11 Dana Ave. still cause for HPNA concern

The Hyde Park Neighborhood Association is still fighting the city's zoning determination for 11 Dana Ave.

Matt MacDonald
Staff Reporter

On Thursday, Dec. 5, the Hyde Park Neighborhood Association (HPNA) held its monthly meeting in the District E-18 police station (1249 Hyde Park Ave.) community room.

About 20 members and guests were in attendance for a session that ran about an hour and featured two scheduled presentations.

HPNA President Jim Kirker began the meeting with an update regarding the 11 Dana Ave. mixed-use development that had been the main event at the November meeting, when representatives of the Boston Planning and Development Agency (BPDA) and the Inspectional Services Department (ISD) spoke with the group regarding the project.

The 14,322 square foot development site is located on the block of Dana Avenue between Hyde Park Avenue and the Hyde Park commuter rail station.

As described on the BPDA

ZBA approves American Legion cannabis shop

The Boston Zoning Board of Appeals (ZBA) met on Tuesday, Dec. 3, and approved several projects in the city.

The Board approved the proposed cannabis dispensary at 717 American Legion Hwy. in Roslindale near the Hyde Park and Mattapan lines. The proposal came from company Silver Therapeutics, representatives of which have stated they want to turn the old greenhouse and plant shop into a dispensary, complete with a small greenhouse to teach prospective farmers how to grow themselves. Attorney representing Silver, Michael Ross, said the idea is to promote entrepreneurship among residents.

"It will only be 1,600 square feet," Ross said. "It will be a demonstration greenhouse, so we will see cultivation occur at that greenhouse onsite for the purpose of teaching people from this community, from Boston, how to enter the industry, and how to get lucrative careers within the industry as cultivators."

Residents were initially against a dispensary in the neighborhood. Members from the Mount Hope Canterbury Neighborhood Association (MHC) felt that the American Legion Corridor is a dumping ground for types of retail and uses that no other neighborhood would accept. After looking into the plan further, residents either came to either not oppose the project or saw that if this project wasn't approved, another more undesirable project wouldn't be

Canale Family says thanks to community after 45 years

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Canale family in Readville stated they will not be hosting their annual Christmas holiday light show at their regular location this year.

As was reported last year, Ken Canale said the Norton Street light display was just getting too much for the family after nearly half a century.

"I mean it was my parents' home and they're both deceased now," he said. "It's a just something we don't want to do here anymore."

Canale said it was a grueling task to get the lights up every year, and included 12-hour days of preparation on the weekends for at least one month before the actual show. There was no hired help and Canale said he just didn't look at the electric bill at that time of year. Canale hinted that the display will go on, just at another location in Readville.

"I don't really want to disclose the location, it will be a little smaller and I don't want all the traffic for the first couple of years."

And Canale added they do get a lot of traffic.

Hyde Park Pub Crawl returning for eighth year

Jeff Sullivan

With Hyde Park seemingly facing a shortage of restaurants, most recently with the closing of the Fairmount Grille, Hyde Park Board of Trade President Scott Batey says that's not slowing down the neighborhood's activities in the slightest.

"We are a bit short in places but it's still going off," Batey said, referring to the temporary closing of Rincon Caribeno for renovations.

Regardless, Batey said the event is a great way to

City Council talks Rideshare

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Boston City Council met and discussed Rideshare companies and Transportation Network Companies (TNC) at a hearing on Nov. 19 and at the council's regular meeting on Nov. 20.

The issue was voted to remain in committee, but Hearing Sponsor and District 2 City Councilor Edward Flynn said he feels they have made some real progress.

"In the hearing we spoke of legislation in the State House that would increase the surcharge on TNC's, and I know that the city is still actively looking at pick up and drop off spots, geofencing and other ways to improve traffic in terms of TNC's," he said. "This additional traffic also brings pollution and raising concerns about climate change and sustainability. As we all know, Chinatown has the worst air quality in all of Massachusetts. There are other concerns as well, including consumer protection issues."

Flynn said these TNC's are not paying their fare share and he wants to explore ways the city can offset the increase in problem issues they bring to the city.

"The data has shown that there are 42 million rides that began in Boston in 2018, or over 115,000 rides per day," he said. "As we all know, Boston is in the midst of a congestion and traffic crisis. It's clear from the data that we need to include TNC in this conversation. Many constituents have also brought up concerns relating to public safety and Vision Zero to reports of vehicles speeding through our neighborhoods, while often unfamiliar with our roads as they may be coming from Rhode Island or New Hampshire."

During Tuesday's hearing, Chief of Streets Chris Osgood went through other ways the city is combating congestion, including transit signal priority for buses, signals that talk to each other to relieve congestion, increases in Blue Bike Stations to get people off the road and more. He said in the City of Boston, the biggest thing officials can do right now without any state legislation is to better manage the curb.

"Over the course of this past year, the Boston Transportation Department (BTD) and the Mayor's Office of New Urban Mechanics collaborated on a pick up drop / off pilot in Councilor Zakim's District (District 8) in the Fenway," he said. "We ran that pilot for three or four months. The assessment, which we just released, showed really important things. If you create a pick up / drop off zone, in this case it was four spaces on two separate blocks that people who were using Uber and Lyft were guided to, you see a huge increase in curb productivity."

Osgood said they saw a 300 percent increase in the productivity of those curb spaces because of the pilot program.

"So instead of having parking meter spaces, we actually got far better utilization occur for general pick up and drop off," he said. "It wasn't specific to Uber or Lyft, it was for taxis and personal vehicles as well."

Osgood said they are looking to expand the pilot program in three different locations in the South Boston Waterfront. He said with the Fenway Pilot, they were looking to see how pick up and drop off worked for night life and retail purposes, but now he said the office wants to look at work commuters and if pick up and drop off locations would help there as well.

The Council voted on Wednesday that the issue is to remain in committee for now until more concrete plans can be made in regards to keeping up with TNC's.

METCO Application Deadline - January 3rd

Don't miss this opportunity to participate in high-quality K-12 school integration program

New application system reduces enrollment barriers to program with outstanding high school graduation, college enrollment record

METCO encourages Boston families to apply NOW for the 2020-2021 school year.

The Metropolitan Council for Educational Opportunity (METCO) is the highly lauded, historic school integration program that places Boston students in predominantly white suburban schools, breaking down barriers to educational opportunities and creating racially diverse learning environments for students of all backgrounds.

Research shows that graduation rates and college attainment among METCO students are far above state averages and lifelong friendships are forged between diverse students.

APPLY NOW!

For the first time this year, parents can apply online at metcoinc.org/apply and upload documents for their school-aged children from any online device. They can also come to METCO's Roxbury headquarters for assistance during business hours. Detailed information on the process is available at metcoinc.org or by calling 617-427-1545.

Also new this year is a lottery that replaces the waiting list. All eligible applicants who have submitted a complete application with all requirements by the deadline of January 3 will receive a lottery number and have an equal opportunity to be referred to suburban schools connected with METCO. Parents can track the progress of their application throughout the application process.

During this transition year, certain groups of applicants from previous years will retain priority status; see metcoinc.org/status for details. However, all students need to complete a new online application to be considered.

The application upgrade is the first significant change since METCO was founded in 1966 and takes place after a year-long study with extensive and intensive community feedback and input from educational officials.

"METCO can be a life-changing opportunity. This process makes it easier and fairer for families to make METCO one of their school options," said METCO CEO Milly Arbaje-Thomas. "We will work with you every step of the way. Don't miss the deadline of January 3!"

About METCO

Since its founding during the peak of the Civil Rights Movement, the METCO program has enrolled tens of thousands of Boston students of color in predominantly white school districts, creating the opportunity for students in those districts to experience the advantages of learning in a racially and ethnically diverse setting. METCO has reached tens of thousands of students, supporting over 3,100 families annually in 33 participating suburban school districts and 190 public schools, with graduation rates and college attainment far above state averages.

But METCO's true power goes beyond academics. METCO creates environments where students, parents and teachers of different backgrounds can appreciate diversity, find common ground through shared experiences, build lifelong friendships between diverse students, and strive toward the mutual goal of preparing young people to become global citizens. Through a growing number of corporate and civic partnerships, METCO Headquarters also offers Boston families access to an array of support systems and opportunities, including scholarships, internships, enrichment programs and more.

Brighton's AOB: RIP

On the day before Thanksgiving 92-year-old ever-spry and cognitively astute Anne O'Brien drove to a supermarket, came home, and began unloading her groceries. A bit light-headed from the unpacking probably, she sat down and quietly passed away.

Nothing in the above makes her sound like a remarkable woman, but truly she was. This New Jersey native moved to Boston decades ago after marrying at the age of 32—indeed late in those days. She and her late husband Duncan raised three boys, all of whom attended Boston Latin and Harvard University, as a result of her impressing upon them the need for excellence in all things.

Widowed after 24 years of marriage, this fiercely independent woman maintained her status for more than 30 years, living alone, driving, cleaning her own house, and maintaining an active social life and spiritual outreach. Would that all of us maintain such independence into our 90's with profound mental acuity and physical health! Would that all of us respect our Creator's mandates against self-centeredness and material acquisition as this woman! And would that we all who are repulsed by intubations, surgeries, and other invasive procedures experience such a gentle death!

Her peaceful death was a fitting tribute and gift from her God Who rewarded her for years of faithful service, adoration, and love. But this did not mean she was without strong convictions: she was an ardent foe of abortion, opposed inane eulogies at funerals, and railed ceaselessly against the current president for showing little regard for child and adult lives.

On a biting cold morning after a snowstorm during the preceding night, St. Ignatius Church was crowded with people from Brighton as well as Wellesley and Winchester where two of her sons now reside. Her third son, a diocesan priest in Lawrence who founded Cor Unum to feed so many of that city's hungry residents, presided at the funeral Mass, with a dozen other priests also in attendance, at least three of them Jesuits.

Anne O'Brien was laid to

rest in a simple Trappist casket in Evergreen Cemetery, a mere Jackie Bradley toss from her home. Family members, friends of the family, and other mourners gathered at a post-internment repast at the Harvard Club on Commonwealth Avenue—she might have winced at the thought that the collation was in such a storied edifice—to tell more stories about this already-missed nonagenarian from 02135.

West Roxbury resident receives Heroes in Health Care Award

VNA Care, a nonprofit visiting nurse association, recently honored three health care leaders while raising a record-breaking $340,000 at its sold-out Heroes in Health Care Gala held at the Mandarin Oriental, Boston.

The Gala is VNA Care's signature fundraising event and has raised millions in essential funding for home health care provided by the 133-year-old VNA Care and end-of-life care provided by VNA Hospice & Palliative Care.

"The success of the event would not have been possible without the financial support of our generous sponsors. We are also fortunate that the event brought together a tremendous group of people who are now more committed than ever to our mission and vision," said Laura Wise, manager of Fund Development.

At the Gala, VNA Care presented Heroes in Health Care awards to Tony Coles, MD, CEO and chairperson of Cerevel Therapeutics; Steven Strongwater, MD, president & CEO of Atrius Health; and Patricia Joyce, RN, community nurse with VNA Care and a resident of West Roxbury. Joyce received her award from fellow nurse and colleague Shandolyn Chavis-Garcia, a resident of Roslindale.

website, the proposal consists of a four story building made up of 24 residential units, a first floor commercial space, and 24 parking spots.

The development – and the precedent that the HPNA believes that it will set if successful – has been the source of contention between the Association and the BPDA and ISD since it was presented at the July, 2018 meeting.

At the root of this issue is the fact that the proposed development has been moving forward as an “as of right” project requiring no zoning variances.

Parking has been a major element of this disagreement.

The HPNA contends that the site falls within one of Hyde Park’s neighborhood shopping (NS-2) zones, which requires two parking spots per residential unit. According to Kirker, the project is incorrectly operating under the guidelines for the bordering NS-2 district (Logan and Cleary Squares) which requires only one parking spot per residential unit.

The site’s building design – specifically its underground parking garage – has also raised questions with the HPNA. As shown in the plan posted on the BPDA website, part of the garage – which is entered by ramp – is marked as 4 feet below ground level, while its above grade portion is listed at 10 feet high up to the second floor.

Kirker put forward that this is in violation of the zoning code, which he said requires a basement to have more than 35 percent of its height below ground level (based on the height dimensions listed, the garage has approximately 29 percent below grade).

The property has been a cause of concern in the neighborhood because residents feel the developers have not followed proper procedures.

Kirker added that, because there is no floor/ceiling division between the 4 foot high below-grade section and the 10 foot high above-ground section of the garage, it qualifies as a first story and that, in an NS-2 district, first floor garage parking is prohibited.

According to Kirker, after the November HPNA meeting there has been little communication of note with either the BPDA or the ISD and that, currently, he and several Association members are preparing zoning arguments to submit to both offices.

“There may be case law or something that shows me wrong, but my point of view is: show it to me because I don’t see it,” Kirker said of the situation. “If I’m wrong and there is case law... I’m not going to fight it. But I don’t think there is any case law. I think they made a mistake and I think they’re digging their heels in because they don’t want to admit they made a mistake. And I think this is a problem.”

In the first appointment of the evening, Matthew Moran and Tyler Lew of the Boston Transportation Department’s Transit Team returned to the HPNA as part of their community outreach process regarding improving bus transportation within the city.

Working in cooperation with, and funded by the MBTA, the Transportation Department – in this portion of the citywide project – is focusing on improving Hyde Park Avenue bus safety, travel time, reliability, amenities, congestion, and other transit concerns.

In their presentation, Moran and Lew shared some Hyde Park Avenue MBTA bus transit statistics, noting that more than 300 buses make the trip up and down the avenue each day while transporting more than 10,000 commuters, and that – at peak hours – there are more people traveling on Hyde Park Avenue in buses than there are in cars.

They also took suggestions, the most notable of which was to continue the 32 bus route from Wolcott Square to the 24/27 bus route’s terminus point at Wakefield Avenue.

Suggestions were also made to move several stops, with a number of people commenting on the River Street Bridge bus stop between Hyde Park Avenue and Business Street.

This community outreach process will continue through the spring of 2020, after which more detailed concept designs will be presented for community approval.

The second scheduled appointment of the evening had Guy Armand – CEO of the 990 Group – before the Association to speak of his company’s proposed marijuana dispensary.

Armand, whose home is at 990 River St. in Hyde Park, is working together with his brother and sister to bring their business proposal through the application process.

In doing so, they have been informally advised by Bob Mayerson, CEO of Patriot Care, a major provider of medical cannabis products and services in Massachusetts. Commenting on this relationship, Armand stated that Mayerson has no financial interest in the 990 Group, instead describing him as something of a mentor.

Additionally, the 990 Group is also working with AC3, LLC – a consulting company specializing in the marijuana industry – as it continues its application process.

Armand stated that he has had preliminary discussions with the owner of the warehouse at 1661 Hyde Park Ave. (across the street from My Grandma’s of New England Coffee Cake, 1636 Hyde Park Ave.) regarding its possible use as a dispensary.

At the conclusion of Armand’s presentation, a vote was taken in favor of an HPNA letter of support for the 990 Group, conditional on the location determined for the business.

In Boston Police news, the annual District E-18 Christmas Party for children 10 years old and under will be held from Noon until 3 p.m. at New Mission High School (655 Metropolitan Ave.). There will be pizza, ice cream, and games, and Santa Claus will have a gift for all of the little revelers. To pre-register, call 617-343-5611.

The next scheduled HPNA meeting will be at 7 p.m. on Thursday, Jan. 9, 2020.

get out and meet your neighbors in a festive and celebratory atmosphere as they make the rounds to belt out holiday carols across Hyde Park.

“People from all over Hyde Park come to this event,” he said. “I would say the Pub Crawl has always represented the diversity of Hyde Park. That’s how it should be and that’s what it has done.”

Batey said this year will start off with warm up sessions at the Riverside Theater Works at 45 Fairmount Ave. The eighth annual Hyde Park Main Streets Pub Crawl is set for Dec. 13 from 5 p.m. To 9 p.m. He said local “Piano Man” Sean Hurley will be leading the warm ups to get folks in tune and perhaps get over a bit of stage fright.

“Sean’s very professional, and he gets everyone in the holiday spirit for sure,” Batey said. “We warm up and then this year, we head over to the Switch and there we will have some wine and cheese and beer and crackers. We’ll stay there for about a half an hour and then we’re headed to Las Delcias.”

Batey said in years past, his organization, the Hyde Park Board of Trade and the Hyde Park Main Streets were able to get a grant so as to be able to pay restaurants to give out food to the carolers and revelers. He said this year they didn’t get the grant, but the restaurants are comping the food anyway. He said this is because of the history of the event, but there is also a bit of self interest there too.

“One thing the Carol Crawl has been able to do historically is it brings people into an establishment that they might not have chosen to go to,” he said. “So I say this is a good will thing that the Main Streets does, but it’s also strategic thing. It brings the neighborhood together, it brings volunteers in because it shows what Main Streets does and it gives businesses in the community a volume of people that come through their doors who might not ordinarily do that.”

Batey said the restaurant Zaz is definitely a good example of that.

“They did their first spread for us probably about four or five years ago, and he definitely got clients out of that who kept coming back. The same thing happened at Rincon,” he said. “If you’re going to succeed here in Hyde Park you have to attract a cross section of people and the Rincon has been very successful in doing that.”

Batey said he started the crawl eight years ago to get people out of their comfort zones, and it certainly seems to be working.

“We morphed it later into a Cinco de Mayo event as well,” he said. “I won’t say this was my brain child, but I proposed it to Main Streets as that good will /stealth thing and it’s historically been great. It brings people out and we’ve recruited a lot of volunteers to Main Streets, just because people have a good time.”

The New Jeep Gladiator / Heavy Duty Ram Pick Up

It's been a long time coming. The last Gladiator was in the 60's. The all new Gladiator built as a 2020 model is here and for sale. First and foremost, the Gladiator is NOT built on a stretched Wrangler platform. In fact the rear suspension shares parts with the 1500 full size pick up. Even the front grille bars are for the Gladiator. Like the Wrangler doors and top are simple to remove. This makes it the only full open mid size pick up. You choice of soft or hard top.

This is a true mid size pick up truck that is a tough as they get in every way, including going off road. The Gladiator resembles a Jeep even including the rear design and tail lights. There is even a front grille mounted camera with a washer nozzle pointed to clean the lens. The camera has multi uses including vision on steep grades to what is ahead or below. Like most vehicles the Gladiator is available in many models with lots of options. The top of the line Rubicon is equipped with a lot of off road equipment including some very large tires and wheels. The traditional V/6 and either automatic or manual transmission with high and low range transfer case power the Gladiator. Look for a diesel late fall or early spring. The longer wheel base helps the ride yet the turning radius is increased only slightly. The bottom line is the Gladiator a fun mid size truck. If you need to hold a 4x8 sheet of ply wood, the 2 position tail gate is the answer to keep the plywood up to fit over the wheel wells, because the ply wood does not fit between the wheel wells. A full road test to come soon.

Since Ram got its own identity sales have been rising. This week I got a look at the new Ram trucks including the 3500 Duley special Kentucky Derby addition finished in white and off white interior. Power came for a 1000 foot pound of torque. This is the most out of any Cummings diesel to date. The interior quality of leather trim and every thing else is more car like than truck. From the 1500 to the 3500 Ram trucks provide whatever the buyer wants and or needs. For the buyer who wants a door pick up truck, Ram has it for you. The interior has all the amenities and safety features. I think that a high performance version or 2 will make a debut before years end. Ram has all the goodies to make it happen.

Ross pointed out that the 20,000 square foot parcel allows cannabis as a conditional use, and the site also has in the past been utilized for a greenhouse and grow house. He said local Roslindale residents Sieh and Leah Samura – owners of 612 Studios – will be aiding residents in that endeavor, as well as working on their own small business to create Purient Bedroom Cannabis.

“They are experts in the field,” Ross said. “In addition to the greenhouse we will also have the dispensary, which will be available for adult use (recreational) and medical use.”

Ross also said that they had negotiated the hours of operation with the MHC to miss the morning commute and open at 11 a.m. and close at 8 p.m., Monday through Saturday, with a closing on Sunday at 6 p.m. He said the proposal has a host community agreement as well as a good neighbor agreement with the MHC, which co president Rick Yoder said during the hearing was a key component of the group’s support.

In Hyde Park, Attorney Peter Lions came before the ZBA to request a deferral for his client’s (1449 LLC.) proposal at 1449 to 1453 Hyde Park Ave. The proposal is to take a two-family currently on the site and change it into an 11-unit multi-family building.

“We’re considering our options for the property and we’re working with the neighborhood associations and the abutters at this time,” Lions said. “We’re looking to come to an agreement with that and we’re looking for a deferral in May.”

The current variances for the project include insufficient rear yard setback, insufficient lot size, excessive floor to area ratio, number of allowed stories exceeded, insufficient usable open space, insufficient additional lot area/dwelling unit, insufficient usable open space, insufficient lot width and insufficient lot area width frontage. The Board scheduled the new hearing for May 5.

The ZBA also denied without prejudice a proposal for eight home ownership units for 48 Allston St. in Allston. Attorney representing the developer Patrick Foley said the idea for the building is to increase Allston’s owner-occupied home ownership rate, which is the lowest in the City of Boston at 11 percent, and he said 75 percent of the units would be deed-restricted to be owner-occupied.

“We are looking to replace an underutilized four-family with eight new units,” he said.

Foley said the project would have three two-bedroom units and five three-bedrooms, along with 10 underground parking spaces.

“They’re looking to attract young families and professionals to the area with home ownership,” Foley said.

The project also has several variances for which the project team is seeking zoning relief. Those include floor area ratio is excessive, front yard setback requirement is insufficient, side yard setback requirement is insufficient, rear yard setback requirement is insufficient and despite having several multi-family buildings around the area, multi-family is a forbidden use in the zone.

Foley said they hosted several neighborhood meetings during the proposal’s process.

“The first proposal was 11 units and after meeting with neighbors we dropped it to nine and then eight units,” he said.

ZBA Chair Christine Araujo pointed out that regardless of what the developer did to reduce the units or variances on the project, in this particular case the ZBA’s baseline is the single-family 2,500 square foot zoning regulations.

“We look at that to see how much you exceed that,” he said.

Resident Samuel Hui spoke in opposition to the project because he feels increasing density in the area would exacerbate the pest and rat problem already there.

“It’s almost all students now and the neighborhood has gone right down the tubes and with this project it’s going to be a lot worse,” he said. “I’ve been to most of these units in the Allston Brighton area because I’m a licensed exterminator, and I see rat problems, bedbugs and I see all these problems because the owners do not live in these buildings and they are managed by property management people and they don’t take care of these properties at all.”

While District 9 City Councilor Mark Ciommo sent his representative in support of the project (as well as At-Large City Councilor Michael Flaherty doing the same), Allston Brighton Representative for the Mayor’s Office of Neighborhood Services Conor Newman said after several abutters meetings, the Mayor’s Office would be in opposition of the project. The Allston Civic Improvement Association also sent a letter of opposition to the project.

Foley pointed out that the proposal requires owner-occupied home ownership. Araujo said that a denial without prejudice allows the applicant to come back within a year after reducing the number of units on the project to try again.

Boston Police arrest package thief

At about 6:26 PM on Sunday December 8, 2019, officers assigned to District E-5 (West Roxbury) made an onsite arrest after responding to a call for a larceny in progress in the area of Clifondale Street and Rosecliff Street in Roslindale. While on approach, officers were advised that a male suspect, later identified as Johnatan Cordero-Garcia, 23, of Dorchester, had been observed taking packages from the front porch of a residence on Rosecliff Terrace before fleeing the area on foot.

Responding officers soon located the suspect and performed a pat frisk which led to the recovery of a Sig Sauer handgun from the suspect's waistband which was later determined to be a BB gun. Officers also recovered a stolen pair of sneakers which had been removed from packaging which was addressed to the home on Rosecliff Terrace. Officers continued their investigation and were able to recover several toys which had been removed from their packaging and discarded by the suspect on Clifondale Street. The suspect was placed in custody without incident after being positively identified on scene. The suspect will appear in West Roxbury District Court on charges of Larceny (Under $1200) and Receiving Stolen Property.

With the busy holiday shopping season upon us, the Boston Police Department would once again like to take this time to remind our residents to protect themselves from being targeted for package theft. Here's how:

Tips to protect yourself from a home delivery theft:

- Send the package to the residence of a trusted friend or relative who you know will be home. Be sure that the friend is ready and waiting to retrieve the package when the doorbell rings.

- Ask the package delivery company to hold the package if you will not be home (many have local delivery centers). While we can't promise that this service is available, there are companies that will hold a package for up to 5 days.

- Request that your package is marked "signature required." This requires the delivery person to stand by and wait until you're available to retrieve the package. You could also put a note on your door, requesting the deliverer go to your next door neighbor for the signature.

- Leave special instructions on where to deliver the package. A good place is on the side or back of the house, so that the package is out of sight from the road. Ask the delivery person to take and discard the note with him/her or leave it with the package.

- Use a company that provides a tracking service and check online to see when your package is scheduled to arrive.

- Have the items shipped to the nearest store for "in-store pick up." If you have an understanding boss, have your packages delivered to you at work.

If you have any questions, please do not hesitate to reach out to the Community Service Officers of your district. These simple tips can help make the holidays much less stressful and protect your deliveries. Have a safe and happy holiday!!!

City departments against Inspector General Position

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Boston City Council met for its regular meeting on Wednesday to discuss the creation of an Inspector General position for the City of Boston.

The proposal, issued by City Council President Andrea Campbell, comes after the Boston Economic Development Industrial Corporation (an arm of the Boston Planning and Development Corporation) had one employee, John Lynch, plead guilty to accepting $50,000 to influence a decision at the Boston Zoning Board of Appeals. At the time of the supposed incident Lynch was working as the group's Real Estate Manager and helped 27-29 H Street Developer Steven Turner net $500,000 for his redevelopment of the South Boston property.

Prosecutors have since asked for emails and documents from former ZBA member Craig Galvin, as he was listed as a real estate agent on multiple projects granted variances by the zoning board. No accusations of wrongdoing have been made, but all of this led Campbell to propose this Inspector General Position (as well as At-Large City Councilor Michelle Wu's call to abolish the BPDA and create a city-run planning department).

Flaherty covered the working session the City Council held on Dec. 2 and said that Massachusetts State Inspector General Glenn Cunha testified both during the working session and the public hearing held back in November that he was opposed to the City of Boston creating its own office of inspector general.

"And he provided specific testimony about recommendations, like to call his 24-hour fraud hotline as well as to call his office to provide training for city departments, the council or the Mayor's Office," he said.

The Boston Finance Commission also discussed its opposition to the measure as well as many of the redundancies both Executive Director Matthew Cahill and volunteer Richard Ianella pointed out would occur if the IG office was put together on the city level.

Campbell, along with District 1 City Councilor Lydia Edwards put out a joint statement on Monday, Dec. 9, refuting this opposition from the city and the state.

"While we value the role existing state and local authorities play, we must acknowledge those offices didn't detect any potential wrongdoing at City Hall over the past few years and never investigated related incidents," the statement read. "Some have suggested that a municipal Inspector General is redundant given the availability of the state Inspector General. Yet, again, that office never investigated any of the recent incidents that occurred at City Hall and instead Boston taxpayers funded investigations led by costly private attorneys whose reports were not public or independent.

"A City Inspector General would ensure City Government can work proactively, restore public trust, ensure transparency and accountability, and save taxpayers money in the process."

During last month's hearing, Cahill spoke on how his office enforces contracts and procurement law so as to prevent fraud and misconduct in the city's dealings. Campbell's point was more that the IG has a much broader mandate, as the ordinance is currently written, and looks at more than just finance.

Also during the hearing, Campbell asked if Cunha saw any value for a city-based IG, which she pointed out would have the responsibility of building relationships with city departments to facilitate such whistle blowers coming to the office.

"So that when they go in it's not like 'who are you, where are you coming from,' there's already a rapport and appetite to work together regardless of who's in the political space to ensure we get outcomes of transparency," she said.

Cunha said he feels one of the major points is that his agency has been able to strike back at fraud and problems in government through preventative education, so that officials know what's legal and do not, at least accidentally, break the law.

"We do have the staff and we do have the interest in doing as much as we can locally," he said. "I appreciate the fact that this has started a conversation that we can have not only with the City Council but also the mayor as to how we can work with the city, but I think one of the major things that I think is really important for an IG's office is the prevention piece of it. That's being proactive and that's training. You could start an office and hire some crack investigators who have great experience, maybe former prosecutors, maybe former police or FBI agents who could come in and set up a unit, so you may get the investigation piece, but the prevention piece?"

City Council President
Andrea Campbell

To take a look at the ordinance itself, what responsibilities and jurisdiction of the City IG if the position were to be created, go to boston.gov/sites/default/files/document-file-10-2019/1337.pdf

“We had more than 5,000 people a year show up,” he said. “And those are just the ones who walked through the yard, not including those who stopped in their cars and looked in from the outside.”

Canale said his father, Kenneth Canale Sr., originally started the tradition more than 45 years ago with his wife and children. The show changed and improved over the years to include flashing lights, train sets and animatronics elements, and the vision was always the same: to bring a little Christmas spirit to the neighborhood.

Outgoing City Councilor Tim McCarthy said the show and Canale Sr. meant a lot to him both growing up and for his own kids.

“Growing up in Readville with the Canale Family makes it easy to say wonderful things about them,” he said. “Mr. Canale was my Pony League coach and a great role model. ‘Running out a ground ball’ is something that reflects in all aspects of life, that’s a lesson learned early with Coach Canale. The ending of the Christmas light tradition is a sad one. I remember the joy as a kid, but it became even more special when Maureen and I took our boys over every year. We loved waiting to see what was new and enjoyed the old. God Bless this very special family and their gift to generations of Christmas lovers.”

Julia Mejia wins by one vote

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

In what has become the closest Boston City Council race in history, the Boston Board of Elections announced on Monday night that after an extensive recount, Julia Mejia has won the fourth At-Large City Council seat by literally just one vote.

"It really goes to reinforce the message that we've been promoting all along, that every vote matters," Mejia said at the announcement of the results.

Mejia's closest competitor, Alejandra St. Guillen, requested a recount after it was shown that she trailed Mejia by 8 votes after the first count in November, and results got closer and closer as the Election Board announced its findings. Lawyers for both candidates made arguments regarding contested ballots during the recount, and Mejia's arguments won out.

The Board stated it voted to allow one ballot that had been previously rejected and not to allow another, but did not state which vote went to which candidate. St. Guillen initial reaction after the recount was to contest the count in court, but later said she would accept the results. Neither city ordinances nor state law provides an automatic recount, regardless of the margin.

Candidates are required instead to petition city residents ward by ward and submit at least 50 signatures from each. Mejia's final tally came in at 22,492 votes, and St. Guillen had 22,491 after all 66,000 ballots were officially recounted. It's the first City Council recount since 2001.

Mejia, an immigrant from the Dominican Republic, came to Boston during the era of busing's introduction. She said she learned English from Sesame Street. Being the only English speaker in her house, she became her family's advocate and then the advocate of her community. She said she later spoke on behalf of many non English speakers at the Boston Public Schools, of which she is a graduate. Mejia ran on a platform of equity and advocacy. This was her first shot at the Boston City Council. She will be sworn in on Jan. 1, 2020.

In other Council news, District 8 City Councilor Kim Janey appears to have the votes to become the next Boston City Council President, following District 4 City Councilor Andrea Campbell as the second African American woman to be elected to the position of Council President.
