Almost 50 residents came to Tuesday night's meeting on the Willet Street Extension plan for 29 single family homes on Willet Street.

Willet currently sits perpendicular to Washington Street, existing for the most part as a paper street, in that it only exists on planning maps and is not a physical street. It is currently connected to the private road Thrush Street and dead ends going towards Washington.

Developer and owner of CAD Builders Anthony Di Litzia said he currently has a purchasing agreement with the owner of most of the land, which is the LaRusso Corporation that owns the West Roxbury Crushed Stone Quarry behind the property. O'Neil and Associates Senior Director and former Boston Planning and Development Authority (BPDA) planner Chris Tracy represented Di Litzia for much of the meeting, and said Di Litzia was trying to respond to the feelings of most West Roxbury residents, in that he was not proposing multi-family units or dense urban housing.

"We decided that after hearing from West Roxbury Folks over the last decade or so – Di Litzia as a developer in the neighborhood and me as a planner for the BPDA for 10 years – what we heard from folks is that they are not necessarily opposed to development per se or the growth going on across the city... but residents are opposed to big Roslindale resident Scott Berry may never walk again after a tree limb fell on him during the March 8 Nor'easter.

The limb severed his spinal cord, and his family said doctors warn he may never walk again. The community has come out and raised more than $120,000 at a gofundme page (gofundme.com/596hj8w) as of the date of publication.

Berry's wife Kristen said the outpouring of support from family, friends, neighbors and sympathetic residents has been amazing.

"We have unbelievable support from everyone, people we don't know. It's incredible, people are just so wonderful," she said.

Scott Berry is currently recovering at the Spaulding Rehabilitation Center where he will be staying for the next few weeks before he can go home with his family. Right now, Kristen said they are trying to find as much money and expertise as possible to make their home ready for when he comes back.

"We're going to have to make physical modifications to our house, it's just the way the old colonials are built. It's raised up so we're going to need ramps to get in and out. We're going to have to have someone come and help us with that,"

WRNC discusses 45 Spring condos

Ariane Komyati

The West Roxbury Neighborhood Council Zoning Committee (WRNC) met on March 20 to discuss violations at 548 Lagrange St. and proposed condos at 45 Spring St.

The hot topic of the meeting was the proposed 16 residential units at 45 Spring St. The lot currently has three buildings, two of which are residential, and is adjacent to Star Market.

Developer Howard Robinson of Rap General Contracting and Architect James Christopher presented the proposal. They are currently going through the BPDA small project review process, and were not at the meeting for the voting process. This is their first time "taking it to the neighbors".

"We came to this meeting to get feedback from the community," explained Robinson.

The proposal is to construct a new residential building con-

Friends prepping for 16th dinner

The West Roxbury Friends of Rosie's Place (WRFORP) is getting ready for its 16th annual Community Dinner fundraiser set for March 24.

The dinner is set for the St. George Antiochian Orthodox Church at 55 Emmonsdale Rd. in West Roxbury, and WRFORP member Doris Corbo said the night will be better than ever.

"It's really heartwarming," she said. "The WRFORP started with a group of six friends who wanted to help homeless women and their children in their community. Now we have a mailing list of more than 500 caring individuals from Roslindale, West Roxbury and beyond."

Corbo said the event keeps getting bigger each year, with more and more generosity coming out of the neighborhoods and the city as a whole.

"Over the past few years, board members have reached out to community members who are in their 20s, 30s, and 40s," she said. "It's important to have people of all ages working for a common cause. It's our hope that there will be more of a mix of ages at this year's dinner."

In the past, when the group first formed, it held a fall fundraiser, which will hit its 35th iteration this year. Corbo said the spring fundraiser was put together because, quite simply, the need in the community has grown.

"As the number of our supporters has grown, so has our commitment to help poor and porter with WBZ-TV Beth Germano will be emceeing the night. Corbo said she has been a strong supporter of Rosie's place for a while now.

Corbo said many residents get to have fun during the event, though she may not be one of them.

"Sunday morning will truly be enjoyable!" she said. "But, it's an enjoyable time for those who attend. People keep returning year after year and we're also attacking a younger crowd who are looking for a meaningful way to be involved in their community."

BREAKFAST CONVERSATION

Of course, our mothers told us that "breakfast is the most important meal of the day," and there are many reasons why. To begin with, if we skip breakfast, we tend to make up for the lost calories by overeating during the rest of the day. In addition, recent research suggests that skipping breakfast increases the risk of developing "atherosclerosis" (hardening of the arteries). The study went on to note that breakfast skippers were also more likely to be obese and to have higher blood pressure, cholesterol, and fasting blood-sugar levels. So, there may be more ill effects associated with skipping breakfast than many of us thought. Do yourself a favor and have a bite to eat in the morning.

Older adults may have a difficult time getting adequate nutrition due to decreased absorption efficiency or the high cost of healthy foods. Therefore, seniors are at an increased risk for malnutrition, which can decrease their quality of life. At DEUTSCHESALTENHEIM residents can enjoy nutritious and delicious daily meals in our bright and cheerful dining room. Please call to schedule a consultation and tour of our facility at 2222 Centre Street, West Roxbury. "Ask about our Schrafft Pavilion for Alzheimer/Dementia Care and Edelweiss Village."

P.S. A study other than the one mentioned above found that eating protein before carbohydrates at mealtime may minimize post-meal spikes in blood sugar. So, try eating your eggs before toast in the morning.

WalkUP says Gateway Path almost 25 percent designed

The Roslindale Gateway Path at the Arnold Arboretum is picking up steam, and members say they are getting ready to present the community with the 25 percent design of the path in the coming months.

Pushed and called for by WalkUP (Urban Planning) Roslindale, the idea was to connect the Roslindale Village by the Roslindale Commuter Rail Station to Forest Hills with a pedestrian bike path. While the Jamaica Plain side's Blackwell Path – stretching from the South Street/Bussey Street intersection – is now complete, WalkUP member Lucy Bullock-Sieger said they are focusing on connecting the Roslindale side to that path.

“It’s also going to take into account the proposed design of the reworking of the Bussey, South Streets reconstruction, which is approved and hopefully happening soon,” she said. “Hopefully, Phase One is the connecting of the two paths and Phase Two is to get a crossing on the arch on South Street that will include a boardwalk, because those are meadowlands that we want to connect and protect.”

According to the 10 percent design released last year, the path would go through the Roslindale Commuter Rail Station, run adjacent to the

CANDID CAMERAS

Call us cynical, but we believe that many folks – if they think no one is looking – will resort to the urgings of their lesser angels. State Troopers, as was reported this week, will falsify overtime pay. Leaders at the State House, House and Senate, almost by tradition at this point, find innovative ways to break the law. People will lie, whether or not they have to.

That belief is just one small reason why the Boston Police Department should push forward with its “body cam” program despite its cost.

This newspaper recently covered a meeting between the Boston City Council and representatives from the Boston Police Department to discuss the effectiveness of a trial program involving body-worn cameras. The pilot program wound down in September.

BPD Commissioner William Evans praised the results, although he fretted about the cost. “From an organizational standpoint, it’s all positive,” he said. “The only negative is that the officers, when they’re in foot pursuit, they lose the cameras, sometimes when they’re in fights, they get ripped off their body, but other than that, things have gone really well.”

At the time he addressed the Council, the BPD had amassed 38,200 videos, 4,600 hours of footage, and at least two complaints brought against officers were cleared by viewing the related video.

That alone justifies the program. The majority of our police officers work hard and try to live up to the concept of “protect and serve.” They deserve any effort to protect them, their personal reputations, and the reputation of the Department.

“We don’t really have a problem with use of force in the Department, back in 2011 there were 80 complaints of excessive use of force from citizens, and in 2017 we just had 21, so it’s steadily declining over the years,” Evans told the Council. Therein lies another reason to use the cameras.

All it takes is one bad cop on one bad day to become a national topic of conversation and sully the otherwise great work done by the Department. Just glance at the newsletter used by the Patrolmen’s Association and you will quickly learn that racist underpinnings are there, poised to be a problem that goes beyond those ill-considered attempts at jokes. There are RACISTS on the force, just as they exist in all walks of life. If the body cams help keep them honest, or serve as immediate proof of guilt, we are all better off.

The BPD estimates that the cost of full implementation would be about $5 to $7 million in the first year. Our thought is that the cost may be worth it, especially with some further negotiations to bring vendor costs down.

Maintaining a quality police force that serves all is a tough task. Ensuring that the BPD not only preserve, but improve its reputation is the task at hand and one these cameras can definitely help.

Numbers without answers

The Massachusetts sales tax is levied on goods, not services.

Not all goods are subject to the Commonwealth’s sales tax. Congratulations to our pols for decades ago excluding such a tax on clothing, at least those single items under $170.

A few years ago there was a movement afoot to raise money for the state’s coffers by levying a tax on services, such as legal costs and plumbing work. We taxpayers were finally given a break when that legislation was struck down.

Now comes a question that not even an expert in the Massachusetts Department of Revenue could answer: When one purchases a new or pre-owned car, why is the dealer able to append sales tax on the Vehicle Preparation Fee, the Documentary Preparation Fee, and the Title Preparation Fee?

If one has automotive work done at Jo-Lan’s Automotive in Roslindale or by Trethewey Brothers, also in 02131, the billing is quick to isolate the mere parts on which the tax is levied, not on the entire bill, which obviously includes labor.

My Kind of Town/ Joe Galeota

Thus when a local car dealership imposed a 6.25 percent sales tax on the Vehicle Preparation Fee ($292), Documentary Preparation Fee ($198), and Title Preparation Fee ($5) for a pre-owned (used) car, I was surprised that this was legal. I was even more surprised when the Department of Revenue declared such a tax was legal. And I was most surprised when a sales tax expert working for that department explained that she could not explain the legality of the tax, outside of the few sheets of paper that the three entailed. The lion’s share of all three was labor/services, not goods. But going back over old records, I noticed that other dealerships did no such tax imposition.

Sometimes there are numbers without answers, such as the quotient of any number divided by zero. And there is no single value of x in the equation

$$16x + 8 = 15x + 9 + x - 1$$

Nor is there any value of n in the equation

$$3(2n-1) = 6n-2$$

Of course, none of these has reached the status as that of seeking an explanation of Fermat’s Last Theorem, which was finally solved in 1995 after more than three centuries of attempts.

But I believe there are answers somewhere to this sales tax question, not necessitating 300 years before a suitable explanation can be given: someone is lining his/her own pocket under the guise of a state tax.

Letters to the Editor

YOU GOT A LOT WRONG

Letter to the Editor,

Thank you for editorializing about the problems faced by the MBTA in providing comprehensive, reliable, and affordable public transportation in the Boston area. Unfortunately, you got a lot wrong, but this is not surprising given the car-centric mentality of just about everyone in our country. Boston roads are too small for the excessive use of many ton CO2 spewing steel cages that transport on average about 1 & 1/3 of a person. Our roads have more than enough space for dedicated bus and bike lanes and vastly improved pedestrian ways if only we could get people to drive less. Our heavy subsidization of our private transportation system with public dollars is cheating us now and even more so in the future. European countries like the Netherlands, with smaller roads, efficiently, effectively, and affordably support superior public transportation systems and extensive bicycle infrastructure. Dutch citizens enjoy low cost and reliable rapid transit. We could get rid of the endless congestion, waste of time, expensive road maintenance costs, and markedly reduces our CO2 emissions if we properly funded the MBTA and made it easier to use public transportation everywhere in the greater Boston area.

How summer jobs make a difference

If you asked anyone working today, I bet they can remember their first summer job. It might have been flipping burgers, lifeguarding at the community pool, or helping kids as a camp counselor. Growing up, everyone in my neighborhood had a summer job; it meant independence, and extra money in your pocket.

I remember my first job. I was a doughnut finisher at the Dunkin Donuts in Andrew Square. The work wasn’t glamorous. I started early in the morning, before the store opened, getting doughnuts ready for sale. I got the store ready for the morning rush, unpacked incoming shipments, and decorated the doughnuts for sale. I wouldn’t call myself a baker, but I surprised myself with the new skills I learned.

Whenever I go to Dunkin Donuts now, I think back to the time I spent there as a teenager. A lot has changed since I worked there in the early 1980s. Technology has transformed the way we find jobs. But I know my first summer job is similar to other young people’s experiences today. Everyone’s career needs to start somewhere, and that’s where I got my start.

In many ways, my first job helped influence who I am today; it taught me the value of hard work, the importance of the basics like showing up on time and following through on your responsibilities, and the proud feeling that comes from earning your own money. It also made me realize how crucial summer jobs are for a young person’s personal growth.

That’s why as mayor, I am so supportive of summer jobs and other part-time jobs for Boston’s young people. These are positive experiences that every young person should have, especially as they navigate their teenage years and prepare to enter adulthood. These jobs build confidence she said, adding that the house's only bathroom is on the second floor. "We really don't even know the true extent; we're just beginning to learn what we're going to need."

Kristen Berry said they are also facing huge medical expenses from the incident as well.

"He's going to need physical therapy for the rest of his life from what we're hearing," she said. "We're hoping at some point he's going to be able to drive a modified vehicle. He's just starting that journey of rehabilitation and it's unknown waters for us."

Kristen said despite this, she remains steadfast.

"We will manage, we just don't really know how yet," she said.

The limb came crashing down on March 8 as Scott Berry was snowblowing the sidewalks in their area. Kristen said everyone in the neighborhood knows each other and, basically, whoever is up first starts cleaning the others' areas.

"First we'll do the pathways and the sidewalk and then Scott will go to work, that's just what we do," she said. "It was about 6:30 in the morning and I had just found out I didn't have school. I work in Dedham as a teacher and he had done the driveway and our neighbor's driveway. There were already two other tree branches down blocking the sidewalk, so he went out into the street around the other side and was heading back as far as he could to get the branches on our sidewalk when the limb just fell on him."

Scott was pausing around the felled limbs to take a photo for Boston's non emergency hot line 311 before the tree fell.

"I was just sitting in the living room having a coffee watching the weather. I heard the crack, got up immediately and, by the time I got to the door, he was yelling for me," she said. "I saw the tree branch on his legs. I ran out and he said 'I can't feel my legs,' I called 911."

Nearby neighbors tried to move the branch with no success. Kristen Berry said they had to wait for the fire department to come and they laid blankets on him to keep him warm until help arrived.

"It was just a nightmare," she said.

Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine, splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in this necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my mother. Oh Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth, I humbly beseech thee from the bottom of my heart to succor me in my necessity (make request). There are none that can withstand your power. Oh Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (three times). Holy Mary, I place this cause in your hands (three times). Say this prayer for three consecutive days and then you must publish and it will be granted to you.

Grateful thanks. —A.E.P.

WR Spring Fair/Healthy Kids Day returning

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The third annual Healthy Kids Day/Spring Festival will be hitting Centre Street in West Roxbury on April 21.

The annual festival is designed to get everyone in the community together to have fun and learn about ways to get and stay healthy. It is part of the national Healthy Kids Day facilitated by the YMCA.

The Parkway YMCA will be hosting vendors, a bouncy castle, live music and more from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the B and M Auto Shop adjacent to the Parkway YMCA. Parkway YMCA Board Member and Springfest founder Pamela Bardhi said it's been an amazing three years.

"Every year, I find myself in the bouncy house at some time or another," she said laughing. "It's just always fun to host.... And we actually have some bands to perform the whole time; we'll have music the whole time. JP Honk I know is going to be one; they're performing as well as Cassidy Deadwater and then Born Yesterday. Those are the three bands that will be playing the whole day."

Bardhi said the lineup for vendors is equally impressive. She said the Y will have their usual tables, but there will also be representatives from the West Roxbury Roslindale Kiwanis, ADF Dentistry, Boston Tax Plus, Brigham and Women's Hospital as well as Tufts University to showcase to both parents and kids alike different ways to live healthy.

"We're also going to have Rock Spot Climbing, and they're bringing in a rock wall and I'm very interested to see that too," she said. "We're still going to have all of our community leaders, like (District 6 City Councilor) Matt O'Malley, Mayor (Marty) Walsh, State Rep. Ed Coppinger and State Sen. Mike Rush. It's always very well-attended, but this year we've definitely got some interesting and new vendors so it should be awesome."

Bardhi said she's been happy to host the event, as it is one of the tenants of her life as well.

"It gives you quality of life, their health is your wealth from my perspective," she said. "Without it, no money can buy you good health. You've got to feel good everyday and to do that you've got to learn about good eating and good health, but also this shows you how to have a good time with it. A good example is the rock climbing, that's something where, as a kid, you might not actually realize your exercising but you are. There's always a new vendor that gives a new definition of it and a new way of doing it."

Bardhi added they could not have done without Bruce and Mark of B and M Auto.

"They always say 'no problem' and they never have any hesitation, they're the first to do anything," she said.

Bardhi said that for her, bringing the whole community together is the reason she's stuck with the event.

"For me, it's the community coming together in a unique way; it's the creative space making, we've got the empty lot we can utilize. Why not use it to get people to come together? All the vendors come, local vendors mostly, so it's a good time for them too, especially now with the music being incorporated. It just keeps getting better and better."

Bardhi said that the Y is also working toward its proposed park to be built above the parking lot, so as to be at-grade with Centre Street.

While she said it is not yet finalized, they plan to move the event there in future years.

multi-unit projects,” Tracy said, adding that residents feel that West Roxbury is more of a suburban neighborhood than a city neighborhood. “We hope you can agree that this is the type of project that West Roxbury can get behind.”

Residents were mainly concerned that the development would not have any direct access to Washington Street. BPDA representative Aisling Kerr said they originally received feedback from the city on that, and the Public Improvement Commission (PIC) – which would also have to approve the project because it would be building a new road – that they did not want direct access from Washington. Kerr and Di Litzia said that the PIC believed it would create a new cut through, as it would allow Washington Street drivers quicker access to Centre Street through Maplewood Street and St. Theresa Avenue.

“We heard from folks during abutters meetings and they said they didn’t prefer to see an opening on Washington Street, and frankly, it wasn’t our desire either,” said Tracy.

The other issue was that since Thrush Street and Willet’s current dead end are now both private streets, and without the connection to Washington, it would require that the Willet extension also become a private way, since a public way cannot be built without a connection to another public way. Many residents surmised that the other reason for the lack of a Washington Street access in the current plan is that the city does not want to add to its maintenance list with a brand new public street, as it would incur more fixed costs down the line. Residents were concerned about the additional traffic on the surrounding areas, since cars would have to come through at least three streets to get to Willet.

Tracy said the traffic study CAD commissioned came out to show that the 29 homes would conservatively create 16 additional car trips in the peak a.m. hour and 20 in the peak p.m. hour. Tracy said that since the work day has changed for so many people, and not everyone leaves or arrives home at the same time.

Many residents disagreed, but Di Litzia pointed out that the area is zoned for multi-family developments, which would cause a lot more traffic.

“This is the city and there’s going to be traffic, but I don’t think it’s fair to say 29 homes, everybody having two cars, so let’s say that’s 60 for arguments sake, not everybody leaves at the same time,” he said. “It’s unfair that we come here as a single family development and not trying to build something like the project going in in front of us (4945 Washington Street) and others we try to come here with the fairest proposal possible.”

Resident Patrick Sylvester said he was not happy with the insinuation that just because this project is single family that it’s a good deal for the neighborhood.

“I don’t really appreciate hanging multi-family units over our head because if you were suggesting that here, there would be four times as many people in this room going against you, it would be a lot more of a different process,” he said. “I don’t really appreciate that. I work on Maplewood, and it is that bad, my five-year-old almost got hit by car getting out on the street. Now you didn’t do that, you weren’t driving that’s not your fault but it’s a fact. If you opened this up to Washington, you could create another outlet.”

Resident and former Boston

Transportation Department Commissioner Frank Tramontozzi said access to Washington Street was, in his view, the best bet for reducing traffic in the area.

“It would be a public way to your new streets, public streets, and would solve that problem,” he said.

Residents were also concerned about the water runoff in the area, but Di Litzia said their current problems are from fill left by the previous owner. He said the development’s new infiltration system – which included a number of 2,000 gallon tanks around the neighborhood – would fix those problems, as the water now has no place to go.

“Your water problem I can almost assure you it will be solved 100 percent,” he said. “After digging test holes, we found that the groundwater path has changed because of Todesca filling in the site, that’s why you didn’t have an existing problem years ago and why the problem has gotten worse over the past 5 years. Once we drain this in and we contain all our water, that runoff will be cured 100 percent.”

The project will need approval from the BPDA, the Zoning Board of Appeals, the Conservation Commission (as it is within the 100-foot buffer of wetlands, but not building on the wetlands themselves) and the PIC to move forward. Di Litzia said he is looking to complete work two years after he obtains building permits for the site. He also said he will use the land there to store almost all of the construction equipment and building materials so trucks are not going in and out of the neighborhood all the time and he said he wants to employ a street sweeper to keep dust to a minimum. He also said they plan to work around the current rock and ledge as much as possible to keep blasting to a minimum.

sisting of 16 residential units with 32 off street parking spaces. Each unit will contain three bedrooms. The energy efficient building will be three stories, have a flat roof with roof decks for upper units, a patio in the back, and a 16 foot wide driveway. Robinson and Christopher also plan on creating outdoor space and having plenty of greenspace. The building will be set back 20 feet from the sidewalk.

“These condos are being designed for families,” Robinson told the WRNC.

One committee member voiced her concern with the modern style of the building. “Some of the apartment buildings that have been put up recently are very cheap looking,” she remarked.

Some residents are concerned with the amount of traffic this will cause on Spring St. “We haven’t done a traffic study yet,” stated Robinson. Neighbors worry cars coming in and out of the driveway will cause more traffic on the already busy Spring St.

Robinson and Christopher plan on coming to future WRNC meetings to further discuss their proposal.

The other item on the agenda was proposed three car parking at 548 Lagrange St. Violations include extension of non-conforming use and insufficient usable open spaces per dwelling unit.

Neighbors attended the WRNC meeting to show support for the homeowners of 548 Lagrange St. None of the neighbors were opposed to the proposed three-car parking (one existing and two new) areas. WRNC Zoning Chair Tony Saroufim made a motion to recommend approval for the three car parking area, and the Zoning Subcommittee voted to approve the recommendation.

"Women Amongst Us" Tea honors inspirational Boston women

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The 8th Annual "Women Amongst Us" Tea was held at Granite Links Golf Course (100 Quarry Hills Dr., Quincy) on Saturday, March 10, coinciding with Women's History Month and International Women's Day, which is celebrated on March 8.

About 200 predominantly female guests attended the afternoon event, held in the Club's Hannon Room. Included in that number were Congressman Michael Capuano, State Senator Michael Rush, State Representative Nick Collins, City Councilor Ayanna Pressley, and Register of Deeds Stephen Murphy.

The Tea – which annually honors three inspirational Boston women – was put on by Boston Women, Inc., a Hyde Park based group inspired by the Grimké Sisters, best known as abolitionists but who also – while living in the town – cast the first symbolic women's votes in the Commonwealth back in 1870.

"I wanted to honor them and really make a name for Hyde Park because we had such famous women," said President and founding Board member Patrice Gattozzi, giving her motivation behind the group.

Since its creation, focus has expanded to the entire city, with two of the three accolades – the Pass the Torch Award and the Grimké Award – specifically designated as citywide. The third however – the Hyde Park Award – maintains Boston Women Inc.'s strong tie to the community, as Gattozzi explained.

"Even though we want to celebrate all of the women in Boston – and Hyde Park is part of Boston – we want to make sure that we have our roots honored, and we give an award every year to someone who works or lives in Hyde Park."

The event – which ran from 2 p.m. - 4 p.m. and offered formal tea fare including petite tea sandwiches, pastries, cocktails (including a Sister Sour in honor of the Grimkés), as well as the tea itself – was hosted by founding Board member Bridget Simmons Murphy.

Riverside Theatre Works' (45 Fairmount Ave.) Sweet Harmony vocal group provided the opening (featuring Samantha Lonergan and Kevin DiCarlo) and closing musical entertainment.

The 2018 honorees – Evelyn Lee, Sheila Dillon, and Candy O'Terry – were introduced in that order, first with a brief video and then with a member of Boston

City of Boston Chief of Housing and Director of Neighborhood Development, and Pass the Torch honoree Sheila Dillon poses for a photo with well-wishers at the Eighth Annual "Women Amongst Us" Tea.

In her brief acceptance remarks, she spoke of the responsibility she – and all teachers – bear.

CITYWIDE

4TH ANNUAL "ONE BOSTON DAY" ON APRIL 15

Mayor Martin J. Walsh announced the City of Boston will once again honor Boston's resilience, generosity and strength on April 15, now known as "One Boston Day." The day serves as an opportunity to recognize the good in our community, celebrate one another, and reflect on the spirit and resilience of the people of Boston that was exemplified in response to the loss and tragedies of April 15, 2013.

Individuals and organizations are encouraged to share their plans for One Boston Day on the official website and on social media using the hashtag #OneBostonDay.

"One Boston Day has turned the Marathon into a movement our entire city has rallied around, spreading the message of kindness and goodwill across the world," said Mayor Walsh. "April 15 will forever be a day that represents the resilience of the human spirit, and I hope everyone can mark this day in a way that showcases the very best of our city and its people."

The Mayor made the announcement at the unveiling of the 2018 Boston Marathon street banners at Marathon Sports on Boylston Street.

"One Boston Day" encourages random acts of kindness and spreading goodwill, and activities across the City will encourage individuals to give back to their community. The tradition came together in 2015 based on the desire expressed by many survivors to pass on the kindness, generosity and support they received following the 2013 Boston Marathon.

In every year since its official establishment in 2015, on April 15, #OneBostonDay has been a leading trend nationally on social media. Last year alone there were over 43,000 posts across social channels. As in the past, Hill Holiday is serving as the creative and digital marketing partner to help spread awareness and raise the visibility of One Boston Day.

concrete path encircling Peters Hill in the Arboretum and meet at the Poplar Gate at South Street to connect with the Blackwell Path. Bullock-Sieger said they have been working closely with the community and architects Horsley Wittan to produce the path.

“I think it’s great because things are really picking up speed, in part because there’s so much support from the community and so the city pays very close attention to what we’re trying to do here and they’re listening really carefully to the needs of the community,” she said. “We have raised our voices and we’ve made it known that this is a need and we’re growing fast and we need to make sure there’s sustainable infrastructure here. This path is exactly that.”

The plan entails a 10-foot wide accessible shared path and installs gateways and signage for way-finding. Bullock-Sieger said they are also looking for more community partners to help with funding the path.

“We’ve also been talking about gathering significant stakeholders, and so another angle we’re trying to push here is that the Massachusetts Department of Conservation and Recreation; we’ve applied for a grant there to clean up the South Street entrance to make sure that when we have this path, so that we’re not just doing it for Roslindale Village but people in the underserved areas of Roslindale,” she said. “Mostly what we want to stress is this is an easy and safe way to travel to Forest Hills for pedestrians and bikers, especially with the South Street entrance, we want to make sure that everybody has access to this amazing green resource in their backyard.”

One concern has been the fact that the MBTA owns the small parcel of land connecting the Roslindale Commuter Station to the Arboretum. Bullock-Sieger said while nothing is yet set in stone, the MBTA has said it has no opposition to the proposal. There are also issues of drainage that would be discussed at later meetings.

Bullock-Sieger said while keeping on the city for this project is important, the spring pilot for the bus-only lanes on Washington Street is fast approaching.

“We really want to come out in force for the spring pilot of the bus lane and when we have the community meeting coming up we really just want people to be involved so the city hears us,” she said.

2018 Chrysler Pacifica Hybrid Limited

The new Pacifica is a people mover with everything a buyer that needs a vehicle that sits seven with comfort could want. Our test model was the top of the line Hybrid with all popular options. This is not the minivan of years gone by, nor is it a boring station wagon. It is big on the inside and small on the outside. The exterior style is very smooth, with no sharp angular edges. Vision is clear and not obstructed from any angle. I was impressed with the low entry level in both the front and rear. Heading to the third row seating is a breeze, even for us old timers. Fold down the seating and the room is endless.

The leather seating is very supportive with multiple adjustments up front. The front seats are heated and ventilated, as is the leather wrapped steering wheel. The Pacifica is loaded with standard equipment, and of course there is always optional equipment available. A short list of the standard equipment is air bags galore, power hands-free rear lift gate and sliding side doors, remote starter, park sense with rear brake assist with stop, ready alert braking, Uconnect audio with nav and 8.4 inch touchscreen, and 3-zone heat/AC. A forward collision warning system, adaptive cruise control, automatic high beams, seat back color video screens, blueray player with wireless remotes, 115-volt outlet, Uconnect theater with wireless streaming, tri-pane panorama sun roof (the largest I have ever seen), and 360-degree camera are all available.

Fuel mileage is exceptional, as are the driving characteristics. The CVT transmission is silky smooth throughout the entire RPM range. The bottom line is that plug-in Hybrid vehicles and all electric vehicles are here to stay and over the next few years, 80% of vehicles will be either one or the other. A big concern is the battery replacement cost and warranty. The Pacifica battery warranty is 10 years/100,000 miles.

The top of the line Hybrid Limited starts at $44,995. If you want the base or non-Hybrid base price starts out at $26,995 (destination fee: $1,095. There are six other models priced in the middle and all have the popular and powerful 3.6 liter, V/6 engine. Our test vehicle also had the key sense key that is custom programmed to the owner’s wanting, including max speed and radio volume.

Boston’s own Junior Damato, “The Auto Doctor” has agreed to field auto repair questions from Bulletin and Record readers. Please forward your questions to news@bulletinnewspapers.com and we will do our best to get your questions answered.

woman who is a great example and role model of leadership to young girls and women in our city – is the Chief of Housing and Neighborhood Development for the City of Boston, acting as a close advisor to Mayor Walsh regarding housing issues and plans for Boston, while also leading the Office of Housing Stability – charged with protecting city residents’ tenancies – and serves as a member of the team implementing Mayor Walsh’s “Action Plan to End Veteran and Chronic Homelessness in Boston.”

She listed about 10 women from the Walsh Administration present in the room, and followed that by focusing on their shared experience in that capacity.

“This Administration has acknowledged that women get stuff done and we know how to cut through nonsense. They have put women at the table, and I really feel like we’re working very, very effectively as a team.”

Speaking in between receiving well-wishers after the Tea, Dillon referred to her earlier comments.

“I’m certainly honored to be recognized today for the work that we’re doing on behalf of the citizens of Boston. Affordable housing remains a big issue, so I’m glad the work is being recognized.”

O’Terry – the recipient of the Grimké Award “for a woman of character, courage, and leadership who has given of herself to our city” – was recognizable to many in the room as soon as she spoke.

The former longtime radio host on WMJX (Magic 106.7) and current President and Co-Founder of Boston Women in Media and Entertainment spoke for about 20 minutes, and started off by singing the opening stanza of “Amazing Grace.”

She followed by tracing her way through her life from the time she lost her mom to breast cancer while a teen – and child of divorced parents – through her own experience as the divorced mom of two small children getting a shot at the radio when the late night host fell asleep on the air one too many times and she – then working as a secretary at WMJX – was given the chance to replace him.

O’Terry then spoke of her creation of the Sunday morning show “Exceptional Women” – co-hosted with Gay Vernon – in which they would interview famous and less known women for a half-hour.

“The show became the most successful public affairs program produced by and for women, not just in Boston, but on any radio station in the United States of America,” she said.

Tying this experience interviewing women – and what she has learned from them – as an ongoing way to fill the void left by the early loss of her mother, O’Terry has continued with this with her podcast series “The Story Behind Her Success”, which has been up and running since January.

After sharing a few inspirational interviewee stories and her own 16 Life Lessons, she wound up her talk with the closing stanza of the song she opened her talk with: “Amazing Grace”.

Speaking before the Awards ceremony, O’Terry anticipated her talk with these remarks.

“I’m really honored to be here and, really, my message is not about me, it’s about the women who told me their stories. That’s been my entire career: telling women’s stories.”

She finished by tying her career in with Boston Women Inc. and “Women Amongst Us”.

“I think it’s all about the same thing: it’s about women holding each other up. And that’s what we do.”

An Open and Affirming Congregation

History comes alive with the 54th Regiment

Matt MacDonald
Staff Reporter

Last Friday, March 16, the Menino Arts Center (26 Central Ave.) held its opening reception for “In Camp at Readville: a 3D Exhibit Installation by the 54th Regiment Re-enactors.

The steady crowd of visitors who stopped by the second floor MAC throughout the 7 p.m. - 9 p.m. event was met by a pleasant and informative sentry/greeter – one of the 54th Mass Infantry Regiment Re-enactors, Company A – before stepping into a living history lesson.

The 54th – immortalized on Beacon Hill in Augustus Saint-Gaudens’ relief sculpture Memorial to Robert Gould Shaw and the Massachusetts Fifty-Fourth Regiment and brought to national attention through the 1989 film Glory – was the first African-American regiment organized in the North during the Civil War, and campaigned through the South from 1863 to 1865.

In the long corridor leading to the main hall, paintings, art photos, and other mixed media that typically hang on the MAC’s walls had been taken down and replaced with maps, documentary photos, and historical excerpts, as people stopped to look, some in passing and others intently.

Some of the maps displayed literally illustrate the 54th Regiment’s close tie to Hyde Park as – before marching down Beacon Street and off to history – it trained at Camp Meigs in Readville, the evidence of which is marked by a stone memorial near the ball field and basketball court that it is today.

According to Lieutenant Benny White, commanding officer of Company A, many of the men who trained at Camp Meigs came from outside Massachusetts – Pennsylvania, New York, Canada, one from Trinidad – and were recruited by people like Frederick Douglass and William Lloyd Garrison.

Once the Emancipation Proclamation took effect on January 1, 1863, they were ready to mobilize.

“So, even though they were not from Massachusetts, when they gathered and marched out, they considered themselves Massachusetts men.”

In the main hall, Lieutenant White stood by a small field desk set up next to a pair of pitched tents in the center of the room. One was noticeably larger than the other, but both were low and cramped. The larger one – with a cot inside – is an officer’s tent; the smaller one – with a mat on the floor – is for enlisted men, he explained.

“We want the people to come out and see it and see how the soldiers lived, what they ate.”

Artifacts and examples of soldiering and camp life are spread out on tables around the room.

Among them, a tin plate of hardtack, jerky, corn kernels, and some sort of green beans look as if they had been left behind after the 54th headed off to South Carolina.

On the stage at the front end of the room, standards, regimental insignia, and an assortment of rifles serve as testament to the business end of Army life in the Civil War, with an Enfield rifle with an effective range – according to First Sergeant Gerard Grimes – of 400 yards dominating the arms.

Grimes – chatting with visitors through the evening – has been in the Regiment for 19 years now, and was inspired to join after finding out that 54th member Oliver Hazard was his 5th great uncle.

During his time with the Regiment, Grimes has not only participated in re-enacting battles in different parts of the North and South, but has also taken part in educating students and others on what he calls “hidden history”.

“I was born and raised in Boston. I went through the Boston Public Schools. I didn’t know the 54th black soldiers fought,” he said. “All I was taught was that it was a war to end slavery: white man fighting white man to end slavery. I didn’t know that blacks fought until I got to middle school. That’s a shame.”

For Grimes, this has long been a family affair. His sons became involved when they were 10 years old and 11 years old and continued until they were 18 (they’re now 27 and 28), and Grimes’ sister Dee – who is now married to Lieutenant White – helped him to get involved back in the 90s.

He started as a private and now serves under his brother-in-law as first sergeant. “It wasn’t nepotism either,” he said laughing, “I earned this. I did almost every event.”

As for Lieutenant White, he joined the Regiment when it was formed, after Glory came out. Now that the movie is coming up on its 30th anniversary, “this is even more important to me now: that we’re still operating, we’re still doing what we do, and we’re even stronger.”

and work ethic, putting young people on a track to success. With the importance of summer jobs in mind, I encourage all students in Boston to sign up for SuccessLink, an online tool from Boston Centers for Youth & Families, that enables Boston youth to register for summer jobs. Through SuccessLink, young people can register for the Mayor's Summer Jobs Program, get connected to resources and join civic engagement initiatives designed to empower youth. In 2017 alone, 3,015 young people were hired through the SuccessLink program. Visit the website at boston.gov/summerjobs. Just last weekend, we had over 1,000 young people attend a summer youth job and resource fair at the Reggie Lewis Track and Athletic Center in Roxbury. It was incredible to see such a strong turnout. Through SuccessLink, we're growing the opportunities available for our young people, and connecting them to high-quality summer jobs. We've established new partnerships with community organizations and worked with employers to recruit more young people. As SuccessLink continues this summer, we're prepared to offer a record number of Boston students a chance at a high-quality summer job. SuccessLink offers more than just a paycheck. By partnering students with meaningful jobs at community and nonprofit groups, we empower them to develop their skills and expertise. They have access to hands-on mentorship and guidance, as well as network opportunities that create lasting professional pathways to success. One example is Alex, a sophomore at the Josiah Quincy Upper School. Last summer, Alex applied for SuccessLink and worked at the BCYF's Youth Engagement & Employment office. He helped other teenagers obtain employment while also using the experience to develop his communication skills. Because of his experience through SuccessLink, Alex has the confidence and expertise to explore other exciting jobs this summer and in the years ahead. Alex's story, like the stories of so many other young people here in Boston, shows the power of summer jobs. Having job experience makes Boston's youth excited for their future, and for finding and achieving their dream job someday. This promise of summer jobs is how we support our young residents, helping prepare them - our City's future workforce - for success. I encourage all Boston teens to visit the SuccessLink portal on Boston.gov and apply for a summer job. Whether it's your first job or your fifth, I can promise you it'll be an unforgettable summer experience. And hopefully, just like my time at Dunkin' Donuts so many years ago, you will learn skills and make connections that will shape you for years to come. Students can apply for summer jobs through SuccessLink online by visiting boston.gov/summerjobs. Registration is due by March 30.
