Boston will be celebrating and remembering the contributions of fallen U.S. Servicemembers next weekend throughout the city.

The annual Boston Common Flag Garden will feature 37,000 U.S. flags this year – one for each of the service members from Massachusetts who have died in the service since the Revolutionary War – at the foot of the Soldiers and Sailors Monument. The garden will be on display until Monday, May 30.

The Massachusetts Fallen Heroes program is hosting its 14th annual Run to Remember on Sunday, May 27 starting at the Seaport World Trade Center. The run is set to honor all service members and first responders lost since the Sept. 11 attacks in 2001. The run itself starts at 7 a.m., but there will also be a sports and fitness expo forum and kids and adult events on Friday and Saturday leading up to the event. Go to bostonsruntoremember.com for more information.

The Gardens at Gethsemane in West Roxbury will also be hosting its 50th annual Memorial Day Service at 9:30 a.m. on Memorial Day, May 28. Speakers for the event include Boston Mayor Marty Walsh, State Sen. Michael Rush, Lt. Col. Brandon S. Teague, Gold Star Parent and co-founder of Arredondo Family Foundation Carlos Arredondo, and the West Roxbury VFW Post 2902. There will also be musical performances by the Oladipo Sisters, Demetrios Tsaniklides and the Commonwealth Brass Quintet.

In Brighton, there will be a service at the Evergreen Cemetery at 11 a.m. to remember all veterans, especially the men and women from Allston and Brighton who made the supreme sacrifice in the service of our country. Prayers will also be offered for those currently serving overseas, for their safety and safe return. Celebrant Monsignor James P Moroney, rector of Saint John's Seminary, will conduct the service. Held regardless of weather.

The Allston Brighton Veterans Association will also be hosting the Ernest Prussman Medal of Honor Statue Unveiling at 1 Murdock St. in Brighton. There will also be an after party at Porter Belly's.

Monday's meeting of the Longfellow Area Neighborhood Association was dominated by discussion of a modified solar power plan at the Arnold Arboretum.

Steve Schneider, Director of Operations at the Arboretum, gave an update on the project.

An earlier plan, which Schneider dubbed "Solar 1.0," was revisited following opposition from LANA members at an earlier meeting.

"We're on to Solar 2.0," Schneider said. "In the coming weeks, we'll be working that into the public process."

The earlier plan was to build a solar array on an area of Weld Hill that local residents identified as restricted for de-

Hundreds turn out to support a really good neighbor

Jeff Sullivan

Residents, friends and family came out mightily to support the Berry Family on Saturday at the Holy Name Auditorium in West Roxbury.

The night featured several auction items, food, drink and entertainment to support the Berry Family, which suffered a severe setback in March. Scott Berry was snow blowing along his house's walkway and was heading over to a neighbor's home to help out when a tree branch fell on his back after suffering damage from one of that month's Nor'easter storms.

The limb severed his spinal cord, and his family has said that doctors have warned that he may never walk again. The community has raised more than $149,618 through a gofundme page (gofundme.com/596hj8w) as of publication. The funds are going towards renovating the Berry house, as it is not currently set up for wheelchair access.

The fundraiser last Saturday night raised thousands more for the Berry Family, and son Chris Berry said it was an amazing thing to see the community come to bat for his father.

"It feels awesome, I just love how loved he is in the neighborhood. It feels great to know that everyone's coming out for him in the community," he said.

Residents Patty Federico and Rosa Wells said they consider the Berrys more than just family friends.

"They're a part of our family, I mean in terms of softball and hockey and everything," said Federico. "It's amazing to see all the people here; he's such a great guy."

"We started the softball league with Scott so many years ago," said Wells.

Resident Katie Carchedi said she grew up playing softball with Scott as one of her coaches, and she will always keep him close in her heart.

"He was one of my softball coaches growing up and he's just always been great and I just needed to come out and support him," she said.

Resident Jessica Barrett Ison said she came because Scott is part of her family and they wanted to help.

"It's very impressive already; it's only 6:30 and parking is already a pain, and you want that to be the case," she said. "It's encouraging coming from a smaller community ourselves, seeing a bigger community like West Roxbury come together and support them, it's amazing."

Organizer Shiela Delamere said she was glad the night was attracting so many people to help the Berry family. She said she knows from personal experience how generous the Parkway community can be after her son was also paralyzed in a motor vehicle collision in 2013.

"I think it's awesome and I think that we'll get a lot more people," she said. "I mean I'm hoping to get close to 500 people to come through the door and I'm hoping for more. I think we'll get more than that."

City Councilors Michelle Wu and Matt O'Malley also came by during the night to support the Berry family.

"We have a full house here and it's clear from talking to folks that the community is ready to support and continue supporting this wonderful man and his family," Wu said.

The Gofundme page is still up and accepting donations. Family and event organizers said they hope to have Scott's house ready for his return in a few weeks.

MHMC reviews local proposals

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Mount Hope Mount Canterbury Neighborhood Association (MHMC) met and discussed a recent sale of the proposed development on 289 Walk Hill St.

The owner of the development, Charles Gill, put the property up for sale last month, and residents were concerned that whoever buys the project may try to alter it and create more units.

“The 106 apartments that we had all those community meetings about... Well, he’s flipping the land,” said MHMC member Lisa Beatman. “He finally bought the land and he’s selling it and asking for $7 million.”

MHMC member Rick Yoder said that if the land and development rights are sold, the buyer would have to adhere to all the plans Gil made. If the buyer does want to change the property in a way that will incur more zoning variances than already allowed by the Boston Planning and Development Agency (BPDA) and Boston Zoning Board of Appeals (ZBA) when the project was originally approved, he or she will have to go through the whole process once again.

“They will have the right to say ‘Gee, I paid $7 million, I want to put up more units,’ and that will start up the whole Chapter 80 process again, which I really hope we don’t have to go through again,” he said.

Members of the MHMC detailed issues going on in the neighborhood, most notably the sale of the 289 Walk Hill St. project.

State Rep. Russell Holmes said he’s talked with Gill about the sale, and Gill told him that the increase in construction costs since he started working on the project has made it too risky for him, which is why he wants to sell.

“There are lots of folks interested in the property; they are hoping to close by the end of the summer and have it start to build by the fall,” he said. “It was an expensive project to get built when they first started this process, and now construction costs are out of the roof. When he went back a couple of years later to the same people who bid, the numbers they have now for the same building are tremendously higher than they were... He’s put millions into the project and he doesn’t want to take the risk for what he now thinks it will cost.”

The meeting moved on to discuss a new nine-unit building proposed for 40 Harding St. The developer is hosting a community meeting for it on June 6 at the Roslindale Community Center.

“There’s a four-family there now and someone wants to build a nine-family,” Holmes said. “It’s zoned for a two-family right now, and the hearing isn’t going through here, it’s the Mayor’s Office and they decided not to go through here... I suggest that as many of us who can show up there do so be-

NEEDLES AND DAMAGE DONE

Drugs are bad. However, it doesn't take a social scientist to know that some drugs are worse than others.

Marijuana? Well, given the national mood, it has fallen so far down the nation's list of worries that it looks to cede its risk weighting to e-cigarette flavored capsules. Rising on the "concern-o-meter" with great speed and hand-wringing are opioids.

By now, unless you live in a cave you must know of the horrors; young (and not-so-young) people dying in droves because their opioid thirst leads them to experiment, sometimes unknowingly so, with even riskier drugs than heroin, such as fentanyl.

When we were kids it was widely understood that heroin was the ONE drug to never even contemplate doing. It appears all that seems to be out the window now.

In recent Bulletin coverage, we told of how Rep. Angelo Scaccia told a local audience of his support for the up-coming Care Act 2, which aims to reform care around opioid addicts throughout the state.

As part of this bill, doctors will be held more accountable when they prescribe opioids, as many in the state feel they have over-prescribed patients and helped to exacerbate the opioid issue, we reported.

"Doctors are on notice," Scaccia said. "Doctors were giving out much too much."

The new bill will include electronic filing for every prescription for opioid pain medication. Other legislation in the works will require patients to pick up pain medications in two-separate trips to the pharmacist.

Here is where things get controversial. The new bill would allow hospitals to hold a person suffering from an overdose for up to 72 hours, even against their will while they go through withdrawal.

The American Civil Liberties Union is among those slamming the idea of being "arrested" without a corresponding criminal charge.

It is good to support most of these legislative goals, but it is hard to give into the idea of involuntary rehab. The reality is that most subjected to being held will revert back to their old ways.

Even when addicts are willing, rehabilitation is a tough road, full of failures. Factor in anger and feelings of "victimhood," right or wrong, and most will slip back to their addictions. The likely outcome: wasting taxpayer money.

Of course, this is not all about money. There is a good argument that even one life saved makes it all worth it. At some point, however, we need to realize that we cannot just keep throwing money at the problem.

A major, but neglected part of recent opioid battles is that there are a great many addicts who are not innocent victims of a pain pill prescription gone wrong.

Young men and women in Boston, notably South Boston, have died in droves by going directly to heroin by snorting or needle. It used to be, and probably still is, that heroin was a fraction of the cost of illicit pills on the streets. It was even at one point cheaper than a six-pack of beer.

Addiction is no laughing matter. It is a struggle. Unfortunately we are deluded to think it is just weak suburbanites falling prey to these specific addictions. Personal responsibility does play a big part.

Some choose the drug life. While help should be there for those who want it, we should stop wasting money on those who do not. These dollars are better spent funding research and treatment for sick, innocent children and cancer patients. Otherwise, current programs are just another "crisis of the month" in the hands of government officials seeking blunt solutions for complex problems.

Jamaica Plain resident duly honored

Although it happened on the other side of the River Charles—far removed from where he now resides—John Griffin's recognition by his high school warrants due plaudits on this side of the storied waterway.

A graduate of Matignon High School before attending Boston College and Harvard Law, this Jamaica Plain resident was recently presented the Distinguished Alumnus Award by the North Cambridge High School at the Boston Marriott Cambridge.

Griffin has distinguished himself in service to his community, his alma maters, and the Catholic Church: he is past president of the Boston College Alumni Association and the Boston Latin Home and School Association as well as past board chair of both Catholic Charities of Boston and the Jamaica Plain Neighborhood House. He has distinguished himself with a career in law, with his specialty in real estate, development, and education, frequently providing pro bono advice.

With his wife Mary Margaret, he has raised three children with four delightful grandchildren in his JP abode as he closes in on two decades as a member

My Kind of Town/
Joe Galeota

for Matignon High School's Board of Trustees.

In his acceptance speech the Somerville native affably noted that he went to high school and law school on the same street. He noted the contributions of others, particularly to Cardinal Sean O'Malley, who also received an award for community service. Diverting attention from himself, John praised the robe-and-sandal garbed Cardinal for providing stability to our archdiocese.

Providing humor to the evening, the humble leader of Boston's Catholics warmly thanked Matignon with a delightful acceptance speech. If any attendees in the large audience were not aware of the prelate's down-to-earth-ness, they are now.

In the most poignant moment of the evening, a 1962 graduate was recognized posthumously: Donald Curtain died in a nasty firefight in Vietnam in the spring of '69. When a junior high class, encouraged by his future sister-in-law teacher, wrote letters to the corporal in distant Vietnam, he responded to the class detailing how he passed their missives around to the rest of his platoon: after 24 days in the mountains, they took delight in the messages, which evoked nostalgia about their own 7th grade doings. In his return letter to the adolescents, composed eight days before his death on a listening post guarding the perimeter to his camp, Curtain and his captain promised, if the students were NOT given a party at the end of the year because of their letter-writing campaign, to personally order a squadron of jet fighters to fly over the teacher's home continuously the night before her wedding to Curtain's brother.

Indeed, a wonderful night for a very deserving 02130 resident.

Letters to the Editor

ROXBURY PREP PRINCIPAL SEEKS PUBLIC SUPPORT

To the Editor:

I am a Roslindale resident and am an involved member of the community who has been a Boston resident and educator for almost 15 years. I support the new Roxbury Prep High School in Roslindale at 361 Belgrade Ave.; I voiced my support to Mayor Walsh at his coffee hour on May 8th. I know the staff and students will be a positive addition to our community because I work with them every day.

This project means a great deal to me. I am the Principal of the school, a resident of Roslindale, and the parent of a 4-year old. I have worked and been part of the Roxbury Prep family since 2003. I am honored and blessed to do work for the young people of Boston. I know, deeply, the power of a high quality education as the daughter of immigrants whose pathway to America was grounded in a strong education. I have seen, firsthand, the power of a Roxbury Prep education and the hope, commitment, and dedication of our students and families. For so many of us, this high school reflects our promise to close the opportunity and racial achievement gap for our scholars. As a resident of Roslindale, I know our young people would offer examples of leadership, service, and community that would serve our city far into the future in a positive and influential way.

I share my reflections because I know for myself, my students, my family, and for the many like me who know the power of school—a permanent facility—is part of the fulfillment of a promise that was made when our students first came to Roxbury Prep—that they will enter, succeed in and graduate from college regardless of their zip code, race, or class. This promise kept in Roslindale will have even greater meaning since many more students will be able to partake in this mission as it will be the only public high school in Roslindale.

I ask my fellow neighbors to support the new Roxbury Prep High School so that we can keep our promise in a most powerful way. Our students deserve a new school and a community that supports them to this end.

Shradha M. Patel
Roslindale, MA

425 LAGRANGE A NEIGHBORHOOD SAFETY AND AESTHETIC PROBLEM

To the Editor:

Ever drive by the abandoned Armstrong Pharmaceutical building located at 425 LaGrange St and wonder when it will be demolished? It's been over two years since the owner of the property, Michael Argiros, and his development team promised to have the dilapidated building torn down. It's been over a year and a half since the Boston Planning and Development Agency (BPDA) approved this project even after hearing overwhelming neighborhood opposition led by the West Roxbury Neighborhood Council and At-Large City Councilors Michael Flaherty and Annissa Essaibi-George.

Whether it's organizing events like the Perham Soap Box Derby or the Shamrock Shootout, our community is actively involved in making the Parkway the best neighborhood in Boston. Having a vacant rundown building at the corner of LaGrange and Centre is not something we're proud to have in our community. A decrepit, abandoned building shouldn't be the first structure you see when running in next week's Corrib Road Race.

The neighbors surrounding 425 LaGrange St. have been awfully patient and deserve better from this developer. I'm hoping our elected city officials and the Mayor's Office can take immediate action to get this building demolished before this summer.

425 LaGrange Street isn't just an eyesore; it's a public safety hazard which needs to be addressed immediately.

Tim Sullivan

Rose's Food Pantry to host first fundraiser

After two years of organizing and getting all the proper paperwork, Rose' Food Pantry is hosting its first soon-to-be annual official fundraiser.

The fundraiser is titled Recipe for a Stronger Community, and is scheduled for June 1 at 7:30 p.m. at the Irish Social Club in West Roxbury, will feature live music, live comedy, a 50/50 raffle and much more. Volunteer Paula Stevens-Our said though they have been operating in West Roxbury for two years now, getting officially recognized has taken some time.

"The bottom line is just because we wanted to open a food pantry, but the Greater Boston Food Bank (GBFB) doesn't let you become a member until you have a sponsor,"

she said. "So Rosemary Braverman from the Roslindale Church helped us by letting (Rose's Bounty Executive Director) Darra Soagle, and me go with her and make purchases on our behalf and start our process going, but it took well over a year what with all the health requirements, inspections and plumbing. It took a long time for us to become official."

Rose's Bounty Director Darra Slagle also said the night will be to remember the myriad of volunteers who make the food pantry possible.

"I would just like to say that

Prayer to the Blessed Virgin

(Never known to fail!)

Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine, splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in this necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my mother. Oh Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth, I humbly beseech thee from the bottom of my heart to succor me in my necessity (make request). There are none that can withstand your power. Oh Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (three times). Holy Mary, I place this cause in your hands (three times). Say this prayer for three consecutive days and then you must publish and it will be granted to you.

cause whatever is thrown up there is going to have an influence on the neighborhood.

Yoder said that the reason they might not have been notified is the nature of their neighborhood. He said Harding, while considered by them to be in their range of the neighborhood in East Roslindale, may not be considered so by the city, so they did not reach out to MHMC about it.

"Usually, they would come to our association or a nearby association for a community meeting," said Beatman.

City Council President and District 4 City Councilor Andrea Campbell's representative Caroline Kimball-Katz said the Mayor's Office typically sends developers to a particular neighborhood association, but they are not required to by statute.

"I'm surprised no one came here first," she said.

Yoder also said that City Realty will be coming back to the neighborhood June 14 to discuss their proposal for 920 American Legion Highway.

"It's a smaller design for 920 American Legion Highway, they haven't given up on that," he said.

Many residents opposed the project in the past because of issues of drainage, density and homeownership.

Yoder said the MHMC is also looking for grant funding from the Community Preservation Act to replace 50 dead or dying trees at the Mount Hope Cemetery.

"At the very last moment, Lisa and I put together a quick application to get $25,000 of the CPA money to put 50 trees in the cemetery," he said. "That's about one tenth of one percent of the whole monies that are available, and it's a small grant, so we'll see what happens."

Yoder said the city will announce its decisions in June, but CPA Director Christine Poff has said at prior community meetings that this first spring run of the CPA will hit small projects to get the program off the ground and will come back to other projects in the fall. She had said that there were about 50 proposals asking for about $12 million in total just for the spring application session.

Campbell also stopped by the meeting to discuss her current proposals in the City Council and issues residents are facing in the area. Resident Abner Bonilla said he's been seeing the usual spring uptick of dirt bikes, ATVs and motorized scooters in the neighborhood causing trouble, and asked if the city can do anything to help stop it.

"If you're storing an ATV or a dirt bike, I mean we're not in Western Massachusetts, so most of the time if it's not in a garage I don't understand why they would need it," he said. "It could be like $1,000 fine if you have more than one or two... I mean I'm on the streets eight hours a day and Washington Street has dirt bikes all day long. I know we can't just stop them in the middle of the street, but maybe a higher fine or something that goes on the license will help the situation."

Bonilla said that if there are infractions put on people's licenses or future licenses if they don't currently have one (scooters, ATVs and dirt bikes do not require a driver's license) then perhaps residents would be less inclined to use them.

"That would have to go through the state for licensing," said Campbell. "We can look into that, I think we can do more there. There was a task force at some point... I know we can have more creative measures. There was some legislation at the state level about keeping folks' property and fining them, but we're trying to come up with more creative ways."

On May 2nd, Roslindale IS for Everyone (RISE) held a Restorative Justice Forum at the Roslindale Community Center. Community members, residents, and local politicians gathered to discuss and learn more about what restorative justice is and isn't, how it can build communities and address conflicts, and humane, equitable solutions. The forum also included Spanish and Creole interpreters.

A panel of professionals, community members and organizations that have already begun to implement restorative justice in their work came to the forum to educate the public. Forum panelists included Director of the New Humanity Institute Mako Nagasawa, Patty Contente of the Somerville Police Department, Judge Kathleen Coffey, and Bostonian Eric Anderson, who attended the forum to discuss his experience in the prison system. While the panelists talked, audience members wrote down questions on flashcards to be answered at the end of the discussion. Boston City Council President Andrea Campbell was also in attendance. Campbell is Boston born and raised, and was educated in Boston Public Schools, including Boston Latin School. Councilor Campbell went on to graduate from Princeton University and UCLA Law School. She began her career at a nonprofit in Roxbury, providing free legal services to students and their parents on education matters, including school discipline and special education needs. Campbell began the forum by telling the audience a little bit of her life's story. "I'm here to go behind my resume and talk about my experiences," she explained. Campbell's mother died it's really also to celebrate the community because it takes an entire community to run an organization this large," she said. "We want to celebrate the volunteers also. We're serving more than 150 families at the food pantry every month, and that represents 500-plus people in those families."

Stevens-Our said they have had some smaller fundraisers in the past with great success and also serve residents from all over the state.

"We are sponsored by the church, but there is no religious overtone to anything. We are housed in the church, but this is more of a humanitarian outreach," she said. "We don't care; if you're hungry we're giving you food. We don't care about your personal or religious thoughts. It's not political or based on anything else and we don't do any geographic limits either. People come to us from Fall River, from Taunton, from Chelsea; we have an amazing number of people and they're coming from distances."

Stevens-Our said she originally booked a comedian for the event, but due to a family commitment they had to cancel.

I'm still working on a comedian, but we have my husband's band, The Urge, coming to play and the program starts at 8 p.m. The band will play a few songs and introduce Darra, and she will do a salute to our volunteers. Then Dr. Allan Hamdan, the chair for the Board of the GBFB and surgeon at Harvard Medical, is going to say a few words about food delivery for those who are food insecure."

She added they will be having light refreshments as well as raffle items up for grabs donated by the local community.

"I think it's going to be a great time, I'm looking forward to it," she said. "West Roxbury, Roslindale, Hyde Park, Jamaica Plain and Dedham; we're like a really neat little small town community and I think people are enthusiastic about sharing whatever they can with people who are less fortunate."

Stevens-Our said that she knows there are a lot of deserving causes in the community, and the pantry works with many of them, like the Kiwanis and the Rotary, to help gain donations and support. She said businesses get hit up for donations all the time, and though sometimes while she's doing outreach looking for donations a business owner will say they can't officially donate – because then they'd get hit by many other organizations – they kick in regardless.

"They say 'I can't afford to be affiliated with this because I don't have enough money to support all the charities, but here's $30.' There's a lot of that," she said. "We're talking about a person who owns a very small store on Centre Street. They open their wallet and give me $30. They just want to silently help as much as they can. Everyone pitches in here, it's pretty amazing."

Last month, Rose's Bounty held a fundraiser in conjunction with the Brickhouse Restaurant in Dedham and Stevens-Our said they raised $4,000 just from raffle items and a generous 10 percent of all food sales donated.

"I just couldn't believe how many people came there," she said. "About 25 percent of what we raised came from (Brickhouse owner Vinny Marino) on his revenue, but the majority of it was from the silent auction and the raffle tickets. That was a lot of money earned, and we also got a lot of people interested in volunteering."

when she was eight months old, and her father was incarcerated the first eight years of her life. She spent most of her childhood in and out of the foster care system with her twin brother. As a teen, her father pushed her to do her best in and out of school “He was the smartest man I knew,” she told the audience. Unfortunately, he died when she was 19.

While attending Princeton, her brother was arrested. He suffered from medical issues, and passed away at age 29 while in the system.

“I get up every morning and serve my purpose,” stated Campbell. On the Council, she has chaired and expanded the Committee on Public Safety to include Criminal Justice in an effort to bring important conversations around re-entry services for returning citizens, solitary confinement, and the school-to-prison pipeline.

Many audience members were moved by Eric Anderson’s speech. Anderson was born and raised in Dorchester, had a rough childhood, and did not do well in school. He spent 16 years in prison for a fight and had been out of prison since Feb. 2018. He spent a lot of time in the system making himself a better person and going on retreats. After being released, he was given the opportunity by a friend to work as a grill cook. Anderson feels incredibly blessed by this opportunity and is glad someone gave him a chance.

“It takes a whole community to help a broken child, not a broken system,” Anderson remarked. At the end of his speech, he received a standing ovation from the crowd.

Mako Nagasawa was born and raised in California, but has spent his career in Boston, discussing restorative justice within the Christian Tradition. While living in Dorchester, his neighbors were incarcerated. Nagasawa visited them in prison often and helped them find jobs after they were released. He has also done restorative justice work in other countries, such as Uganda.

Patty Contente is part of the Community Outreach, Help & Recovery Program at the Somerville Police Department. “In a fast paced society, we have less time to focus on individuals,” she stated. Contente discussed the importance of training police officers with how to deal with mental health disturbances.

“There are certain populations within our community that don’t do well in our system, such as the mentally ill and homeless,” stated Judge Coffey of West Roxbury. “The hardest part of being a judge is sentencing people. There are many factors we need to take into account, but I want to assure you that the judges I work with do not take their responsibilities lightly.”

Judge Coffey discussed the Mental Health Court, also known as “Recovery with Justice”. They are sessions that include a “court-imposed condition of probation for defendants who have serious mental illness or co-occurring mental health or substance use disorders.” The program also helps recently released people with finding jobs.

“I am confident that groups like RISE will help our city grow into a safer place for everyone,” remarked Judge Coffey.

velopment of any kind. A deed restriction identifies a part of the parcel where development was permitted and forbids development on the remaining portion of any permanent structure. A small part of the developable land is occupied by the Weld Hill research building, leaving a significant share of the developable land available.

"We are 100 percent concentrating on doing [the project] on the designated developable side of the line," Schneider said.

He, however, lamented that there would still be trade-offs.

"It's a much more expensive process."

The changes meant the Arboretum's government support changed from a Mass Solar incentive plan, which Schneider described as SVEC2, to a Solar Massachusetts Renewable Target (SMART) solar plan, which includes a battery storage feature.

He was unsure of the names of the brands of solar panels that were being considered, but he said that they had been working with Tesla on designing the battery component.

Board President Mary Flaherty said the new plan seemed to put everyone more at ease.

"I think I can speak for the board when I say that's good news for us," Flaherty said.

LANA member John Covert

inquired about the Arboretum's electrical usage, remarking that electric heating costs often make up a high share of the bill.

Schneider said that the Arboretum is billed at an institutional rate.

"We use an amazing amount of electricity," he said.

Schneider said that as a research lab, the Arboretum is concerned not only with costs, but also with reducing their carbon footprint.

"We are focused on reducing electrical carbon emissions by 25 percent," he said.

McCabe wondered how many trees would need to be removed to make space for the array.

"In the neighborhood of 10," Schneider said, adding that it would mainly affect the east side of the building.

"We're not talking about the oak forest," he said.

Some members noted that solar installations are often built over parking areas, allowing vehicles to park underneath and avoiding the necessity of covering large green areas.

Schneider said that there is substantial infrastructure below the parking lot, and that to alter any of it would be difficult and expensive.

"That parking lot is not just a paved surface," he said. "It's the culmination of a number of systems that result in a pervi-ous parking lot."

He added that any covering over the parking lot would have to comply with Department of Transportation regulations, which require a height of 16 feet to ensure that it could accommodate large vehicles.

Everyone agreed that this would be aesthetically undesirable.

McCabe said she would like to support the project but felt "chagrined" when told first that her question couldn't be answered, only to receive a response later that didn't seem too arcane for the public to understand.

"The dialogue feels stymied," she said. "That doesn't build trust, but I'm glad you answered it finally."

Schneider estimates that the current plan will be about "10 percent less productive" than the original proposal, and that they were trying to install the most efficient panels possible.

He was frustrated with the news about tariffs being raised on solar panels, steel and aluminum, what he described as "the three basic parts" of the project, leading to "a little more research and anxiety" to overcome the resulting inconvenience and elevated cost.

Member Joe DiMasi was encouraged.

"As someone who has solar on my home, I'm glad to see you're moving forward with Solar 2.0," he said.

Mike Fitzgerald, Clerk of the Board, said that it felt like Harvard telling us what they're going to do instead of talking first. He's replacing his fences and asked neighbors for their opinions before planning.

Schneider: "With all due respect, we have completely changed our plans."

"That's the point," McCabe said, adding that they could have saved some trouble, time and money by opening up a discussion with the neighborhood before developing the initial plan.

Flaherty reminded everyone that the June meeting will be the annual meeting, at which new board members are elected.

"I would like to spread the word that we are open, willing and very much in need" of new members to take on the organization's duties, she said.

Only dues-paying members can vote in June. Currently only eight members have paid their $10 annual dues.

The board accepted Fitzgerald's nomination of area resident Rachel Young for the post of President.

The board was also unanimous in appointing Sue Forti to the post of Assistant Treasurer.

McCabe distributed a map of the part of Roslindale covered by the organization. The map currently appears on the association's website, but McCabe said the bylaws do not reflect that the association's area of coverage has grown over the years.

"I believe there was an addendum to the bylaws," Fitzgerald said. "There was a lot of hot discussion about the boundaries."

Fitzgerald suggested that the issue would be resolved as part of the process of updating the bylaws.

The board unanimously voted to approve up to $100 toward software to assist with updating the bylaws.

Forti said the software was $59 in 2015 and speculated that it could be as much as $75 now.

Fitzgerald also brought up an issue regarding cyclists on speeding on the path down Peter's Hill.

"I have no problem with cyclists who follow the rules," he said, but said some are causing unsafe conditions.

Schneider said the speed limit for cyclists is 10 miles per hour.

"This was like 40," Fitzgerald said.

Schneider said that not only are park rangers responsible for enforcement, but the Arboretum also has an ambassador program, an arm of the Arboretum's visitor engagement program. Ambassadors can interact with visitors to help them find their way around and also to remind visitors of the rules. Their office can be contacted at 617-524-1718.

Julia O'Brien asked about a drone she recently saw flying over the Arboretum.

"It's not bothering me in any major sense," she said. "I'm just asking out of curiosity."

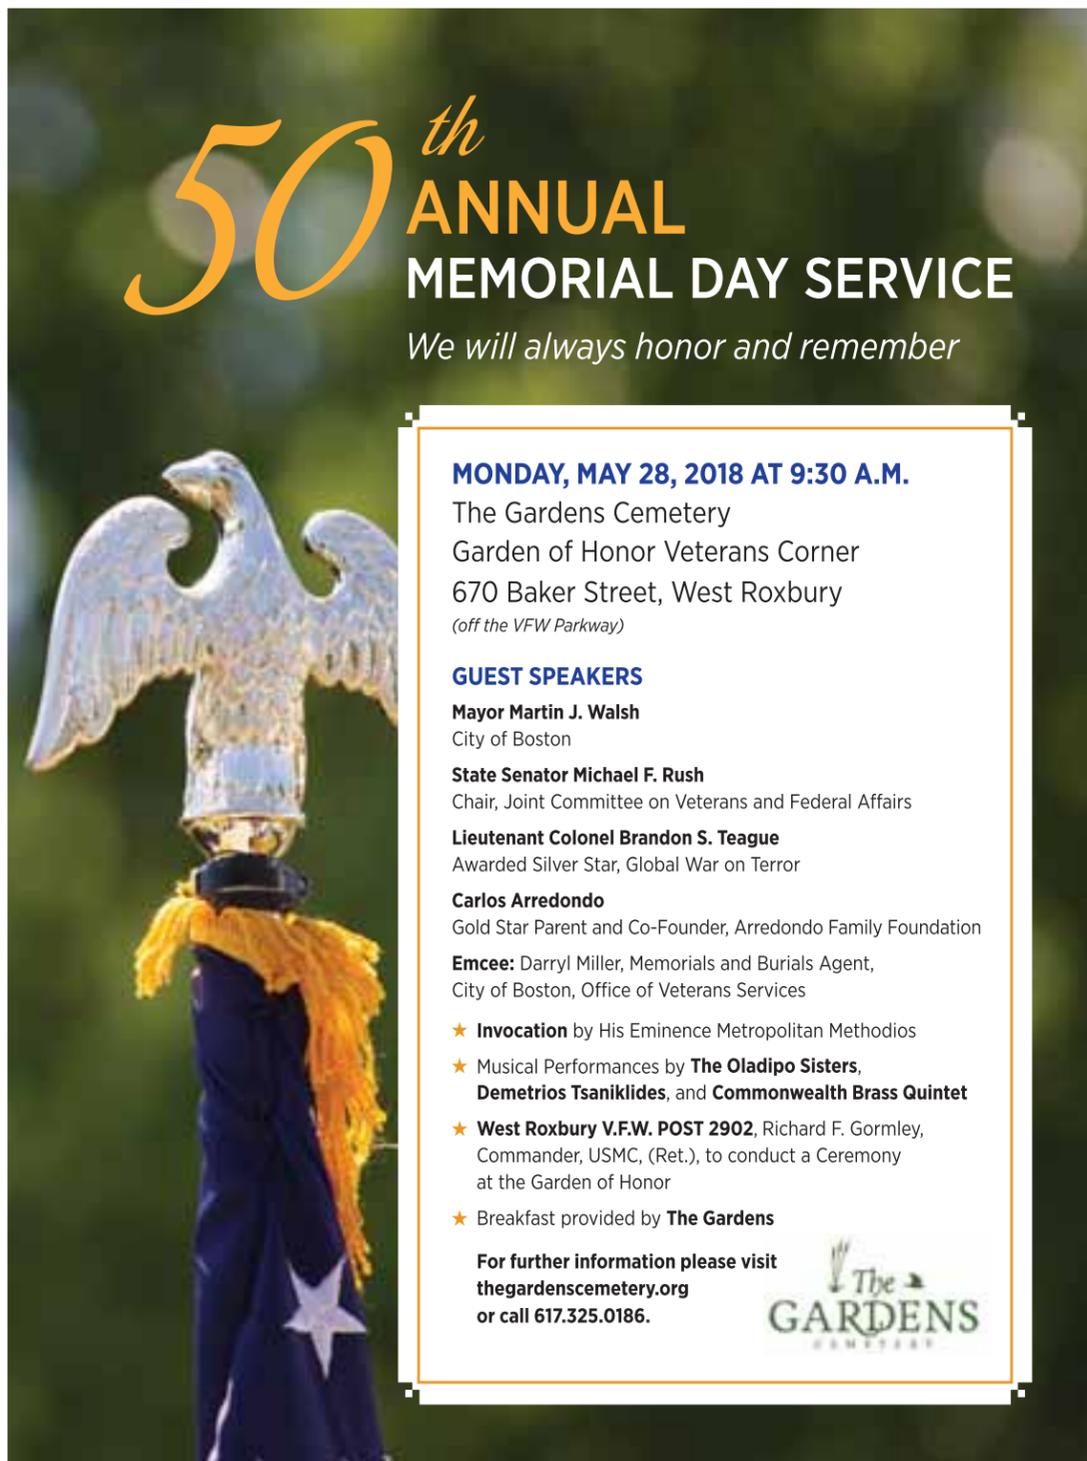

Schneider said he believes the drone is being operated by a researcher doing a phenology study.

He said the university discourages drone use in the Arboretum, and that even researchers who gain approval are given restrictions about where and when they can be used.

"You're not flying a drone on Lilac Sunday," he offered as an example.

"If they have FAA paperwork, they can fly," he said, but park rangers will still indicate to drone operators that the hobby is unwelcome inside the Arboretum.

The June meeting will be held at 7 p.m. on Monday, June 11 in the Community Room at Longfellow House.

Memorial Day

The Fogg Roberts American Legion Post in Hyde Park will also host its annual Memorial Day Services at the post at 8 a.m. After services, the procession will go to Most Previous Blood Church for Mass to be dedicated in memory of all those lost in battle. There will be services afterward at the Roberts Post as well, and then a procession to Fairview Cemetery and a dedication of the following Hero Squares: Legion Square, Shampa Monument, the Polish American Citizen Club, Leo Raymond Square, Major Albert Kelley field and others.

There will then be a demonstration from the Firing Squad and a performance of Taps. A visit to the John Connolly grave site in honor of the Post's deceased Color Guard members will follow. After returning to the Post after this dedication, a collation will be served to members and guests.

Christopher Columbus Park in the North End will also host Honor and Tribute: Memorial Day Concert at 6:30 p.m. Also in the North End, the Prince Hall Freemasons will host its Memorial Service at Copp's Hill Burying Ground at 10:30 a.m. Prince Hall (c.1735-1807) was the founder of "Black Freemasonry" in the United States, known today as Prince Hall Freemasonry, and formed the African Grand Lodge where he was Grand Master. He was one of the first abolitionists.

In the Back Bay Fens neighborhood, the Veterans Memorial Park will be hosting its 72th Annual Memorial Day Service at 11 a.m.. The park itself has monuments dedicated to service persons who fought in World War II, the Korean War, and the Vietnam War, and also honors Sergeant Charles Andrew MacGillivray, a Boston resident who received a Medal of Honor for his role in the Battle of Normandy.

Roxbury Main Streets (WRMS). The night also featured dancing and live music, as well as programming information from WRMS.

“We’re really excited, we have a lot of the community out to support us,” said WRMS Executive Director Danielle Joseph.

Joseph said they changed the name to reflect what WRMS has been doing in the neighborhood and celebrate the community’s accomplishments throughout the years.

“We decided to change the name to Celebrate West Roxbury for our seventh annual Taste in order to let people know that we’re trying to figure out more ways to help out the community and help highlight what WRMS does,” she said.

Joseph said they are working to help the community as well as celebrate its accomplishments.

“It’s just a good night and we’re just so thankful to all our sponsors and guest and it’s going to be a good night,” she said.

Residents Connor and Connie Sullivan said they came from Roslindale to check out what West Roxbury has to offer.

“We just wanted to get some good food and a good time,” said Connor. “The food is great; I like the assisted living food.”

“The bacon-wrapped dates were amazing,” said Connie.

The Sullivans were referencing the fact that Sophia’s Snow Place was giving out food during the event. When asked how one could procure their food outside the Taste, representatives from Sophia said one would have to be a resident or a family member and come and visit to get their culinary items.

Resident Catrina Cane said she and a friend came out to check out the community and meet some friends.

“We wanted to come out to meet people and see people, and it’s awesome, we love it,” she said. “There are some restaurants we haven’t been to yet or heard of, so we’re excited to try them out.”

Resident Lora Esstey she has had some bad experiences in past years, but this year looked to be amazing.

“It’s always good food and a good time,” she said, adding she had started going to the event four years ago. “Some years they just haven’t had as much, and some years I had come out and they were out of food, but tonight looks great.”

WRMS has been working mostly on improving traffic flow through its Vision Centre Street initiative and also has been trying to fill vacant spaces in the neighborhood, most notably the BurgerFi location at Shaws, which has been recently filled.

Junior Damato began servicing vehicles in 1969. He owns a 10-bay auto repair service center in Hyde Park and an 8-bay center in Middleboro. Junior is an ASE-certified Master Technician, ASE-certified L-1 and ASE-certified Natural Gas.

A pair of very different commuter cars

The first is the electric powered BMW i3, a four-door hatchback with a gas engine mileage extender. The electric power is amazing and travel mileage is 75–90 miles before the gas engine comes on to power up the electric battery. The gas engine is a small 2 cylinder that is very quiet and extends the travel range an additional 80 miles or so before the 2.3 gallon tank needs a fill up. Charging the battery with the 110-volt plug takes 24 hours when the battery is dead; charging time is less than half that when using the 240-volt plug.

The interior seats four and room up front is plentiful; seats are firm and supportive. Touchscreen display, radio, navigation, heat and a/c controls are all at the driver’s fingertips. The driving is very different than a gas-powered car – it takes a day or so to get used to, especially the deceleration when lifting your foot off the gas pedal. The power is instant from a standing start to yes, way above the legal speed limit, without any hesitation or transmission gear shifting because there are none. This is a great car for driving less than 50 miles a day, unless you can recharge the car every night. The i3 comes in four versions: two with the battery extender, which, in my opinion, is a must. Base price starts at $44,450 to our test version at $51,500 (destination fee: $995). Electric vehicles are not for everyone, but if my travels were mostly local, an electric type hybrid would be on my shopping list.

Next: the Toyota Yaris. It has been a while since I had the opportunity to spend a week in a Yaris and, a few years ago, it was not one of my favorite cars. The Yaris has grown up and now I consider it a good subcompact car and a great Toyota product. Our test car is the Yaris – not the Yaris iA built by Mazda. The Yaris comes with either a manual or 4-speed automatic, our test car was the automatic version. It drives fairly smoothly and power is so-so, but not over the top. The car seats four and there is plenty of front seat room. All controls are in reach and easy to operate. The base Yaris L 5-speed starts out at $15,635 to the SE 4-speed automatic at $19,060 (destination fee: $885). Fuel economy fell short of my expectations of 32–33 MPG; I think gas mileage would be more if equipped with a 5-speed automatic. The car is easy to drive and park, with easy vision from all windows.

There are many options when it comes to vehicle selection – take your time, road test, and mark all the pros and cons on every vehicle you have an interest in.
