Urban Edge gets back on track with 41-51 Walnut Ave.

Urban Edge (U.E.) is renewing its plans to build a 42-unit, income-restricted rental building at 41-51 Walnut Ave., the site of one boarded-up house and a second occupied house both owned by U.E. since 2016.

In the three years since it first proposed these plans, U.E. has a new executive director, Emilio Dorcelly, and both the Boston Planning and Development Agency (BPDA) and Urban Edge project managers have changed.

Also the ca. 1900 carriage house behind # 41 burned in April 2018 and razed in July 2020.

The Walnut Avenue project was put on hold in March 2019 when the opportunity arose for Urban Edge to take two light industrial buildings at 1599 Columbus Ave. and build a 65-unit, six-story, income-restricted apartment building.

The BPDA sponsored an Article 80 public meeting on 41-51 Walnut Ave. on Oct. 25, 2017, as reported in The Bulletin.

A second Article 80 meeting was planned after U.E. studied the possibilities of first time homeownership in the five-story building. When this proved financially unfeasible, U.E. moved onto 1599 Columbus Ave. instead when pending funding cycles became more favorable for rental housing.

In one of the fastest turn-arounds in recent social housing history, 1599 Columbus Ave. received JP zoning committee, BPDA and Boston Zoning Board of Appeals (ZBA) approvals between Dec. 12, 2019 and Jan. 14, 2020.

At an Aug. 24, 2020 virtual meeting with the Wardman-Westminster Working Group, the new U.E. project manager Jonathan Tarleton explained four significant changes.

LANA reviews 104-108 Walter progress Outlook good for conservation

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Longfellow Area Neighborhood Association (LANA) met virtually on Monday, Sept. 14, and considered the current updates for 104-108 Walter St.

LANA Board Member Kathleen McCabe said while there's no signed contract yet, the outlook is good. In the past, the neighborhood group has had to fight several different developers to keep that section of land relatively clear and have it remain forested wetland. While there is a house on 104 Walter, LANA members have contended for almost two decades that the land at 108 Walter St. is wetlands and should be protected as such. McCabe said that dream is one step closer now.

She said the entirety of the land was put up for sale in late June, and while that did set off some alarm bells in people's minds, it was also an opportunity.

"We've been advocating the city to acquire 104 and 108 Walter, and now the city has applied for a land grant from the Commonwealth (of Massachusetts) for matching funds to help pay for the purchase of 108 Walter St. for conservation purposes," she said.

McCabe said LANA has also applied for Community Preservation Act (CPA) funds

BPDA approves 11 Faneuil St. condos

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Boston Planning and Development Agency (BPDA) approved a proposal for 42 condominium units at 11 Faneuil St. in Brighton.

Project Manager Michael Sinatra said the project will include four stories, 51 parking spaces, and 52 bicycle storage spaces, and has gone through the Article 80 Small Project Review.

"The current site is a 19,040 square-foot parcel consisting of two former businesses, Meineke and Bagman," he said.

The building is slated to have six Inclusionary Development Policy (IDP) affordable units, with a unit mix of studio apartments, one-bedroom, two-bedroom and three-bedroom units. He said 47 of the 51 parking spaces will be semi-automated through a stacking system, with the rest being visitor and handicapped parking.

"The total development cost will be $13.5 million," he said.

Development attorney Jeff Drago, of Drago & Toscano Associates, said the owner and

Ed Walsh Foundation working on virtual Wiffle Ball Tourney this year

Jeff Sullivan Staff Reporter

The COVID-19 pandemic has hit many local charities in Boston very hard.

Most rely on fundraising events that require a lot of people to get in relatively close proximity to each other, and that's just not possible right now, which means the seventh-annual Ed Walsh Foundation Wiffle Ball Tournament will take on a different flavor this year on Oct. 12.

The event usually attracts hundreds, if not thousands, of players, onlookers and well-wishers to help raise money for local charities and celebrate Firefighter Lt. Ed Walsh's life.

Roslindale and Hyde Park resident Ed Walsh lost his life with West Roxbury resident and Firefighter Michael Kennedy in March of 2014 during a fire in the Back Bay. Walsh's wife Kristen said her husband had a deep-rooted love of community and sense of service. He also loved baseball, and the foundation has hosted this fundraiser every year since his death to honor his memory and the local institutions he supported.

"It was something for the whole community, I mean it's literally little kids all the way up to very senior people that can all play against each other, that's the beauty of it," Kristen Walsh said. "It really celebrates Ed, because he was a baseball guy and grew up playing wiffle ball with his

District 4 City Councilor Andrea Campbell said the establishment of a civilian review board in Boston has been a long time coming.

Council, Police Reform TF, recommends new police oversight board

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

Last week, the Boston City Council held a hearing to discuss an ordinance that would create a new city-run, independent board to oversee police operations and, just a couple of days later, Mayor Marty Walsh's Boston Police Reform Task Force (PRTF) released a set of recommendations urging the same.

The PRTF recommended the creation of an independent Office of Police Accountability and Transparency (OPAT) that would have full investigatory and subpoena power to replace the Community Ombudsman Oversight Panel (CO-OP). District 4 City Councilor Andrea Campbell said in the hearing two days previous that this was a necessary step to make sure that any civilian review board would have teeth to enforce its oversight powers.

Campbell said for decades she, her predecessor Charles Yancey, the City Council, residents and advocates have been pushing for this kind of oversight.

"And for numerous reasons, including opposition from administrations, unions and some council colleagues, that has not happened," she said. "Over the last few years I've filed three hearing orders and I had several conversations internally about the importance of establishing this board, all of which were either ignored by the administration or dismissed as a topic not worth discussing. While I applaud the work of the task force and value the members of that task force tremendously, the mayor has had numerous opportunities to partner me, this body and former CO-OP panelists to make this happen. It is sad that it has taken the death of George Floyd and many others to get to this moment where we even have

There is certainly a lot more to complain about these months than the state of jelly donuts. At number one there is the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic, with its deaths and illnesses; there are untold people out of work; there are small businesses boarded up; there are schools not going back to session; there are sports competitions that are not happening; there are divisive politics wracking the country; there are injustices and unrest in the streets; there are landlords not collecting rent; there are renters not able to pay rent; there are homeowners not able to pay city taxes.

Be those as they may, there is still the fate of jelly donuts. And I promise not to dredge up here the much revered and sorely missed Swensen's Bakery formerly on Roslindale's Cummins Highway, down from the Washington Irving Middle School, perhaps the greatest of that genre of stores, because I purchased only their birthday cakes and other dessert pastries.

Jelly donuts

My Kind of Town/
Joe Galeota

Having never baked one or worked in a bakery—my mother used to call them “bake shops”—I suppose I have no right to complain. But—and there is a big “but”—I have devoured enough of them in my lifetime to qualify as an aficionado of sorts. Admittedly, I'm not in the same league as Brighton's David Brooks or West Roxbury's Ed Gillen and Dick Leahy. If I had a nickel for every tie that has been stained by jelly dribbling down or a nice shirt picking up a glob of jam during the consumption of such a donut, there'd be no need for me to cut coupons out of newspapers in my old age.

It seems that the only way to wreck a jelly donut during its production stage is to not put enough jelly in it. If there's not enough jelly—whether grape, strawberry, raspberry, cherry, or whatever—it seems like false advertising to label them as “jelly donuts”: a more appropriate term might be a “donut with a smattering of jelly.” Jelly donuts should really gush with jelly just as Brigham's Just Sprinkles ice cream—the new name for its former Just Jimmies ice cream—exudes a goodly number of chocolate sprinkles throughout every.

And so it was with disappointment that the other day in Provincetown I chose to buy a raspberry turnover at a so-called ethnic bakery highly touted by the concierge onboard the Boston-to-Provincetown ferry. Anticipation ran high that the $3.75 turnover would be almost bursting with raspberry jam (I know there's a distinction between “jam,” “preserves,” and “jelly” but they're all the same to my non-distinguishing palate.) But gush it did not: it was barely smeared, shall I say, with raspberry jelly, with a huge puff of air elevating the middle part to create the illusion that the turnover would be filled with the appropriate ingredient.

Ah, if I had only been forewarned, there would have been minimal disappointment. Not too much to look forward to in these dismal days but a good jelly donut/turnover should be one item.

to acquire the property, and have had positive conversations with city officials like Chief of Environment, Energy and Open Space Chris Cook and Chief of Housing/Director of the Department of Neighborhood Development Sheila Dillon.

“We've had encouraging discussions that have been very collegial,” she said.

McCabe also said they have hired two architectural firms to assess the feasibility of keeping or tearing down the house at 104 Walter St. In either case, the plan is to reserve space for no more than four units of affordable homeownership.

“We got good news last week from Chris Cook and Sheila Dillon, and they have both indicated that the mayor is supportive of this concept and Chris was authorized to send a letter of intent for the city to acquire 104-108 Walter,” she said. “While that's not a signed contract, it is encouraging.”

McCabe said they will be hosting a site visit for discussions with residents at 6 p.m. on Thursday, Sept. 17, with more in the works, but not currently scheduled. The group will meet with residents at the corner of Selwyn Street and Robken Road to talk for about 45 minutes about the future of the site and what residents can do to help.

McCabe also said they would be meeting virtually on Oct. 7 and 21 at 7 p.m. to host a two-part community workshop and charrette to have conversations regarding the future of 104-108 Walter, and to get input from residents about what they'd like to see.

“We'll be there to answer and listen and brainstorm to get your ideas,” she said.

The membership also voted unanimously for the seven candidates who put their names in the ring for the LANA Board. They include Rachel Young, David Ween, Pauri Pandian, Susan DiMatteo, Wayne Beitler, Jonna Iacono and Raphael Sulkovitz.

LANA Founding Member Michael Fitzgerald also said goodbye to the LANA Board, and received certificates of recognition for his 24 years in the group from the Boston City Council and Boston Mayor Marty Walsh. While he said he will continue as a regular member of the neighborhood association, he felt the board needed some new blood.

“It's been a fun time and I've gotten to know a lot of people in the neighborhood and the city,” he said. “It's nice to see we have a lot of new faces to continue our work... But you'll still see me wandering the neighborhood with my big white fluffy dog.”

Fitzgerald said to the new members of the LANA Board that the neighborhood association has built a reputation with the city government, developers and property owners as a “reasonable” association and he felt the new members should keep this in mind when faced with votes in the future.

“We understand that people with property want to be able to do things with it, and sometimes people don't like those things,” he said. “LANA's job is to represent the community, and even though you might personally be for or against a particular project, keep in mind when you sit on the board that you represent the community at large. We're willing to work with developers and people who have projects in our community to hopefully get a good turnout for everybody involved. We very rarely say no to something; we try to work to get the best project for everybody involved and I hope people keep that in mind going forward.”

Arnold Arboretum Director Steven Schneider also updated the neighborhood on how the park is reallocating staff resources to better serve residents in the time of COVID-19. He said since the visitor center is now closed for the foreseeable future, they're bringing the visitor center to their visitors.

“So we have been, weather depending, taking three to four days a week to put our visitor center staff at different gates around the Arboretum,” he said. “We're going to continue doing that and we're going to try to get down to the Archdale Bridge next. We're moving all over the place and bringing the visitor center to different gates, and we hope to see some of you at these mobile visitor engagement points.”

McCabe also discussed LANA's position on the current proposal for the redesign of the Centre Street/Walter Street intersection, adjacent to the Arboretum. She said the design leaves a lot to be desired.

“It's underwhelming and I think they're designing it to a budget instead of designing it as a once-in-a-generation undertaking, which it is,” she said. “We did file a letter saying they needed to take into account that it is on a parkway and it is a landscaped area – it's right next to the Arboretum – and they need to restore the landscaping and not just pave it.”

friends and family, and so it's just a fun day and everyone looks forward to it."

The foundation has raised hundreds of thousands of dollars for local charities, including Franciscan Children's organization, the Greater Boston YMCA, Parkway Pop Warner, Parkway Little League, Parkway Girls Softball, the Jason Roberts Challenger League, Watertown Youth Baseball and Softball, the Watertown Challenger League, the Watertown Boys & Girls Club, after school programs, the Special Olympics, NEADS, the Boston Public Schools and local families in need.

"We hated the idea of having to cancel the event and letting everyone down, so this is the best we can do this year. Our message is 'hey, go out and have your own little game with your family or neighbor, have a fun safe day with a little competition of your own,'" she said. "We know groups of friends and family, for instance high school friends and college friends, who plan on putting on their own mini games and tournaments together. It will be different, but I hope it will still be a fun day for people."

Walsh said they can't tie any fundraising to this event, but residents are encouraged to donate at <http://edwalshfoundation.org/>.

"We're promoting Columbus Day as the Walsh Wiffle Ball Day and we want to let people know that we won't be able to get together at Billings Field and do our typical event," she said. "Maybe people can have a little friendly competition and perhaps pool five bucks a person or something. We think maybe we'll get a little bit from that, you know from a small family wager, but we're not trying to do any fundraising because I don't feel we can do that to people."

Walsh said the regular spring fundraiser did not happen this year and the marathon team had to go virtual, but she said the community has come together for the Foundation in the past and she knows they will in the future.

"We're still able to support all the charities we have in the past," she said. "Last year we were able to donate at the end of the year a considerable amount through the Donors Choose program to various teacher campaigns in the neighborhood. Teachers looking for various items or trips for their classrooms ask on this site and we were very fortunate in that we were able to give a lot to teachers and support our Boston Public Schools. Teachers, now more than ever, they need a lot of help. They're trying to adjust their classrooms and make it work for a new type of setup where kids can't share resources, so they all have to buy new stuff individually."

Prayer to the Blessed Virgin
(Never known to fail!)
 Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine, splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in this necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my mother. Oh Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth, I humbly beseech thee from the bottom of my heart to succor me in my necessity (make request). There are none that can withstand your power. Oh Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (three times). Holy Mary, I place this cause in your hands (three times). Say this prayer for three consecutive days and then you must publish and it will be granted to you.

a mayor's task force to look at policing reforms."

Campbell said the CO-OP has been ineffective in providing police accountability, and noted that no one from Walsh's administration was there to actually weigh in on the subject. She said the creation of the new Civilian Review Board with the powers to call in witnesses and the resources to hold the department accountable would go a long way. She said it would be important that this board be independent from the Boston Police Department, and have appointments from the Boston City Council, and the mayor.

She added the board would also have power to recommend disciplinary procedures consistent with guidelines established with the BPD Commissioner in collective bargaining negotiations.

"It also establishes ways to file complaints, both in person, online, and by phone, taking into account language access and allows our police officers and personnel to file complaints through the board and it calls for continual data collection and transparency," she said. "Our ordinance incorporates best practices from other civilian oversight boards from across the country, including New York, Atlanta and Oakland."

Executive Director of the New York City Civilian Complaint Review Board Jon Darche spoke with the council about the best practices that have worked in the city that never sleeps. He said his office has existed for decades but took its current form as an independent agency in 1993, and is the largest independent civilian oversight committee in the country. He said they have 15 members and 200 staff members, most of whom are investigators, and they receive about 5,000 complaints a year. He said they investigate uses of excessive force, abuse of authority, offensive language and discourtesy, and added the power to subpoena not only officers, but camera footage from commercial establishments, personal cell phone video and body cameras from the police themselves gives the board a broad picture to look at when investigating a complaint.

"Another important facet of our board is the Administrative Prosecution Unit, which, in the most serious events of misconduct, brings cases against members of the NYPD in administrative disciplinary hearings," he said. "The unit is made up of about a dozen attorneys and has prosecuted more than 600 officers since its conception in 2013. Most notably, Officer Daniel Pantaleo, who was found guilty of using a fatal choke hold on Eric Garner, was fired from the NYPD last year after the AP prosecutors argued for his termination."

Committee on Government Operations Chair and District 1 City Councilor Lydia Edwards said the next steps for this ordinance include holding a future working session to hammer out the details. Those include subpoena powers, independent structure, independent access, disciplinary actions, appointment power from the mayor, the council and possibly a civic group, consistent data collection and publishing, looking at how much money would be needed to make the board effective and where it would come from and audit powers.

1. Reduce costs on the project to make it more competitive for city and state funding. Tarleton said the project, estimated to cost $17 million in 2017, would be closer to $25 million in 2021.

2. To address community concerns about height, the new 2020 plan by the original architects DREAM Collaborative now creates a set-back on the fifth floor to reduce the visual scale of the building

3. To create the same number of affordable apartments, the units from the setback would be moved to the ground floor rear of the building. This would reduce parking from 28 spaces to 14.

“This will also bring the project more in line with the city’s priority of promoting non-car use and help us control costs of the proposal,” Tarleton told the meeting callers who were supportive of the changes.

The most dramatic change was in response to preserve 51 Walnut Park, the old Thompson House built about 1885.

“Our plan has always included the demolition of both buildings,” Tarleton said. “We’re in the process of assessing the feasibility of moving 51 Walnut off-site to preserve the building.”

“We don’t know if this is structurally or financially feasible,” he said.

According to Emily Loomis, Director of Real Estate, 51 Walnut Park, which is occupied, “is owned by an affiliate of Urban Edge.”

“The residents will be temporarily or permanently relocated as applicable,” she told The Bulletin the next day.

“We want to prioritize the building to more family size units,” Tarleton said at the virtual meeting. “More two-and three-family size units.”

“The income mix will be from 30 percent to 60 percent area median income (AMI) with 17 units at 30 percent AMI. Twenty nine units will be two bedrooms,” he added.

“We’re still in the early stage discussion with BPDA” Tarleton told The Bulletin the next day.

“Stephen Harvey is the new BPDA project manager. We expect to hold another Article 80 meeting due to it being three years since the prior meeting, and the desire to update the community on certain changes. The potential of moving number 51 is not part of the Article 80 process.”

Tarleton said that Urban Edge would apply for city funds in the fall of 2020. “We’re applying for both the Neighborhood Housing Trust and Department of Neighborhood Development funding, the city’s Inclusionary Development funds and Home Funds. These appear a good fit for the project.”

developer for the project is City Realty, and the architect is Embarc studios. He said the construction phase of the project will create 70 construction jobs on the site.

“This is an existing commercial structure that had been empty for a number of years and we felt this use, creating housing, would be much more conducive to the area,” he said.

“There are a number of community benefits as well, including a dedicated bike room with 52 bike spaces, a $48,000 contribution to the Boston Transportation Department for updates in transportation and a public transportation information station that would show schedules, because we are, for those folks who are moving here, we are near BlueBike stations, bus routes and of course the Boston Landing (Commuter Rail Station) site.”

Drago said the proposal now contains an additional affordable unit, one more than required, after working with residents on the project, as well as with District 9 City Councilor Liz Breadon’s office.

“What was required was five units and we have six,” he said. “We also agreed, because we know homeownership is important, to have 60 percent of the units deed-restricted on this site, which we put in our master deed and trust in the condominium units. Again, on our area median incomes (AMI) in speaking with the BPDA, Councilor Breadon and the Mayor’s Office, to one of the units being at 60 percent, three at 80 percent and two at 100 percent AMI, along with the rest of our mitigation that was committed to.”

Drago said they will build 14 studio units, 14 one-bedroom units, six one-bedroom plus units, five two-bedroom units and three three-bedroom units.

“We did have a robust community process that influenced some changes as we moved forward,” he said. “Some of the modifications we went through with the community included reducing the height from five stories to four, a complete majority brick in the front for our exterior treatments; our unit count went from 54 down to 42, our gross square footage reduced from 62,445 to 41,525, and our floor-to-area ratio went from 3.2 to 2.13 as we worked through this process.”

The Board also voted to grant a partial certificate of completion for the second building at 40 Guest St. at Boston Landing, one of three. They also approved a completed certificate of completion for 3200 Washington St. in Jamaica Plain.

The Board also voted to execute an affordable housing agreement for one on-site inclusionary development unit and a contribution to the IDP Fund for the 69 Cummins Highway Project. Housing Policy Assistant Elizabeth Torres presented the 12-unit home ownership project.

Recreo Coffee & Roasterie announced recently the diagnosis of colon cancer of longtime employee Alex Cruz.

Owner Miriam Morales said he's currently going through treatment and has helped to raise $12,000 for the 24-year-old, but the six-months of chemo will require more.

"He's one of my main baristas and he also runs my farmers market in the summer," she said. "He's my expert-in-training on how to do drinks. He's got a good position with us and actually people think he's my son and we're very close to him.

"He used to work at another small coffee shop in Framingham and he just had a passion about coffee, he loves coffee, he loves the people and he loves the latte art," she said. "He really connects with people. When we had his interview he was just so friendly and in touch with people and their feelings."

Morales said the community support has been amazing. She said the regulars come in to chat with him and ask how he's doing.

Morales said he's going through treatments every other week, but he still wants to come in to work. It might seem strange, but Morales said he has a desire to keep working and keep healthy.

Morales said Cruz's chemotherapy started about a month ago and though it was definitely hard, she said Cruz seems determined to power through it.
