City presents WR Road Diet Plan

Staff Reporter

Hundreds came out to the Ohrenberger School in West Roxbury on Wednesday, May 31, to hear from and comment on the plan presented by the City of Boston for reducing lanes on Centre Street.

The meeting detailed the plan reducing from four travel lanes to three lanes – two travel and one turning lane in the middle – on Centre Street from the LaGrange Street intersection to the West Roxbury Parkway (Holy Name Rotary). Boston Mayor Michelle Wu said this will result in the loss of about eight parking spaces in the business district and will leave space for protected bike lanes via flex posts.

The road diet discussion originated in 2019 after resident Marilyn Wentworth was struck and killed by a motorist at the intersection of Centre and Hastings streets.

“The car hit my wife and she went flying in the air, and landed quite a few feet away,” her husband Alton Wentworth said at a public meeting about a month after the incident.

The road diet idea was pitched then and later dropped after a good deal of pushback from residents in the community, but Wu has since brought it back. The meeting was about split in terms of support and opposition. One resident close to Marilyn spoke in support of the proposal.

“I am Matt Wentworth,” he said. “I am from West Roxbury. I was born here, raised here, grew up here, still live here, own a home here. It’s not easy for me to be here today. I love this community, and that’s the reason why I am here, because I do care about this neighborhood very much. My mom lived here for over 65 years. She loved Centre Street. She spent a lot of time on Centre Street; shopping, meeting with friends, and then in 2019 she was crossing the street to go to her favorite coffee shop and was struck by a car in the inner travel lane and killed, in front of her daughter, in front of the entire neighborhood.

The driver of the vehicle that struck Marilyn stated they did not see her, in part because of the sun glare but also in part because the vehicle in the outer lane (the lane closest to the sidewalk) was blocking the view.

“I believe in the city’s plan,” Wentworth said. “I believe the lane reduction is the only way to make Centre Street safer for the most vulnerable members of our community, our senior citizens and our children. I think this needs to happen, and I hope it does. Thank you for listening.”

Alton Wentworth was also at the meeting, and while he did not speak he applauded his son’s words, and had supported

While the meteorologists were predicting a very rainy start to the Corrib 5K in West Roxbury on Sunday, that didn’t stop the more than 1,300 runners from coming out and making life in the Parkway just a little bit better for children.

The 29th Annual Corrib Road Race kicked off at noon at the intersection of Centre and LaGrange streets in West Roxbury to the cheers of thousands of onlookers and runners. The race benefits the Corrib Charitable Trust, which has raised and distributed more than $1 million to the community over the years.

Race organizer and Corrib co-owner Tony Bligh said it was an amazing day, and added he was very thankful to the community for

The Bulletin has been looking at young populations getting involved in the inner workings of the city and how they have been able to affect change in their neighborhoods. Now it’s Hyde Park’s turn.

The series is built on highlighting the work of youths and how more and more young people are getting involved in organizing around their community, focused on the issues affecting them.

In Hyde Park, it could be characterized as a mixed bag.

Hyde Park has a bunch of community and neighborhood organizations, from the neighborhood associations to the business boosters to the Community-Input Advisory Board. There’s a lot of organizing in Hyde Park.

The newly formed Arborway bus garage subcommittee, of the Jamaica Plain Housing Committee, met with MBTA officials and architects on May 23.

It was chaired by Sue Cibulsky of Rossmore Road who said, "This will be a short presentation, followed by dialogue."

There were five MBTA of-officials and two architects from Jacobs Engineering on the call, who are designing the 200 all-electric bus fleet garage.

Senior staff of the MBTA included Scott Hamwey, Director of bus modernization, and Alexandra Markiewicz, Manager of bus facility modernization.

This was the fifth community meeting attended by Hamwey and Markeiwicz since

HPNA questions project zoning... or lack thereof

Matthew MacDonald
Staff Reporter

The Hyde Park Neighborhood Association (HPNA) met on Thursday, June 1 for a busy hour-and-a-half meeting that featured several appointments and drew about 20 attendees.

In the main appointment, members of Whiteacre Properties' development team presented its plans for 1081 River St., where it intends to tear down the two-family house currently standing on the 14,000-square-foot lot and replace it with a four-story, 28-rental unit building. The block and immediate area is comprised primarily of single- and multi-family houses, but 1081's next-door neighbor at 7 Lincoln St. is a four story, 16-unit building.

This was Whiteacre Properties' second appearance before the HPNA; its first – during the May meeting – was unannounced, with principal Joni Shehu and project architect Eric Zachrison introducing themselves and the project, and then answering questions.

Last Thursday, Zachrison made a full slide presentation, and fielded questions from HPNA members and site abutters, many of which focused on their issues with the City's perceived disregard of both the zoning code and the guidelines for obtaining variances.

"It's a really huge impact in that area," abutter Manuel Valdez said of what would be an influx of 28 units worth of people and vehicles to his block. "To me, I don't care how beautiful it's going to be, I just care how it's going to impact my neighborhood."

Responding to that, Zachrison – who fielded all of the questions, even though Shehu was also there – noted that "it is the place where urban planners – where the City... it feels the density

At a recent Zoom meeting the public was updated on the DCR's plans for Havey Beach, sited along the VFW in West Roxbury. Or as a caller-in said, "Why call it a beach if there's no swimming?" Hmmm. A good point, as West Roxbury lacks an outdoor DCR pool, which used to be a mere few yards away but closed two decades ago.

Proposals for rebranding included Havey Cove and Havey Landing. I particularly like the thought-provoking, if not somewhat lengthy, renaming submission by a David Tornado, "Have(y) It Your Way" because of the activities that will be available there after construction is done—kayaking, exercising, walking, picnicking, bicycling, bird-watching (but no wading even on the hottest of days).

A lengthy, serpentine boardwalk embedded in nature over the marsh and between the trees will connect the southern end of the proposed development to Chares River Road, the street next to the hockey rink and perpendicular to the VFW.

My Kind

The elephant in the room was not in a room; it was actually in the parking lots, because there is very little parking.

There will be two handicap-accessible spaces near the brick building, formerly a stable, as well as a couple of parking spaces for staff. The former tack room there will be expanded, with food offerings available. There will be new pedestrian-activated lights—hopefully not a steady red/green—to allow crossings of the VFW there by pedestrians and bikers.

Closer to the hockey rink, on top of the site of the former swimming pool, will be a few more parking spaces available to the general public. But Charles River Road will bear the brunt of public parking. And here's hoping that the huge residential building, erected on the other side of the road with a questionable number of parking spaces allotted for its inhabitants, will not lure them to park near the rink, thereby thwarting the public's parking for Havey.

This is all years away. And don't worry: no trees along the middle of the VFW will be taken down, and no life-guards will need to be hired.

should be put: not in the neighborhoods, but more on the busy streets. This is that kind of site." When pressed on the size and density of the building, he added that the lot is large for its zoning – 2F5000 – and that multiple two-family houses could be built on it.

When asked about why that approach wasn't being taken, Zachrison replied that – in that scenario – they would be able to provide neither affordable units (the proposed building would have six), nor a building community room, nor community benefits. "The idea is that this is the kind of a lot that can provide a bigger housing environment," he said.

This led to an exchange between him and HPNA President Mimi Turchinetz regarding reducing the size of the building. It was then that a voice from the group chimed in, and then others murmuring the same words: "Just follow the rules. Just follow the rules."

Frank O'Brien spoke further on the lack of respect for the zoning code. "People bought property on the reliance on the zoning, made investments in their property on the reliance on the zoning. There was a clear path if people wanted to rezone," he said of its importance. "The proper way to do it is not through these egregious variances."

Referring to Zachrison's comments, he also asked for the basis of 1801's variance hardship, citing a Superior Court case (Van Buren v. South Boston New Housing, LLC) in which it was ruled that public policy choices – such as increased affordable housing – are not a legal basis to obtain zoning relief.

"The sooner we start following the rules, the better off we're going to be," he concluded.

For more project information, visit the BPDA's website at www.bostonplans.org.

Lokita Jackson updated the HPNA on Hyde Park's Community Input Board (CIB) and its 2023 goal of establishing a baseline community benefits agreement between Hyde Park as a whole, and incoming developers. "And then, after that, each segment area in Hyde Park can build upon that according to whatever they want from that developer in their own community," she said of the two-tiered plan the CIB is trying to establish.

The CIB – of which Jackson is the facilitator and co-founder – is looking for input from any and all stakeholders within Hyde Park. The next CIB meeting will be held virtually at 7 p.m. on June 29. For information, email cab.tsar@gmail.com, or call 617-431-8005.

Robert Lewis – Hyde Park liaison for Chief of Streets Jascha Franklin-Hodge – also introduced himself and his position. Streets is part of the Mayor's cabinet, and its chief oversees the City's Public Works and Transportation departments. The office also works to implement the Mayor's transportation priorities, including reliable and affordable transit service, safer neighborhood street design, and a network of bicycle routes.

Lewis is responsible for Hyde Park and 12 other neighborhoods, and he advised residents with street or transit related issues to first call 311 to open a case, and then contact him with the case number in order for him to better follow up on it.

To contact Lewis, call 617-635-4006 or email Robert.Lewis@Boston.gov.

In other business, the City Council's working draft of a tree ordinance was discussed. Its goal is to protect and increase the city's public and private tree canopy, but – according to Turchinetz and O'Brien – community input, as well as the appeal process have been ongoing points of contention, with the HPNA in favor of strengthening both.

The next HPNA meeting will be on July 13 at the Municipal Building/BCYF (1179 River St.). For information, email hydeparkneighbors@gmail.com.

Letters to the Editor

SO, DO WE ALL HANG TOGETHER?

To the Editor:

As I read the news story on fixing the traffic on Centre Street (WR Centre safety meetings), there are numerous meetings coming up held by the City of Boston, but to do what? Listen to the community's residents or telling the community this is what's coming? Sometimes it is difficult to understand much of the mumble jumbo. Am I right?

Right now our city's neighborhoods seem under attack. We have BPDA trying to tell us what kind of new housing is good for us and then we have public works fixing our roads often because of all the new development getting shoved down our collective throats.

I live way over in East Boston and what is happening in West Roxbury isn't much different than what is happening in Eastie. I have lived in Roslindale too and have family living there, and I also have family living in West Roxbury. I am no stranger to this side of the city too or its issues.

As I previously mentioned there is talk of road diets over in East Boston too and I feel we all get doubled-teamed by folks in City Hall. On one side is BPDA and on the other side DPW. I plan on attending the West Roxbury Safety Association meeting on June 14 at the Elks on Spring Street at 6:30 pm. I want to hear directly from those residents who often feel shutout from any real decision making. Government actions are our business, especially when we get down to political moves and agendas at the local neighborhood level.

Those in power or connected to those in power will keep on pushing all of us until we raise up with loud voices stopping them dead in their tracks. I also think it would be good if folks across the city start looking out for each other more often because what is happening right now in West Roxbury could happen soon in your own neighborhood. Over-development and road diets are city-wide issues affecting us all no matter our zip code. Ben Franklin put it best, "We must hang together or most assuredly we will all hang separately."

IAG decries traffic at VFW project

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Impact Advisory Group (IAG) for the proposal at 1208C VFW Pkwy. met at a Boston Planning and Development Agency (BPDA) virtual meeting on May 30 to hear updates on the project. The project has an address on the VFW, but is set so far back that it directly abuts Baker Street. Development representative Thomas Maistros said the project will contain 55 units in a five-story building, with 55 vehicle parking spaces and 55 bicycle parking spaces.

The site actually sits opposite of 270 Baker St., the B'nai B'rith development aimed at providing affordable housing to seniors. This project is being proposed by one of the former owners and developers Richard Olstein and Michael Staiti.

The pair had stated years ago that they had no intention of developing the office building at 1208C. Their attorney at the time, Dennis Quilty, spoke directly to this at an Oct. 16, 2016 meeting:

"There's no plan to come back to you next year and say 'now we want to come back and develop this building,'" he said.

According to the developers, the project's community benefits include lowering pressure on existing housing stock with more affordable rental housing. Maistros added that the building will add to the currently under construction courtyard of 270 Baker St. to create more greenspace than before.

"Our courtyard aligns with the existing courtyard being proposed by B'nai B'rith and we've significantly increased the open space," he said. "We've also pulled the building back from that side of the structure to slightly expand open space and improve view and access into that courtyard."

IAG member Jeremy Rosenberger asked if the traffic as-1208C VFW Pkwy.

assessment would induce less traffic on the VFW than the current office building site.

“Strictly, as a general office building at full occupancy which it may or may not have been, the potential for that building to generate traffic at its peak hours would exceed what would be generated by 55 dwelling units here,” said Project Traffic Engineer Andrew McClurg.

Maistros added that residential use is generally varied and wouldn’t have bursts of traffic at peak hours that offices can have.

IAG Member Paul Conneely said he has observed differently.

“There is going to be a massive increase in traffic,” he said. “I have to disagree with you about the amount of traffic. You put a residential building up, people are coming and going. Visitors are coming and going. If you’re talking multiple bedrooms, you got to be realistic because there’s going to be two cars for every apartment. I got to completely disagree with you as somebody who’s been here. It’s absolutely going to increase traffic.”

McClurg and Maistros pointed out that at least some traffic will no longer be coming through the area, as the office building currently there will be gone.

IAG member and West Roxbury Neighborhood Council Member Larry Costello said he’s heard this all before, and feels that doing these traffic studies on a project-by-project basis is counterproductive.

“It’s just frustrating because no project impacts the traffic (according to developers), yet we just keep putting up more and more apartments and the traffic is getting worse and worse and worse and these projects have no impact,” he said. “I understand all the numbers and I’ve heard it all before. If someone put in a 5,000-unit building, there’d be a traffic impact, but 150 units have no impact. That’s just what it feels like.”

Costello said he knows the city needs housing, but residents’ concerns are going out the window.

“I understand the trade-off, but the message seems to be, ‘just suck it up,’” he said with a laugh. “It’s going to be what it’s going to be... We’ll just continue to put straws on the camel’s back.”

BPDA Project Manager Stephen Harvey pointed out that more and more people have been moving to the area, and that includes places outside of West Roxbury and Boston.

“Even without this project you’re going to experience traffic in the area because there are proposals going up everywhere, and one proposal might not change the situation around you, but when you add them up there’s going to be an effect,” he said.

Sept. 28, 2021, when they were first invited to the Jamaica Plain Neighborhood Council (JPNC) to present the initial plans for an all-electric bus garage at the Arborway yard.

Hamwey and Markiewicz gave an updated presentation to the Stony Brook Neighborhood Association (SNA) on Jan. 9, 2023.

Markiewicz told the Arborway bus garage committee that there were changes in the design of the garage building that were “generally rectangular in shape. This is the first time the community has seen the new design.”

The main change was a low-scale glass ground floor wing set back at an angle along the Arborway for bus operations administration and operations control offices.

“We’re trying to bring the massing down with the step down building on the Arborway,” Markiewicz said. “We’ve reduced the size of the building to 300,000 square feet.”

The second level for bus storage includes spaces for a larger fleet of 60-foot buses and will bridge the Stony Brook culvert that bisects the site. Buses will drive under the second floor to enter the garage.

The main entrance will be from one curb cut off the parkway.

“The budget will be discussed at the 15 percent design stage meeting in June,” Markiewicz said. “We’re still working on the surface parking lot and we may share space with the DPW lot on Forest Hills Street,” she said.

The 1.3-acre DPW salt and sand storage yard will remain. This reduced the Washington Street parcel long planned for transfer to the city as a development parcel down to 6.5 acres and will be used as a temporary bus facility while the bus garage is being built. Truck delivery will come off of Forest Hills Street, on easement from the city. An emergency access road will bisect the development parcel parallel to the garage and Lotus Street.

“We’re still working on the building façade,” Markiewicz said, “which will be largely folded prefabricated metal panels in a light color.”

Other parts of the plans being worked on are the operating procedures for the bus exit and green buffer landscaping on the Arborway to soften the wall of the building.

The dialogue Cibulsky promised quickly turned into demands and accusations, with few references to the design changes.

Michael Epp was first up, accusing the MBTA of “not abiding by the MOU.”

“The 1999 MOU continues to be ignored,” he said. “It requires public meetings every two weeks. That’s never happened.”

Markiewicz admitted that “the process is slow. We’ve had our own challenges with the budget,” she said.

“I understand it doesn’t feel like we’ve had a lot of meetings, but there’s a lot of stakeholders, exterior and interior, in the process, ten or 11 other group meetings to approach the project milestones. We’re now nearly at 15 percent design.

“The schedule is to coordinate with the City of Boston, Boston Water and Sewer Commission, Eversource and the DCR (the Department of Conservation and Recreation) in June and the to file a project change with the Mass. Environmental Protection Agency,” Markiewicz said.

Michael Reiskind seemed impatient. “Don’t say that. This isn’t a full community process,” he said. “This is not what the community is used to. A full-time interactive community process, you’ve not done that.”

Reiskind said the Arborway Yard “is a special space.”

“It is not an MBTA space,” he said. “Design this for a special space. You’re not good enough. It’s not a good design that you’re legally required as promised by the MOU.”

Epp took the design in another direction.

“The plan was to have a TOD [transit-orientated design] process. It’s in a residential area,” he said. “TOD means housing. This is a state mandate.”

Epp said he wanted housing over the garage: he wanted it structurally built for housing on top.

Peter DiSimone, project manager for Jacobs Engineering, the architect for the bus garage said, “This challenges the feasibility of the garage,” he said. “It also poses development challenges. It will also significantly complicate the costs. We need to get this project started.”

The 6.5 acres set aside for the city is “significantly easier to build housing there than on top of the garage,” DiSimone said.

Reiskind said he “wants a community advisory committee appointed by elected officials. A true working group that won’t get in your way.”

Gert Thorn is on the JPNC with Reiskind and said, “Meet with us every two weeks, with the architects and managers. We see ourselves as the advocates. We can help you. We have architects on the committee. This group represents the community.”

Scott Hamwey had a question. “How does the group define community? A lot has changed in 25 years. Buses serve a 40-square-mile service area. People depend on fossil fuel buses all over the city. What is the open process? I’m not confident this group represents the community.”

Gert Thorn responded. “You’re not listening to us. You’re not getting it,” he said.

Hamwey continued. “We are really focused on the schedule,” he said, “It’s hard to see how an advisory committee just to have meetings won’t have a negative impact on the schedule,” he said. “We’re happy to come back with more updates.”

A screen share showed a calendar with a targeted construction start of 2025 and a completion date at the end of 2028.

Representative Samantha Montano, who lives in Forest Hills, spoke about the schedule too. “This project will have a wide impact,” she said. “My priorities are as much housing as possible [on the 6.5 acres].”

“I understand it’s frustrating,” Montano added. “Getting mired down in the design process, sitting and talking about design every two weeks is costly. It’s not the right ask of the MBTA. It will be painful for black and brown people who don’t have as many transit options.”

Reiskind seemed frustrated. “Don’t believe the T,” he told Montano. “Get behind us.”

Hamwey said that the MBTA would convene a public meeting on June 22 to review the 15 percent design of the bus garage.

the road diet in the past.

Wu outlined the plan, and Boston Chief of Streets Jascha Franklin-Hodges went into further details. Wu said she has a good deal of first-hand experience on Centre Street, as she and her family regularly travel to West Roxbury from their home in Roslindale.

“We’re on Centre Street double-digit-times every week,” she said. “Every time we’re crossing Centre Street, I am gripping tightly onto my kids’ wrists or their hands, because we see what it’s like and we know what has happened in the past as well. This is one of the corridors where we have seen the greatest number of crashes compared to many other parts of the city and the design of the road itself is one that is inherently dangerous because you cannot see who is crossing the street.”

Wu was describing in part what happened to Marilyn Wentworth, which is called a Multiple Threat Crash. That’s when one vehicle has stopped at the outer lane to let a pedestrian cross and a vehicle either behind that vehicle tries to go around and pass that vehicle or a vehicle in the inner lane does not stop for the pedestrian. In either case, those vehicles have little to no visibility of a pedestrian, as they cannot see through the stopped vehicle.

Franklin-Hodges reviewed the plan’s data, which included a traffic study from January with speeding data. He said on the two days they took speeding data, Jan. 13 and Jan. 14, more than 10,000 drivers were clocked as speeding, going over 30 mph, which is over the 25 mph speed limit. He pointed out that pedestrians’ survivability of being hit by a car drops dramatically the faster the vehicle is going. For 20 mph, 13 percent of crashes are likely to result in fatality or severe injury. At 30 mph, it’s 40 percent and at 40 mph it’s 73 percent.

“We have a street designed for speed,” he said. “I find this myself when I drive down Centre Street I will frequently look down and realize I’m going 30 or 32 mph, and I’ll slow down, but the street encourages this. And we have hundreds of drivers that I would put in that scofflaw category who drive north of 40 mph. This is an incredibly dangerous speed in a place where people are walking.”

Franklin-Hodges pointed out that from 2019 to 2021, 64 crashes were reported on Centre. He said compared to the statewide rate of crashes on similar streets, Centre is significantly more prone to crashes.

“And it’s important to say most roads in Boston do better than their peer roads in the state,” he said.

Franklin-Hodges also discussed the alternatives presented to the city by the West Roxbury Safety Association (WRSA), which is a resident-founded group of concerned citizens nominally opposed to the road diet. The group pitched on-demand flashing light signs at five crosswalks along Centre, along with lights embedded in the streets to increase visibility and changing brick crosswalks to more visible white-on-asphalt (which Franklin-Hodges said the city has already done). A video of the WRSA’s plan can be found at <https://tinyurl.com/2s3ef99r>. Franklin-Hodges pointed out that when you have a large number of signs along a road, drivers can become used to them and even ignore them completely.

“What we see is when use a lot of them near signals people kind of tune them out,” he said.

Hodges added that the lights embedded in the pavement would likely not survive one year of snow plows.

To see the city’s full plan, go to <https://tinyurl.com/53f57n4v>

Many residents spoke both in support and opposition. Some residents asked for increased enforcement along Centre Street, which was tried after Wentworth was killed in 2019, but the Boston Police Department can only assign enforcement in one area for so long before other areas suffer, so Franklin-Hodges said he didn’t feel this was a permanent solution.

Roslindale resident Abner Bonilla said the best reason for not making Centre Street slimmer is due to the American Legion Highway in East Roslindale.

“They gave the same spiel to us a number of years ago,” he said. “And now I can record on my phone we’ve had 59 accidents since they made it one lane. Just this week outside my house I clocked someone at 62 mph. The day lighting (space between parking spaces and crosswalks) has been knocked out, the flex posts have been knocked out, they don’t come back and they don’t fix anything.”

Bonilla said he felt the whole process didn’t take the neighbors into account and that it did not improve things in the neighborhood.

“It has not worked; they have not come back and it’s very upsetting,” he said. “West Roxbury should have the opportunity to have their voice heard, unlike us.”

The city will be hosting drop-in sessions for the project at the West Roxbury Library on June 12 from 5 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. and June 16 from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m., with a small business-focused session on June 15 from 2 p.m. to 4:30 p.m.

The WRSA is hosting a West Roxbury resident-only meeting on June 14 at the Boston Elks on Spring Street at 6:30 p.m.

Sisters celebrate 150 years

Responding to Changing Needs in Boston and Beyond

The year 2023 marks the 150th anniversary of the Sisters of St. Joseph [CSJ] in Boston. Our theme "Unifying Love Flares," suggests that God continues to call us to something new. From the day Sister Regis Casserly and her companions traveled from New York to Jamaica Plain in Boston in 1873, through the many challenges and opportunities that brought us to where we are today, you have partnered with us. Thank you for the ways you have journeyed with us and support our mission.

We are celebrating this year with a series of events, including a Mass to be celebrated on June 3, 2023, at the 4 p.m. at St. John Church in St. Oscar Romero Parish, Canton.

We came in response to an invitation to educate a growing population of Catholic immigrants not welcome in public schools at the time. 150 years later, we continue to respond to changing needs. We have educated thousands of people in over 130 educational institutions, served in over 30 health care ministries, and participated approximately 85 service ministries within Greater Boston. We have also learned from you and touched one another's lives in countless ways. Imagine the impact! Imagine our gratitude!

We built, staffed, sponsored, and worked in hundreds of locations in this area, however, our growth is about more than buildings. We have responded with courage in impossible situations; embraced anything of which woman are capable; witnessed in challenging times; stood with the marginalized in the struggle for justice – all with a contemplative spirit.

This 150th celebration is also about each of you who are part of this journey. We celebrate founders whose original impulse of unifying love brings us to this day and those who continue this impulse throughout Boston and beyond. This critical moment in history cries for people dedicated to bridging divisions and witnessing to oneness. Today we continue to be present through sisters, associates, agrégées, and partners in mission in Boston neighborhoods including Brighton, Roslindale, and the South End as well as keeping the tradition alive.

"I just want to thank all the volunteers and all those folks from the community who come out and support us even when the weather's not so great," he said. "We couldn't do it without all of you."

Bligh also announced the Trust's donation of $10,000 to the Parkway Little League for the renovation of Bunker Field, which still needs more funding. Go to <https://tinyurl.com/4jxmfy9n> for more information. He gave the massive check to youngsters Tom Greenwood and Matt Pieroway.

"They're the future of Parkway Little League in our city," Bligh said.

Boston Mayor Michelle Wu said the weather was a little wetter and chillier than she remembers.

"I had to go into the basement to take out my winter hat and coat again but, look on the bright side, last year it was like 100 degrees here!" she laughed. "So we're getting a little bit of a break for the start of summer here in West Roxbury. Thank you all for coming out, this is a great event and I'm so happy to see so many families here."

Resident Mike O'Neill said he and his family had never come out to the race before, but his daughter Lorelei got them to go.

"She was really excited about it when she saw the flyer for the race and the Fun Run at the Parkway Y when we were out for her swimming lesson," he said. "She just thought it would be a good time so we came out. It's a great time and she's had a blast. There's a ton of stuff for the kids to do and it was a challenge for them, though she had a good time, so all-in-all we're really happy."

Volunteers Laura Cloherty and Tricia McCool were running a water table and said they were very happy to see so many families come out in support. They said it's usually a good time to catch up with friends they may not have seen in a while.

"We're so thankful to the Corrib for what they do," said Cloherty. "We've been volunteering for 15 years out of the St. Theresa School. We love it out here. We see the alum come down, and it's always fun when they check in."

Resident Dennis McCormack was jogging around the area to prep for the race. He said it starts out pretty normal but the hills in the neighborhood can be really taxing.

"You start out okay, but sheesh, I did hills for practice on this one," he said. "I've done this a couple of times so I know where the hills are. I live up on Weld Street and I've come for a while, just a neighborhood guy. It's really cool to see it was 29 years here. I was surprised! I've been doing this for more than 20 years, so maybe I did 29 of them?"

Youths Jack Connell and Bradon Spiess said they first ran the race last year and they don't think the course was too challenging.

"But we're in Cross Country, so compared to that it's not too bad," Connell said.

"But it is a fun course," said Spiess.

Residents Nicole Wadsworth and Bob Balaschi said they try to come out every year.

"I usually run it," Wadsworth said. "He's from here and his friends are here, so we come to check in every year too."

The race was kicked off by former State Rep. Edward Coppinger. Other Parkway officials and dignitaries included Lord Mayor of West Roxbury Richie Gormley, current State Rep. Bill MacGregor, At-Large City Councilor Ruthzee Louijeune, At-Large City Councilor Michael Flaherty and former District 6 City Councilor Matt O'Malley.

Corrib Charitable Trust Founder Tony Bligh, center, gave a check for $10,000 to the Parkway Little League for renovations at Bunker Field. The day also featured speeches from Boston Mayor Michelle Wu and appearances from several city and state officials.

Youth Involvement

Assistant Director Patricia Alvarez and Green Team Coordinator Sherkora Saint said they've seen the program work like a spring board from a summer job to direct involvement later on, and many of the 22 youth currently being interviewed for the Green Team say they are doing it to better their world.

"The kids are beginning to recognize by watching the news how they're being affected by climate change, for example. I spoke to one young man who said, 'We are a part of nature and a part of this environment. It's more important for us to be doing this than being in front of a computer all day.' So the young people are starting to wake up and notice and are seeking programs like this out."

Alvarez said the program has launched some students into careers of civic importance. One teen in the program now works for the National Parks Service; another started a landscaping company.

"It's different for everyone. It will be interesting to see this year and each year going forward how the youth have been affected by these programs," she said.

Northeastern student and Green Team member Cate Henning said it affected her whole career trajectory, and said it was important to see change first-hand, just so you knew it is possible, even as a youngster.

You have to remember that when you're a teenager, the three or four years it can take for a project to go from planning to completion is around a quarter or a third of their respective lives and experiences at that point. Their conception of time is much shorter than older folks, and that means seeing results is important because otherwise it can feel to them that their efforts are wasted or not enough, when in fact that is not the case.

"I've done a ton of broader national campaigns and national legislation, and as great as it is, there's nothing like working on issues that are directly connected to things, like the forest right next to my house and policies that will directly impact myself and neighbors," Henning said. "It's definitely a cool place to start to see how your efforts affect change."

She said working on the Green Team gave her a taste for community organizing. Now she's back to the group as a Crew Leader.

"It taught me how important community organizing is in bringing about change, because as a crew member on the Green Team in high school we did a lot of door knocking throughout Hyde Park, kind of like informal canvassing, talking to neighbors and finding out what they wanted to see in the Sherrin Woods, for example. Hearing the thoughts of the people who are going to be impacted by a project is pretty foundational in any kind of environmental health work that I do now."

Resident Nathaniel Thomas said he's been organizing in the neighborhood since moving here in 2016. He's in his 30s now and said an even younger population got him involved in his first community organizing effort. He's in

Prayer to the Blessed Virgin
(Never known to fail!)
Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine, splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in this necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my mother. Oh Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth, I humbly beseech thee from the bottom of my heart to succor me in my necessity (make request). There are none that can withstand your power. Oh Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (three times). Holy Mary, I place this cause in your hands (three times). Say this prayer for three consecutive days and then you must publish and it will be granted to you.
—V.C.

Miracle Prayer
Dear Heart of Jesus, in the past I have asked You for many favours. This time, I ask you this very special one (mention favour). Take it, dear Heart of Jesus, and place it within Your own broken heart where Your Father sees it. Then, in His merciful eyes, it will become Your favour, not mine. Amen. Say for three days, promise publication and favour will be granted.
—V.C.

Novena to St. Clare
Ask St. Clare for three favors, 1 business, 2 impossible. Say nine Hail Marys for nine days, with lighted candle. Pray whether you believe or not. Publish on the ninth day. Powerful novena. Say "May the Sacred Heart of Jesus be praised, adored, glorified, now and forever, throughout the whole world. Amen." Your request will be granted, no matter how impossible it may seem.
—V.C.

cities and towns like Newton, Milton, Weston, and Framingham. In addition we reach out to every kind of neighbor in pockets of presence throughout Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Mexico, and Florida.

In 2023 we live this mission of unifying love in what we call the Community of Joseph. This includes sisters, associates, agrégées, and partners in mission. Sisters of St. Joseph are ordinary women of the Church called to live the Gospel and witnesses to God's inclusive love. We express our love of God and neighbor through public vows of poverty, chastity, and obedience. We promote the well-being of Earth and the global neighborhood and express God's unifying love through works of justice serving the dear neighbor without distinction. We try to live our ordinary lives in extraordinary ways with Christ as our center.

In 1986, the Associate relationship began to develop. Associates are women and men, married and single, who desire to live the mission of unifying love. They, too, are ordinary people who share the CSJ spirit with their families, friends, and through their personal vocations and careers.

The term Agrégée dates from our earliest foundations when some women in the French countryside lived their commitment in the spirit of the CSJs as single women. Today our Boston Agrégées continue this tradition as single women called by God to express their commitment through a lifelong non-canonical vow to God and fidelity to the charism of the Sisters of St. Joseph. This vow is lived out in all activities of their daily lives and work.

Partners in Mission includes women and men who embody CSJ spirit and values. They further the mission of unity as leaders in our ministries, employees, trustees, and volunteers. Others are donors, former members, and occasional volunteers. They respond to God's call to reach out in word and action to all without distinction.

Today in the United States, the CSSJ U.S. Federation consists of 2931 Sisters, 2972 Associates, 46 Agrégées and countless Partners in Mission in 16 Congregations of Sisters of St. Joseph throughout this country. Throughout the world we number 14,000 members in 55 countries.

the West Fairmount Hill Community Group (WFHCG), involved in getting improvements to the Moynihan Playground.

“My son was sort of the catalyst of the initiative to improve the playground,” he said. “It was he who first said, ‘Daddy, our playground isn’t as nice as the other ones.’ And I, frankly, didn’t really have an answer for him, because there isn’t an excuse for any public space to be subpar in any community. So instead of just making up some answer that would have been sugarcoating a five-year-old, I decided to do something about it.”

Thomas said he saw the Moynihan in disrepair and neglect in the other areas’ playgrounds and wanted to do something about it. Currently, the Department of Conservation and Recreation is holding meetings on the playground’s redesign and renovation, so his work has finally paid off. He said it feels good now to see, especially since the process left an impression on his son.

“I felt this embodied a lesson for my son and now my daughter, that there are areas in our communities that need improvement and there is action we can take to make those improvements and require a community response,” he said. “That focused me on the importance of community meetings and staying involved.”

It’s definitely great to see the outcome of one’s work.

“Public improvements are tangible outcomes. Society and civic work can have many outcomes that are intangible, but when you see a space utilized by members of the community and that space becomes improved and the experiences of your neighbors are improved, it’s honestly the realization of civil society in a tangible form,” he said. “Knowing that being a part of a community and having a community voice would be a source of inspiration and support to make things like the playground getting fixed happen is powerful.”

Melanie Daye, president and founder of the Hyde Park Central River Neighborhood Group, wants to bring more young people into the group. She says that she would like to give stipends to get involved once the group has enough money to do so.

Later, involvement would be on a volunteer basis, but the stipends would get them used to community participation. Marcia Kimm-Jackson, the president of the West Fairmount Hill Community Group, said they have trouble recruiting young people. She said that the people who live around her are older.

“They’re more like me. They’re in their 50s and 60s and their kids have gone away both on my street and in my area,” she said.

Mimi Turchinetz of the Hyde Park Neighborhood Association tells a similar story.

“We had a young woman as our treasurer at HPNA but she didn’t run again. She was only treasurer for a year,” Turchinetz said. “She was young, probably in her 30s, but she was starting a new business and doing a lot of traveling so it just wasn’t a huge priority for her.”

She also said that community organizing in Hyde Park is close knit.

“There is a fairly insular group of people who are the activists who run the neighborhood associations,” she said.

She hopes a youth summit will be organized by the Community Input Board (CIB), which held an event called the Hyde Park Idea Exchange 2.0 on May 20 where the idea was raised in a Youth and Families working group. There was also discussion of the creation of a Teen Center in the neighborhood. To learn more about the CIB, go to <https://tinyurl.com/bdff2amf>
