, Horn said that participants have instructions not to touch needles when they find them. However, she took down the Sharps Hotline number, as did several others at the meeting.

Alvarez also made the suggestion that KHPB might also consider adopting an urban wild, citing the fact that Hyde Park has more of them than any other neighborhood in the city, including four in the Grow Park area: Sherrin Woods, Deforest, West/Austin, and Monterey Hilltop.

As a byproduct of her comments, an attendee mentioned goats-as-brush-removers, opening the door for Alvarez to address the issue in different detail than she had in November’s meeting.

“I think the City needs a cadre of goats to go all through the city,” she said. “They’re tick resistant, they love poison ivy and other invasives, and their poop doesn’t have to cure like cow manure; it’s instant fertilizer. So they’re, like, the best multi-purpose tool.”

When asked about the possibility of using goats, Horn very tentatively agreed to them on the idea list.

In other KHPB news, on Thursday, Dec. 7, a Planning Committee meeting is scheduled, during which members will be speaking with the President of Keep Massachusett’s Beautiful regarding affiliation options, as well as other ideas. This meeting had originally been scheduled for November. Those interested in KHPB can visit www.keephydrabeautiful.org or e-mail keephydrabeautiful@gmail.com.

Lynda Wallack also brought up a topic for investigation the status of the Thompson Center Dog Park, which is caught in between those plans and its original proposed use as a senior recreation area.

“Right now, everybody is log jammed and, meanwhile, we’ve got nothing,” Wallack said. “We have no dog park. We have no senior park. It just sits there and it’s an eyesore.”

Returning generally to the topic of needles, she continued.

“Kids drink there. Junkies go there. It’s just a wasteland. So we’d like to see some movement on it.” Wallack said.

She referred to the Dog Park Boston website (www.dogparkboston.org) for those interested.

In old business, the Grow Park Neighbors are researching the 2018 application process for the Slow Streets program in which speed humps would be installed on different streets in the neighborhood.

In an additional item of note, Alvarez reviewed the Neponset River Forum from Nov. 30 and the problems of river pollution. This led to an announcement from Sgt. MacDonald regarding the disposal of unused medication.

“You’re not supposed to flush unused medication down the toilet because it pollutes the water,” he said.

He went on to inform the group that BFD stations provide medication drop-offs.

Finally, the police report for the past month was very quiet. However, one larceny—the theft of a package from a porch—was of some interest.

The suspect was video-taped and although still at large, has a warrant for his arrest.

Following up on this, Sgt. MacDonald had a recommendation for delivery shoppers during the run-up to Christmas.

“Be careful if you’ve ordered something expensive,” he said. “Have it delivered to somebody who’s home, or to a location where you go and pick it up, because it’s easy pickings just driving around and seeing stuff on people’s doorsteps and just walking up and, you know, walking away. If these people hadn’t had a camera, he would have gotten away with it.”

The Grow Park Neighbors meet on the first Monday of the month. Because of New Year’s Day, this may be moved to Jan. 8. Check www.itsyourenvironmental.com for details. to step up to the challenge. “As we have seen with every city or town that has opposed this, once they’ve gone into implementation you’ve seen the private sector really step up,” he said. “You’ve seen individuals step up and offer reusable plastic bags. If passed today and signed into law, this will have a one-year sort of ramping up period.” He said the ordinance won’t go into effect until a year from now, and added this would give them plenty of time to work with ABCD, the Boston Housing Authority, food banks, the Boston Centers for Youth and Families and farmers markets to make sure that residents are aware of the ordinance.

“We can work and we can do this well because we’ve seen it done well in other cities and towns. We have worked closely with our neighbors, we know what the recipe is and how we can do this and the benefits cannot be challenged,” he said. “Let’s write the Boston ‘greenprint.’”

At-Large City Councilor Ayanna Pressley acknowledged that the main point of opposition in the city has been that this would impact low-income families, who may see a 5 cent increase per grocery bag as a burden.

“Should this ordinance pass, I’d encourage the City of Boston to explore ways to ease the burden of what will really require a cultural shift by providing free, reusable tote bags at accessible and convenient venues throughout the city for our low-income residents and seniors,” she said. “This ordinance is a critical step towards a greener, cleaner and more sustainable Boston.”

Matt Seaholm, the executive director of the American Progressive Bag Alliance, said the passage of the ordinance was disappointing and believes the mayor should veto the legislation outright so that the council will have to go back and rework it.

“It was seemingly a backroom deal that transpired over the Thanksgiving holiday weekend,” he said. “Before that point we were under the impression that there was opposition in the Mayor’s Office and City Council, but as it turned out there were some vocal members who were more interested in getting a feel-good ordinance through and believe the mayor should veto the legislation outright so that the council will have to go back and rework it.”

“What it ultimately does is punish those who can least afford it,” he said. “That 5-cent fee might not mean a lot to city council members, but I can tell you a low income family in Boston who has to pay 50 cents every time they do their weekly grocery shopping it adds up, and it’s noticeable to those who can least afford it.”

Bradford Verter, Director at Mass Green Network, said that residents are already paying for their single-use plastic bags, though they may not know it.

“Plastic bags are not free and we all pay for them. They cost grocery stores 4 cents each on average and that’s folded into the overhead and the price of goods, it’s just a hidden cost and one of the things this does is make hidden costs visible,” he said.

“When that happens, residents bring their own reusable plastic bags very quickly.”

Seaholm countered that the cost of the single-use bags is nowhere near as high as the thicker counterparts.

“I guarantee they are not as expensive as 5 cents, many of those bags are as cheap as half a cent. You’re talking about taking a penny and increasing it by seven times the thickness,” he said. “Typically, those bags for many retailers are going to be more than the 5 cents and that would help add additional cost onto the retailer.”

Verter said that the city is currently paying much higher costs for the single-use plastic bags in terms of the problems they create when they hit the recycling stream, which recycling facilities are not prepared to deal with.

“The big problem is that bags gum up the works in recycling machinery at these big sorting machines that are run at recycling facilities and they just get totally jammed up with plastic bags. They have to hire people in eight-hour shifts cut away the bags with box cutters or utility knives and they lose all this time,” he said.

“If plastic bags get mixed in, then that contaminates an entire shipment and they have to hire someone to sort it or just dump it all. It’s a lot of wasted money and lost opportunity and those funds could go to social programs or to any other thing. It costs taxpayers and anything that costs taxpayers money hurts low-income residents the most.”

Seaholm pointed out that plastic bags do not make up a large percentage of the city’s waste, but Verter said that waste is determined in tonnage.

“It’s certainly not as much tonnage as refrigerators, I can tell you that,” Verter said. City Council President and At-Large City Councilor Michelle Wu said the ordinance, if anything else, is a mixed bag.

“So it’s been an incredible honor to be part of this process and many others that the council has been working on to really plan and take actions for our next generations here in the city,” she said. “This is a hard problem the city has been facing, representative of the larger problem of climate change and climate injustices that our country and the world is facing. To be totally clear, our current economic system, our current way of life and our society is headed towards a crisis point in terms of the global impact of a warming planet and changing weather patterns that we are going to see directly affecting Boston’s bottom line and our residents’ quality of life. This plastic bag ordinance is an example of a small step that is completely within the city’s control to take.”

Dave Vieira, who felt uncomfortable addressing the Neponset in racial terms. “The River is the River and the people are the people, and I would prefer that we go forward on that basis,” he said.

This, in turn, brought about a response from a black woman sitting nearby. “It’s the people that control what we need done, though, so we need to call it as it is,” she said.

“I’ve lived in Hyde Park for 50 years and that river has been polluted since long before I lived here and it was never described in terms of racial inequity,” Vieira came as water testers or on River clean-ups and that they advocate on the River’s behalf to their elected officials. Following Cooke, Northation in order to keep with the program schedule and despite her suggestion that they go back to it later, it was never revisited.

Instead, the direction of the meeting did essentially shift in Vieira’s direction, as successive speakers spoke of different aspects of the Neponset River’s pollution and how to alleviate it.

Ian Cooke, Executive Director of the Neponset River Watershed Association made an informative presentation first covering some definitions (a watershed: the area of land that drains into a particular river) and laying out some logistical information (the River runs from Foxboro, is 30 miles long, covers a 120 square mile area, and has 330,000 people living in its watershed area). He then moved on to pollution problems, spending most of his time on street stormwater runoff and showing, as one of his first slides, a common curbside storm drain/catch basin before mildly shocking probably more than a few in the room by informing everyone that whatever goes down the drain goes directly into the river via storm drain system network and eastern University’s Carole McCauley, working under an Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) grant dealing with the Boston Harbor ecosystem network, gave some brief details on the EPA’s involvement with the Neponset. Having accepted an invitation from the Commonwealth, the EPA is currently conducting its own investigation and testing of the site – including muddy sections the riverbed heavily polluted with PCBs (polychlorinated biphenyl). According to McCauley, based on its findings, the EPA may make a recommendation that the River become a “superfund” site which will “open the door for some sorts of clean-ups.” If the River does get added to this national priorities list, it will be about a year from now. McCauley also made sure to mention that the clean-up process can take from 10-20 years.

She also added the importance of project advocacy to elected officials, since states are responsible for at least 10 percent of clean-up expenses. Nonetheless, McCauley was positive. “Even though it seems like there’s a long road ahead, it’s really exciting progress that’s being looked into right now,” she said.

The Boston Water and Sewer Commission sent two representatives to the meeting, Director of Planning and Sustainability Charlie Jewell and Project Manager Amy Schofield. Schofield delivered a detailed presentation that in many ways complemented Cooke’s. She concentrated on the BWSC’s ongoing efforts to find and fix illicit connections between sewer drains and storm drains that, when left un-addressed, pollute the river. She also spoke of the ongoing inspections of the 69 total sub-catchments (a catch basin drainage network) that discharge stormwater into the Neponset. Since 2004, inspections for 57 of them are complete, with the remaining 12 scheduled to be finished by 2019. These subsystems, however, are open to re-evaluation.

The question and answer session touched on areas of each presentation, with each speaker at one point or another addressing an issue presented by the audience on index cards read by Muhammad. Many were directed at the BWSC, with contamination the focal point.

In her commentary on this problem, Schofield spoke of the difficulty in finding exactly where it comes from, despite the ability to narrow potential origin points down. Jewell, silent during Schofield’s presentation, had more to say about these problems. “The investigation process requires certain weather conditions,” Jewell said. “Sandbagging (a method of determining illicit runoff in a stormwater drain) requires 96 hours of forecasted dry weather. That’s sometimes very hard to get in Boston.” He also revisited an idea that Cooke presented to reduce contamination: “green infrastructure” – specifically, rain gardens that would allow storm water to be absorbed into the ground, letting natural processes treat it before it makes it to the river.

During the Q & A, Marc Nascarella, Director of the Environmental Toxicology Program for the Department of Public Health, encouraged River abutting residents to add signage warning against fishing, which he acknowledged as a possible issue for an immigrant population.

Following up on Nascarella’s comments, Cooke encouraged attendees to mark up a huge map of the Neponset that had been taped to the wall with suggested signage points.

The conversation continued well after the meeting had ended, with Hyde Park and Mattapan residents lingering in small groups around each other and different presenters, while others marked coordinates on the map, planning further as to the River that can a stone’s throw away.
