Community opinion shapes housing construction

Richard Heath
Staff Reporter

From Brighton to Hyde Park, Summit Avenue to Dana Avenue and Jamaica Plain in between the virtual voices of the community influenced the pace and often the size of housing in 2021.

As The Bulletin reports week after week, even a few can stall housing development, and lawsuits are not uncommon.

It looks like more of the same in 2022.

In September, the Boston Planning and Development Agency (BPDA) announced in a press release that community engagement officers (CEOs) had been hired to “further the BPDA’s mission on community-led development that supports growth reflecting the unique needs of each neighborhood.”

Jamarhl Crawford of Dorchester is the CEO for Jamaica Plain.

He officially began on Dec. 20 and, according to the BPDA, will be responsible for assisting BPDA “staff members with the coordination of all outreach efforts.”

It remains to be clarified how that will fit with the Jamaica Plain mayor’s office liaison who coordinates abutters meetings for housing development.

Two decisions at the close of the year illustrate the reach of community influence.

Conversions from two-family to three- or four-unit buildings are common in Jamaica Plain and while it does seem to do nothing to decrease the price of housing, it does increase the number of housing units in a community where land is scarce and expensive.

In 2021 there were seven conversions; 14 Meehan St. was the most contentious and although battled by the Stony Brook Neighborhood Association (SNA) it got zoning approval in June.

The project at 3243 Washington St. was poised to be the eighth; a conversion from a two-family to a four-family that was on the virtual agenda of the Dec. 15 JP Zoning Committee.

However, attorney Mark LaCasse, fresh off a contentious housing debate on Summit Avenue in Brighton two days earlier, voluntarily requested a deferral.

LaCasse said the building had no permanent occupants so displacement wasn’t an issue; all tenants are on a two-to-three-month short-term lease, he said.

The issue was size.

“We appeared at the Egleston Square Neighborhood Association (ESNA) and Brookside Neighborhood Association and, in essence, the objections were that going to four units was too much,” he said. “My client will ask the architect to

Ros Food Collective comes roaring back Need for volunteers still great

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Roslindale Food Collective has had a tough time recently.

The food collection organization commenced two years ago with the mission of collecting and storing perfectly fine food that grocery stores were getting rid of. The organization had troubling keeping a physical spot for its distributions, despite demand for food being high in the Parkway and Hyde Park neighborhoods. And recently, the lack of an industrial refrigerator almost put an end to the whole program.

“So if we rewind back a year ago, we were operating the program under the State of Emergency enacted by Gov. Charlie Baker,” said Program Director Charlie Burns. “Gov. Baker had put in effect an order that said we could distribute food during the pandemic without any kind of refrigeration. That State of Emergency ended on June 15, and within a matter of weeks we obtained a Farmers Market Permit from the Boston Inspectional Services Department (ISD), which allowed us to distribute shelf-stable bread and whole uncut produce.”

Burns said they had always planned on getting a food pantry license, but that required that they have refrigeration on premises. The organization this past fall found a

HPHS restores Weld-Grimké plot

— Abolitionists, — suffragettes recognized

Matthew MacDonald
Staff Reporter

On a recent cold and gray Saturday morning, Vicky Gall stood before a white marble headstone that highlights the family plot and final resting places of Theodore and Angelina Grimké Weld and Angelina's older sister, Sarah Grimké.

The weathered headstone – though not large – has a nearly glowing appearance and is easily visible as it is approached from Evergreen Walk in Mattapan's Mount Hope Cemetery. Less visible, but brand new, is the granite marker that memorializes Angelina as an "early abolitionist, advocate of women's rights, author and educator."

As inscribed, their lives spanned most of the 19th century. During its first half, all three rose to national prominence as major figures in the abolitionist movement. In its second half – during which the three settled in the Fairmount Hill section of Hyde Park – the Grimké sisters would go on to play leading roles in the women's suffrage movement.

The old headstone and newly installed marker are the result of a cleaning and repair effort funded by the Hyde Park Historical Society (HPHS) and spearheaded by Gall, one of its curators. The process, which began in the summer and was completed in the fall, was made possible by $2,000 in anonymous donations. The work itself was completed by Kevin Duffy of Line and Stone, Inc. monument and sculpture service in Arlington.

"What cost the most is that that there wasn't a stone for Angelina Grimké, for a number of reasons, and we thought we wanted to put one in," Gall said of the project. Angelina, who died in 1879, predeceased her husband by 16 years and – as Gall explained – does not have her name inscribed on the family headstone, possibly at her request.

Unable to locate any Weld-Grimké descendants, Gall and other HPHS members researched whether adding a marker would be appropriate, and "the general consensus was [that] we're not honoring her, we're just recognizing this person." She added that Tom Sullivan, General Superintendent of Cemeteries, had noted that people sometimes ask about the gravesite, and that this had influenced their decision, as well.

"Obviously, we're not part of the family," Gall explained. "We weren't going to carve it on there

[the headstone]. We just wanted to say how important she was."

The Weld-Grimké restoration project had been suggested to Gall by fellow HPHS curator/Grimké researcher Barbara Wicker after the installation of the Crumpler headstones in 2020, which Gall had coordinated. Dr. Rebecca Lee Crumpler – credited as the first female African American physician in U.S. history – had been buried, with her husband Arthur, in an unmarked grave in Hyde Park's Fairview Cemetery until an HPHS/Friends of the Hyde Park Library fundraising campaign remedied that condition.

"That, to me, is much more significant because they didn't have anything to begin with, and it was an overdue way of being respectful and honoring them" Gall said, comparing the Crumpler and Weld-Grimké projects. "This, I think, just shows that we care."

Hyde Park resident/HPHS curator Elisa Birdseye was with Gall at Mount Hope that morning, visiting the gravesite for the first time. Birdseye had played a key role in the official renaming of the Dana Avenue Bridge to the Grimké Sisters Bridge in late 2019, and gave a brief overview of the sisters' many accomplishments, including their public speaking, and their later participation in what may have been the first women's march – through Hyde Park in 1870 – to cast ballots that would not be counted in a local election.

"The Grimkés are little known – in terms of the suffrage movement and in terms of abolition – now, but in their day they were superstars," Birdseye said of the sisters, in relation to Gall's work. "Vicky has this very profound historical sense, and knows that we need to take care of and honor people who have historic significance in Hyde Park."

Gall noted the importance of the Weld-Grimké family to Hyde Park, while getting at her motivation regarding this project. "What really is concerning to me is when people say, 'Look at the condition of so-and-so's gravestone,' so this was an easy fix."

"Why talk about it?" she asked rhetorically, looking at the restored grave. "Just do it."

Wishing you a happy, healthy, and prosperous new year!

ACA reviews pedestrian safety, robberies and taquerias

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Allston Civic Association (ACA) met for its final meeting of 2021 recently and discussed public safety issues facing the neighborhood.

Boston Police Department (BPD) District D-14 Public Safety Officer Stephen Borne updated the ACA on the death of a pedestrian after a driver ran a red light on Soldiers Field Road heading onto the Leo Birmingham Parkway. Anderson A. Nova, 19, of Randolph, was taken into custody later on the night of Dec. 14 after crashing into another resident's vehicle.

Borne also updated the community on the death of another pedestrian crossing by the St. Elizabeth Hospital on Dec. 15. Nurse Ann O'Flaherty, of Westwood, was struck and killed at the intersection of Washington and Cambridge streets around 6 a.m. on Dec. 15.

"It's an ongoing active investigation, and I know officers were there from 6:15 a.m. to about 10:30 a.m. this morning processing the scene and bringing people into headquarters to give statements," Borne said.

ACA President Tony D'Isidoro pointed out that 2020 had the highest vehicle mortality rate in the country in the last 10 years.

"What I think is deceiving about it is that traffic is down because of the pandemic, but fatalities are way way up and the projections for 2022 are even worse," he said. "That is a disconcerting development taking place. We're out there fighting for safe bike and pedestrian streets, wide sidewalks and other improvements. We're just trying to make our streets as safe as possible with all this development, but it just shows you that a lot of people seem to be running out of patience and not doing a very good job of controlling their automobiles."

D'Isidoro also asked about the assault of an 82-year-old Brookline man who was chased by a group of 20 or 30 dirt bikers and ATV riders and then was eventually beaten by them when they all came into the Allston neighborhood. Borne said the investigation is being handled by the district police where the victim came from, the Fenway, and that court appearances should be coming soon after reviewing a lot of security footage of the incident and what led up to it.

"The other districts have the information they need to follow up with complaints in court, at least for some of them (the suspects)," he said. "Hopefully, the dominoes will fall for the rest of them. But I do know that with a lot of the news coverage, we've gotten a lot of information on a lot of them."

D'Isidoro said he felt these issues should be considered when the neighborhoods review future development projects, with a special focus on how the neighborhood can leverage development to help improve pedestrian safety.

"There's a lot of issues boiling to the top in 2022, and I think public safety, pedestrian safety and complete streets, all those issues that go with it are going to be very important in 2022 because there's going to be a lot of construction going on," he said. "We've got to make sure, especially for these streets that weren't designed for make the recommendations of ESNA after meeting with them last week.”

Cougar Capital, with Axilon Capital, were the developers of 3231 Washington St.

Zoning committee chair Dave Baron said he was confused.

“You’re losing a unit of housing,” he said. “What’s the reason for losing housing? It’s not that Washington Street is a country lane. We’ll just end up with three larger units.”

La Casse answered, “The bottom line is no four units. It’s a high level policy discussion,” he said. “The elephant in the room is we need more housing in the city.

“Every single neighborhood, every single corner, every single block we hear ‘I’m for more housing just not here.’”

Committee member Lee Goodman asked who was the community.

“What are we talking about? Six people in a room, a combined ESNA and Brookside?”

“How can we understand if they’re [the developer] speaking to a larger group or just two people who appoint themselves? We have to be careful not to let just a couple of people appoint themselves.”

Baron seemed to agree.

“People are concerned about the community process,” he said. “People who say no are the people who get heard. We’ve done about as much as we can. People in favor don’t participate as vigorously.”

Committee member Marie Turley, who is often a spokesperson for Union Avenue, said she disagreed.

“All of us, we talk off line.

We have conversations with our neighbors.”

Committee member Bernie Dougherty agreed.

“Small groups come out and are very active,” he said. “It’s foolish of them to make false statements.”

Carolyn Royce, a leader in ESNA, seemed to challenge LaCasse.

“Do you want a policy debate now?” she asked. “Our neighborhood doesn’t have a lot of voices. We think out things. We speak to our neighbors.”

Committee member Kevin Moloney made a motion to defer what was approved by the full committee.

“The attorney seems to be willing to make substantial changes,” he said.

The Jamaica Plain Neighborhood Development Corporation’s (JPNDC) proposed 59-unit, four-story senior supportive housing, replacing a long-vacant garage on Cheney Street at Grove Hall, was deferred at the virtual Dec. 14 Zoning Board of Appeals (ZBA) meeting largely because chairwoman Christine Araujo was uncomfortable because the neighbors seemed uncomfortable.

As reported by The Bulletin, it was approved by the BPDA on Sept. 13, 2021.

Architect Kendra Halliwell described it at the hearing as a campus design of a large apartment building linked by a grassy courtyard to two adjacent wood frame condominium houses.

It was an unusual ZBA meeting; there were no elected officials to testify, and the mayor’s Roxbury liaison, Jaysaun Grant, referred comments from the BPDA.

“We have no letters of support or opposition,” he said. “This was a BPDA-run project.”

This confused Connie Forbes of the Garrison Trotter Neighborhood Association (GTNA).

“Letters of opposition were sent,” she said. “I don’t know why they weren’t received. Garrison-Trotter signed a letter.”

The JPNDC met at least twice with GTNA since October 2020, although the pandemic prevented more active community discussions as project manager Ricky Guerro told The Bulletin.

Forbes said she was unsatisfied.

“They [JPNDC] did not complete the community process,” she said, although the BPDA board approved the Article 80 process of a public hearing and comment letters.

“Changes were made that we did not have time to evaluate. This project does not fit this community. The JPNDC has shut us out,” Forbes said.

Araujo was also interested in how the JPNDC fit in contextually. “How does this look contextually,” Araujo asked Halliwell. “How does it work with the community?”

Araujo was also concerned about context and repeatedly asked to see plans of the buildings in context with their surroundings.

“You are very represented, very active in Jamaica Plain,” she said “There are projects in Grove Hall?”

JPNDC executive director Teronda Ellis explained that it acquired and preserved 21 buildings on the outskirts of the Grove Hall business district, all with expiring use agreements that JPNDC renewed for low-income renters.

Three have completed renovations, she added.

“We have a long-standing relationship with many people in the community,” Ellis said.

Only one other person, who lives on Seaver Street, spoke in opposition. And although three spoke in favor none lived in Grove Hall.

Araujo remained unsatisfied.

“It seems to me that direct abutters have a level of discomfort. I make a motion to defer until appropriate relations between JPNDC and the community are strengthened,” she said.

Zoning board alternate member Hanny Barraza asked that 20-28 Cheney St., a three-story, nine-unit residential building, be taken out of the motion and approved.

Barraza - who is an architect - also recommended “the massing of the senior building be reconsidered and put in context.”

Barraza’s proviso was approved and the motion to defer passed over the objection of zoning board member Joe Ruggiero who said he was “unhappy with this process.”

The JPNDC will return to the ZBA on March 22, 2022.

Sugarloaf details dispensary plans to a split HPNA

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

Proponents from the proposed Sugarloaf Dispensary at 1174 River St. in Hyde Park came before the Hyde Park Neighborhood Association recently to go over the company's plan for the site.

Drago + Toscano attorney Matthew Eckel went through the plan for the site, and basically described an area with all the required security screening and non-enticing advertising that most recreational dispensaries in the city have presented since the recreational process started a few years ago. There would be a security checkpoint at the entrance, a waiting room, then another security check to the display room. Eckel said they would have active security on staff at all times.

"Everyone would be checked for ID; you cannot enter the establishment if you are under 21 years old, the establishment will have extensive security cameras, alarms, panic alarms and the product itself will be locked in a secure vault under video surveillance," he said. "The video surveillance will be throughout the interior and exterior of the facility, and so all areas will be covered. It's been shown that this improves safety and security around the establishment because of these cameras, which can be synced permanent home at the Trinity Lutheran Church at 1195 Centre St. in West Roxbury by the Arnold Arboretum. But now, after figuring out solutions to problems with the city and ISD, they needed to tackle refrigeration.

“It was definitely a long-term goal, but in December we had to go through that fire drill,” Burns said. “We learned that one of the major agencies that we work with that allows us to rescue food from some of our grocery stores in the area determined we were in violation of their policy with our lack of refrigeration.”

However, Burns said the Roslindale community stepped up big time.

“We had to get a refrigerator and we had to get it now,” she said. “The response from the community was tremendous. Within 72 hours somebody had donated a refrigerator and the community came forth with almost $20,000 in donations to support us. We were blown away by how much our community really backed us with our efforts. Within a few days of getting the refrigerator moved in we got it checked out, and less than a week after that the ISD – also incredibly supportive of our efforts – they came in and approved us after an inspection that allowed us to get our Food Pantry Permit, which is really huge for us because it means we can now distribute things like eggs, milk and gorgeous cut produce and fruit we get from these grocery stores.”

Burns said while the pandemic has ebbed and flowed throughout the past two years, the need for food programs has not waned.

“In fact it’s gone up,” she said. “We’ve got 35 million people in the U.S. who are food insecure and the forecast is that by the end of 2022 that’s going to be up to 50 million. Because of the demand now and in the future we are always looking for volunteers. We’re looking for drivers as we increase especially, because now that we have this permit we can increase our offerings.”

Burns said currently they pack one 35-pound box of food for families every week and they can pack the boxes into the trunks of their cars without ever coming into contact with said families.

The Roslindale Food Collective works under the umbrella of the Health Leads USA network and works with the Neighborhood Food Action Collaborative (NFAC) that serves Dorchester, Mattapan and Roxbury, and the Food Access Volunteers of Roslindale (FAVOR). She said they all work together to help provide as much food to as many people in need as possible.

“All acronyms all the time, but all about food access,” Burns said with a laugh. “We meet every couple of weeks and we share resources, we share notes, we talk about how to be collectively more sustainable and we share funding ideas. One of our big initiatives at NFAC right now is to train a force of people to help educate about SNAP.”

Burns said that the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP) is currently underutilized because many who qualify for the benefit aren’t aware of it or don’t know how to use it.

“Give a man a fish teach a man to fish,” she said.

residential use. We’ve got to make sure there are adequate investments to get those streets up to grade, especially with all the development in the city and the state.”

Borne also said that in the spate of robberies recently in the neighborhood, the department has arrested one juvenile suspect apparently involved in at least some of the incidents.

“He’s got a 90-day sentence from the courts and the other juveniles involved are all named, we know all of them and we’re seeking out complaints in Brighton Court for them,” he said. “They’ll be brought up when the court system brings them up and, hopefully, we might achieve the same result for them.”

In other news, the ACA also discussed a proposal from John Schall to expand his El Jefe’s Taqueria to the former site of City Smoke Shop at 957 Commonwealth Ave. Schall said his organization has been growing since they started six years ago in Harvard Square and have multiple locations in Boston, even despite the pandemic.

“During the pandemic we were never closed, not even for an hour and I never let go of a single person,” he said. “We were able to survive largely because we’re a fast-casual Mexican taqueria and we are set up to do takeout and delivery at the time the pandemic started. And that increased dramatically over the course of the pandemic.”

Schall said community involvement has been “integral” to his business. He has donated funds to help build a homeless shelter for teenagers, raised over $80,000 for a Harvard Football player who was paralyzed on the field, and supported organizations aimed at addressing food insecurity in the neighborhoods they have shops in. He said the store hours are 8 a.m. to 4 a.m.

“We’ve never had an issue with any of our neighbors for being open late at night,” he said. “We do all kinds of things for different community organizations and student groups where we are located, and we always locate next to or in the middle of university settings. That’s just the model I chose when we started El Jefe’s, because there is a large clientele looking for food while they’re studying late or for hospitality workers who are looking for food when they get out of work at 1 a.m. or 2 a.m., hospital workers who get out late from shifts and we do 40 percent of our business when other taquerias are closed.”

Prayer to the Blessed Virgin
(Never known to fail!)

Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine, splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in this necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my mother. Oh Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth, I humbly beseech thee from the bottom of my heart to succor me in my necessity (make request). There are none that can withstand your power. Oh Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (three times). Holy Mary, I place this cause in your hands (three times). Say this prayer for three consecutive days and then you must publish and it will be granted to you.
—S.G.H.

Novena to St. Clare

Ask St. Clare for three favors, 1 business, 2 impossible. Say nine Hail Marys for nine days, with lighted candle. Pray whether you believe or not. Publish on the ninth day. Powerful novena. Say “May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be praised, adored, glorified, now and forever, throughout the whole world. Amen.” Your request will be granted, no matter how impossible it may seem.
—S.G.H.

St. Jude’s Novena

May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be adored, glorified, loved and preserved throughout the world, now and forever. Sacred Heart of Jesus pray for us. St. Jude, worker of miracles, pray for us. St. Jude, helper of the hopeless, pray for us. Say this prayer 9 times a day. By the 9th day your prayer will be answered. It has never been known to fail. Publication must be promised. Thank you St. Jude. My Prayers were answered.
In gratitude for helping me.
—S.G.H.

Novena to Saint Martha

O admirable Saint Martha, I have recourse to thee and I depend entirely on thy intercession in my trials. In thanksgiving, I promise to spread this devotion everywhere. I humbly beg thee to console me in all my difficulties. By the immense joy that filled thy soul when thou didst receive the Redeemer of the world at thy home in Bethany, be pleased to intercede for me and my family, in order that we may keep God in our hearts and therefore, deserve to obtain the remedy to our necessities, especially the present situation that overwhelms me.
(mention request)

I implore thee, o Auxiliatrix in all needs; help us to overcome our difficulties, thou who so victoriously fought the devil. Amen.
Say one Our Father, one Hail Mary, one Glory be and three times the invocation: “Saint Martha, pray for us.” up with the Boston Police Department. And so it does provide an extra level of eyes on the street so to speak, for our proposal as well as the neighborhood at large.”
—S.G.H.

He added that as a consideration to the preschool nearby, the shop will close from 2 p.m. to 3 p.m. on weekdays to limit exposure to young children.

A Program Administrator for Little Voices Early Care and Education, sited just nearby at 1179 River St., said she had some concerns about the location of the dispensary. While Little Voices is an educational complex, it is not a pre-existing public or private K-12 educational facility, which requires a 500-foot buffer. So Sugarloaf can be legally sited where they are proposing.

“We serve over 45 kids at the community center right across the street from where you’re proposing, and I can’t fathom – this is the third meeting that I’ve been on – and I can’t fathom the lack of thought around this as it affects kids and families,” she said. “We’re in and out of the community center, right at that front door, and we’re looking right at that building. And closing for an hour-and-a-half during the day when all the kids get out doesn’t make any sense. This area is a hub for kids, and I find it very disrespectful to families who are trying not to make this the norm for their kids – it’s hard enough as it is. I just feel this is not the right community and this is not the right space in Hyde Park.”

Resident Stephanie Ruiz said she was in favor of the project, and said she felt kids in preschool would probably not be aware of cannabis, and therefore it wouldn’t be a huge danger. Eckel also reiterated that the shop would not have signs advertising what kind of shop it is.

“As a parent of two three-year-old children and one 14-year-old, I have no idea how in the world little children younger than seven years old can be impacted by a dispensary in the community,” she said. “They have no idea what marijuana is, they don’t know what a dispensary is. I would understand that argument for teenagers or kids who are older, because they know what it is, but for children who are younger than seven years old I am here to tell you with certainty I don’t think my three-year-old is going to walk by a dispensary and say ‘Wow, that looks fun, I want to go smoke marijuana now or I want to ingest marijuana.’”

Ruiz added she felt the dispensary would be a net benefit for the neighborhood.

“As to the concerns that I’ve heard, even during this call, I feel like there aren’t enough to outweigh the benefits to the individuals who are opening the dispensary but also for our community members,” she said. “I also want to point out that there are pharmacies and liquor stores in the area that provide products much more harmful than marijuana. I don’t see any harm in marijuana and I think that has been researched and proven.”

Resident Ned Young asked how security measures would be enforced in the future.

“It could be that 10 years from now you won’t have to have a security presence,” he said. “Your business is running bad, you need to cut costs, you might not necessarily have a consent decree, like what teeth, what sticks are you going to put in for the community to guarantee your behavior 10 years down the line? As somebody in business, I don’t operate unless there are incentives attached to things. I wish you the best of luck, but there’s got to be a better spot.”

Eckel said their security arrangements are mostly required by the state Cannabis Control Commission (CCC).

“It has certain requirements, you can’t just stop having cameras, you can’t just stop having security,” he said. “The CCC is the state regulatory body that basically ensures that these methods and operational procedures stay in place.”

Young also asked if they have considered other locations. Eckel said they had.

“We’ve been locked in at this location for over a year; we still do have time on the lease, but we are looking at other potential operations. But this is something that we filed on and we do have an interest in maintaining this space,” he said.

Council approves police grant despite trepidation

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Boston City Council recently voted unanimously to approve a $13.5 million regional grant from the Federal Fiscal Year 2021 Urban Areas Security Initiative.

The grant came under fire during its initial hearing when District 5 City Councilor Ricardo Arroyo asked numerous questions regarding oversight of the funds. Most urgent of his concerns was whether or not the city had oversight of the Boston Regional Intelligence Center (BRIC) and whether the scope of those funds conflicted with recent oversight laws and ordinances (specifically the Ordinance on Surveillance Oversight and Information Sharing) passed by the Boston City Council.

The Council and the BRIC have butted heads before, with the BRIC's informational Gang Database and how someone gets labeled into said database being a big point of contention. Councilors at the time contended that just being seen with a known gang member could get one on the list. The council ended up voting at one point to suspend the allocation of another $850,000 grant because of unanswered questions regarding the database and the BRIC's general oversight.

Arroyo asked Office of Emergency Management Chief Shumeane Benford question after question regarding how the funds would be allocated to the BRIC and how they are expected to be used. However Benford, almost every time, had to refer Arroyo to the BRIC.

To be fair, Benford and the OEM are not in any way in charge of the BRIC, but several councilors asked why the BRIC wasn't at the hearing on the grant funds. OEM however was in charge of overseeing the grant.

It looked like the funding could get held up, but outgoing District 4 City Councilor Andrea Campbell said the BRIC actually got back to the council quickly enough with the answers to their questions. Campbell said information received from the BRIC indicated that the new surveillance city lem, and returned again and again to Ireland. Yet no place was more fiercely loved than her beloved Hummocks in Portsmouth, RI, where summer after summer she sailed and swam and made countless chowders from the spoils of her family's quahogging expeditions. She especially cherished the holy days of Christmas and Christmas Eve and loved gathering with the family, first at Holy Name Church for Christmas Eve Mass, and then at an expansive family meal, accompanied by gifts and laughter, at her home. It was fitting that she passed away on Christmas Eve surrounded by her family. Funeral from the Gormley Funeral Home, 2055 Centre St., WEST ROXBURY, MA. ordinance will be followed.

“All of the new councilors and, of course, the Mayor will have to ensure that that happens, particularly with the procurement of any new additional technology” she said.

Campbell added the BRIC’s response to the council included more information than they received in the past.

“Which I did appreciate, especially in such a short timeframe,” she said.

“I will also stress that because this is a regional grant some of this is in the control of other municipalities. So what they procure, for example, for their safety and security may be different than what the City of Boston procures, and obviously they do not have the ordinance that the City of Boston has and so there are different provisions that are in play.”

Campbell said the funds will be in part used for critical infrastructure monitoring equipment, gunshot detection systems, analyst positions at the BRIC, and more.

“There is a license plate reader program, which does not include Boston, and it’s not a project that BPD participated in,” she said.

Arroyo said he was satisfied that most of the BRIC’s answers to his questions complied with the Surveillance Oversight Ordinance recently passed by the council and therefore he would vote to approve the grant funding.

“I think it’s important just because I was kind of stunned at the lack of amount of say in where these funds go that OEM had,” he said. “OEM couldn’t detail exactly what was going to be done with the grant or who was going to be doing what with the grant, whether or not, for instance, these analyst positions are going to be using the Gang Database or going to be focused on regional counterintelligence for terrorism or things of that nature.”

Arroyo said he looks forward to August of 2022 when they can bring in representatives from the BRIC to go over next year’s grant and what exactly it will be funding.

“This is something that we will have the ability to ensure compliance with moving forward. Because of the Surveillance Ordinance we should have more of a say and more information on what they do with these dollars, because this is not a small amount of money.”

The grant helps with response to “acts of terrorism” that include chemical, biological, radiological, nuclear and explosive incidents, and is distributed to Boston, Brookline, Cambridge, Chelsea, Everett, Revere, Winthrop and Somerville.
