Impromptu Roxbury Prep meeting raises tensions

Residents of the Bellevue Hill Neighborhood Association held an unofficial meeting regarding the proposed Roxbury Prep High School at 361 Belgrade Ave. at the E-5 Police Station in West Roxbury on March 20th.

Resident Athena Yerganian said she called the meeting because she wanted to discuss with the community what they thought of the proposal and also what they believed might be a better fit than the school, which is proposing a three-to-four-story high school with 562 students.

Yerganian said she's lived for 55 years at Bellevue Hill, and said she first heard from the Roxbury Prep representatives in 2016. She said she personally doesn't understand why the school is looking to put a high school in what she sees as a small plot of land.

"We especially don't understand given the 48 square miles of Boston why they're taking this teeny-tiny plot of land," she said.

Yerganian said she also felt that there was an undertone of labeling residents opposed to the project unfairly.

"I'm ticked that there are white people calling us racist," she said. "There have been people saying there's a mentality here of 'Not in My West Roxbury has been home to the Shamrock Shootout for over 11 years now, and if the initial sign up for the event was any indication, it's not slowing down any time soon.

"We have 620 kids signed up, and it's probably more than that because all the sticks are gone and we had more than 620 sticks," said Shootout Co Founder Michael O'Brien. "When we opened up the registration, 525 kids signed up online in the first 24 minutes. It was just about to crash the web site."

O'Brien said they've never turned a player away in the 11 years the Shootout has taken place at Temple Street.

"We've never turned a kid down. If they show up go to a group, they take a shirt and go," he said. "It's important because it's the kind of thing that introduces kids to hockey."

The day featured street hockey, of course, but also sausages, hot dogs,

BNN hosts Roslindale artists for bimonthly gallery

Jeff Sullivan

On Monday, March 25, the Boston Neighborhood Network (BNN) opened its doors to Roslindale artists and residents from around the city.

The gallery program opens a new exhibition every other month to showcase one aspect of Boston art. BNN Membership and Development Manager (and Roslindale resident) Janice Williams said they started the galleries three years ago and switch up the theme every time.

"We want to be able to bring in people from all around Boston because we serve all of Boston," Williams said. "But because we're in only one part of the city we don't tend to draw as many people as we'd like, so this is an opportunity to get people in the building. It might be the cupcakes, I don't know, but it seems like they like the art. When we first started we had people from everywhere, like Charlestown or East Boston to Roslindale to West Roxbury to Hyde Park; it's all beautiful work."

Williams ran the gallery while her husband and BNN's It's All About the Arts Host Glenn Williams interviewed the artists on air coming out to the hallway to interview them and residents about the art. Williams then surprised her husband with a birthday cake because, of course, he works on his birthday.

"He always does!" she said.

BNN Transition Manager Susan O'Connor said the most important thing for the art is access, in that they need the hallway gallery to be navigable.

"We hung the paintings up and make sure whatever is hung doesn't interrupt the walls," she said. "Fresh art up here brings new people and that's wonderful."

O'Connor said the themes are not necessarily neighborhood oriented, and vary every gallery.

"We've had so many different themes," she said. "We've had spring as a theme, flowers; we've tried to feature all the different neighborhoods too. Anybody who satisfied the criteria for themes can put their work in."

And O'Connor emphasized there is no age limit on artists for the program either.

"One time I think a girl was 10 and she was putting in a photograph and was featured as we walked down the hallway, and she was one of the most poised children I've ever met in my life," she said. "She wasn't conceited or stuck up or anything else."

Williams said they average is about 14 pieces per gallery, depending on the size.

"It depends on how many we can fit on this wall," she said. "Sometimes if the pieces are bigger we can't do as many."

O'Connor said the gallery allows for different types of media, including found art, like the piece from Roslindale resident and Roslindale Open Studios Organizer Kasey Davis Appleman. Appleman said she usually works with larger pieces, but she was able to make an 8x10 piece that just seemed perfect for this gallery and it was her first time.

"Even though it's a smaller piece of mine, it took me a while to resolve," she said. "I was just finishing this piece and I thought it was time for this guy to get out in the world."

Appleman said she wanted to take a different approach to her sculpture on this piece.

"So sometimes what happens is I'll be interested in certain collected objects and then that'll start the artistic conversation. And this piece, I was thinking about texture and color and so even though I'm making sculpture, I was thinking like a painter."

She added that she loved the event because as an organizer and presenter of Open Studios she doesn't get a chance really to see everyone else's art while she minds her studio.

"I love the idea of bringing Roslindale artists together for shows," she said. "I coordinate the Roslindale Open Studios, which will be happening Oct. 20 and 21 this year, and we're always looking for new artists and they can look us up at roslindaleopenstudios.org."

Resident John DiVirgilio said he and his wife came out because they saw the event on the calendar and both wanted to see what Roslindale has to offer, being located in the Parkway themselves in West Roxbury. They said Appleman's sculpture was their favorite, so far at least.

"I like the fact that it's not overwhelming, it's kind of small so you can take your time and really look at the pieces," he said.

Artist Dan Murphy painted a scene of the North End for his first introduction at the gallery and he said he loves the entirety of the City of Boston.

"I love cityscapes, and I had a previous series of mail trucks, which is kind of an ode to the city too I guess," he said. "I'm really pumped to be here and connect with the rest of the community."

Williams and O'Connor said they would be willing to expand the program if they could find more space at the BNN area.

RVMS celebrates 2018 accomplishments and looks forward

Susan Kryczka
Staff Reporter

Roslindale Village Main Streets (RVMS) held its annual meeting on Thursday, March 19 at Roslindale House before an enthusiastic crowd of over 70 attendees made up of residents, local business owners, volunteers, and a handful of city council hopefuls running for office.

The annual meeting is promoted as an opportunity to present the group's accomplishments and share updates about plans for the next year. Opened to the public, it also gives residents the chance to ask questions and learn more about RVMS.

Reiterating the slogan "Eat, Shop, Play, and Repeat" to describe what RVMS does, Executive Director Alia Hamada Forrest opened the meeting encouraging residents and others to come to Roslindale to shop, enjoy an assortment of local restaurants, and to keep coming back.

Treasurer Nina Pralour provided an upbeat report on the work of each of the organization's committees. "The committees are all volunteers and are really the lifeblood of the organization," she said. Pralour highlighted the major work of the Marketing Committee pointing out a recently completed video series. "Vinny Fieg, who is now also on the Board, was responsible for putting together the videos and spent a lot of time helping us out doing that. He edited and produced all of the videos including the themes "Rozzie Fit, Rozzie Date, Rozzie Style." The videos highlight different businesses in Roslindale and in just a few minutes, give viewers a unique understanding of each business's services and strengths.

Forrest noted that work of the Economic Development Committee concentrated on areas outlined in RVMS's strategic plan and summarized all of the businesses in the district. "What do you think the top three businesses in the area are?" she asked. "There are 20 salons, 18 restaurants in Roslindale Village, and then the health practitioners—that means the dentist, the medical center, chiropractors, all that."

Peter Castellucci of the Design Committee was called to the stage, having raised $55,000. Much of this came from individual donations and it will go toward trash bins, benches, improved lighting and beautifying the area. "The main thing that the Design Committee does is help local businesses with their signage... and also, ways to improve streetscape, ways to make it more pedestrian friendly," said Castellucci. "We identified Poplar Street as having great potential." Castellucci noted that there was keen support for the Poplar Street project. "Pedestrian friendly, better lit and more greenery," is the goal for the Square.

It was noted that the Farmer's Market is the event that has the greatest visibility. The Financial report notes that only 9% of expenditures are online or go to out-of-state vendors. Working within the district is important. The "shop local, buy local" theme helped end 2018 with a surplus.

It was announced that Joanne Rossman of the business, Purveyor of the Unnecessary & the Irresistible, was the winner of the Business of the Year award and Vinny Fieg was named Volunteer of the Year. Fieg's newest mar-

A HEINOUS ACT

Some acts of vandalism are far worse than others. A simple graffiti “tag” may be an eyesore and hassle but is almost quaint when compared to the dregs of society who knock down gravestones or scrawl swastikas on gravestones and school walls.

What happened recently in South Boston and at Mount Hope Cemetery falls squarely in the latter camp. We denounce the acts in the strongest terms we can without resorting to profanity in these family-friendly pages. There are no “two sides of the story” here; this is, at its core, a treasonous affront that fully disrespects our fallen soldiers and police officers.

Unlike most strikes of this sort, there appears to have been no attempt to leave an actual message behind, political or otherwise. The goal was merely wanton destruction, perpetrated by dousing the structures with some sort of oil-based substance. As clean-up teams soon discovered, whatever viscous cocktail of chemicals was used it resisted traditional removal efforts.

After several alternatives were tried and failed, there was finally the discovery of a successful concoction. The mixture that finally worked to remove the oil was a marble poultice in conjunction with tar and asphalt removers.

To be honest, yes Boston is a bit overstuffed with memorials and statues, and more are on the way. In the near future we will see new structures erected to honor Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. (a giant, odd-looking set of holding hands), and a large memorial to the victims of a terrorist attack at the Boston Marathon. The City has also put out a call for artists to design “a permanent piece of public art” to complement a new BPD station in East Boston. If you throw a rock here, you will probably see it bounce off something of either historical or sentimental importance.

These attacks, however, were not casual rock-throwing. They are also unlikely to be the work of stupid kids doing stupid things. These acts of vandalism were as intentional as they were misguided.

The South Boston monument was inscribed with the names of more than 200 fallen, local soldiers who served in World War II. Among the defaced monuments at Mount Hope Cemetery in Mattapan was one dedicated to fallen Boston police officers. Boston Police Commissioner William Gross called the vandalism “incredibly distasteful and disheartening.”

“Clearly, these memorials are meant to honor and show great respect to those, whether they be veterans or police officers, who spent a lifetime in dedicated service to our city and nation,” he told the Boston Herald. “I find it beyond reprehensible and wrong that anyone would think it okay to damage and desecrate such hallowed grounds. Clearly, we hope to quickly identify and hold accountable the person responsible for these misguided and hateful actions.” Anyone with information about the crimes can call the Boston Police Department at (617) 343-4712 or leave an anonymous tip through the Crime Stoppers hotline at (800) 494-TIPS, or texting the word “TIP” to CRIME (27463).

We wish all involved luck in apprehending the vandal and whatever cohorts they may have had. We similarly thank those who are heading up cleaning efforts and hope their painstaking work is successful.

There is, perhaps, some minor comfort to come from the destruction. One problem with monuments of this sort is that they can easily fade into the background of daily life. We try not to, but we do forget about the sacrifices they are there to remind us of, even as we walk by them.

There is an opportunity here to use the acts of vandalism to remind us all of why these men and women were honored and, in a way of our own choosing, thank them for their service and sacrifice. An effort to destroy these monuments may have the wonderful side effect of restoring their prominence and meaning.

When B-I-L-L = B-A-S-I-L

No crossword aficionado would ever think of plugging in the 4-letter word “Bill” as a synonym for “Basil.” But this is what the priest at St. Demetrios Greek Orthodox Church did orally at the recent funeral for Basil Stratis Moskos.

Truth be told, the family requested the use of “Bill” at the services at the Weston church for the octogenarian, because nobody ever called him by his Baptismal name. To me there’s nothing wrong with this strong name Basil, given to him at birth by his Greek parents, but Bill throughout his life eschewed the seemingly nobler, two-syllable name.

Raised by Greek immigrants, who emigrated from Europe to the country without any safety nets—no welfare, Medicaid, WIC, SNAP, and other benefits that our country, reacting to a Judeo-Christian mandate, now generously provides to destitute arrivals—Bill attended the Patrick Lyndon School while his father worked long hours at his own Moskos Lunch in Brighton. Ultimately his father, not unlike other Greek immigrants, secured enough money to buy an entire block in 02135.

Admitted to Boston Latin, Bill continued to help his father prosper at his restaurant. Regrettably, this precluded his participating in many afterschool activities—which is the norm for a number of kids in city high schools, who must work to enable parents to run their own stores or to put food on the table.

An alumnus of the BLS Class of ’57, Bill attended Northeastern, where he became a member of life-affecting ROTC. He became a captain in the US Army Signal Corp, serving for six years. While many people moan and groan about their military experience, Bill was always quick to point out the effectiveness of doing a job the Army way, as well as the occasional omission of logic that the mischievous Sergeant Ernie Bilko, aka Phil Silvers, would harp upon.

A charter member of the Parkway Croquet League, Bill opened two ice cream stores in Brookline, not surprisingly called The Ice Cream Store. Profits from them as well as investments garnered from these profits enabled him, his loving wife Gloria, and children Alyssa and Alex to live in a one-family home.

Even after he sold his two decades later, he never lost his love for ice cream as well as for homemade pie. Needless to say, this did not help his diabetes.

Bill’s generosity to countless causes inspired many people: money was something to give away, not to hoard. His other strong suit was loyalty: allegiance to his family’s new country, America, to his alma maters on Avenue Louis Pasteur and Huntington Avenue and to veteran organizations. While his six years serving Uncle Sam did not involve combat, his sympathy and heart-of-gold were always with his Army buddies across the world trying to hold the bad guys at bay, especially any GI who suffered injuries.

My Kind of Town/

To any mourner who heard Taps solemnly played at Walnut Grove Cemetery on a cold March day or saw the American flag, after being folded in a crisp, isosceles triangle, given to his wife with the somber, “On behalf. . . of a grateful nation. . .”, it was no surprise that Bill wanted, in lieu of flowers at his funeral, that donations to be made to the Wounded Warrior Project.

Letters to the Editor

WHERE HAS OUR DIGNITY GONE?

To the Editor:

Many of us pass by numerous monuments and memorials dedicated to those heroes among us who sacrificed their all for us whether in military service or as police officers. As I read about vandals attempting to destroy such monuments (ANGER AND A LESSON, Boston Herald, March 20), I wondered what kinds of people are we living around. Where did such hate come from?

I have often stopped by such memorials to our heroes who fought and died for us to be here today. What kind of hatred is there that makes these vandals feel good about their evil actions? The second assault on sacred ground was over at Mt. Hope in Mattapan.

I second the notion of Boston Police Commissioner Willie Gross who stated, “I find it beyond reprehension and wrong that anyone would think it okay to damage and desecrate such hallowed grounds.”

What is happening to America today? What has happened to our dignity? What has happened to our core values?

Mayor Walsh Opens Applications for Boston Eats Mini-Grants

Mayor Martin J. Walsh today announced mini-grant applications are now available for community partners interested in creating summer meal sites through the Boston Eats program, which provides free meals to youth age 18 and under across the City of Boston. Organizations are encouraged to apply at the link below by the April 5, 2019 deadline.

“The ability to access healthy meal options is directly linked to a young person’s health and success,” said Mayor Walsh. “I am encouraged by the strong partnerships we have made to address the summer meal gap, and connect our youth to easily accessible and healthy meal options as they transition into a new school year.”

Led by the Mayor’s Office of Food Access (OFA), the Boston Eats program aims to increase community participation through a series of mini-grants to be distributed to partners who will create nontraditional summer meals sites in 30 locations across the City of Boston. These mini-grants are made possible through a partnership between OFA, Project Bread’s Child Nutrition Outreach Program, and the YMCA of Greater Boston, and by funding provided through the

TECHNOLOGY TUTORING PROGRAM FOR SENIORS

Student volunteers from The Roxbury Latin School give seniors an introduction to computers or smart phones in their state-of-the-art computer lab. This program allows the senior to work one-on-one with a student to learn basic technology skills. If you are working on a laptop or tablet at home, you may bring that with you. If you would like to learn more about your smart phone, bring that too! Seniors with all levels of experience are welcome to participate in this program, from beginners on up! Technology Tutoring meets for one hour, once a week for 6 weeks and is offered at no charge. Location: Roxbury Latin School, 101 St. Teresa Ave. in West Roxbury Day and Time: Tuesdays from 3:15 to 4:15 p.m. Start Date: April 9, 2019 For more information or to register for this program contact Ann Glora at 617-477-6616 or aglora@ethocare.org

WEST ROXBURY LIBRARY APRIL IS WEST ROXBURY READS

Join us for a month-long series of author talks, panels and films. Complete schedule of events at friendsofthewrlibrary.org

APRIL 1, 6:30 PM - Film: "Who Will Write Our History?" Directed by Roberta Grossman, the film tells the story of Warsaw Ghetto residents, who buried writings and art on the ghetto property.

APRIL 4, 6:30 PM - Maurice Lee, Chairman of the Boston University English Department. Dr. Lee will discuss the explosion of information technology in the 19th century and implications of that history for our information-besotted 21st century in advance of publication of his book, "Overwhelmed: Literature, Aesthetics, and the 19th-Century Information Revolution," to be published in fall, 2019.

APRIL 8, 6:30 PM - Dan Kennedy, author, media commentator and Northeastern U professor, will discuss his recent book, "The Return of the Moguls," about the acquisition of important media by corporate titans.

APRIL 11, 6:30 PM - "These Truths: A History of the United States" by Harvard historian Jill Lepore, is the focus of the 2019 West Roxbury Reads series. Dr. Lepore, who is also a New Yorker columnist, has been praised for the way her history includes voices of the marginalized which have been omitted from traditional histories. She will speak following a reception where copies of "These Truths" will be available for sale.

About West Roxbury Reads - West Roxbury Reads is a biennial event created in 2006 to focus on one author's title which the community reads and discusses in a month of relevant events, speakers, and activities. Past authors have included Pulitzer Prize winner Geraldine Brooks; journalist Michael Pollan; National Book Award winner Julia Glass; biographer Justin Martin; and Lois Lowry.

Back Yard' (NIMBY) which suggests that we don't want people from outside our community or people of color which is why I got involved in talking about this project... The notion of blanketing a community as racist because we believe that there are traffic issues, safety issues and the fact that we believe these students should have a facility that is 90,000 square feet to accommodate whatever the school needs is unfair."

Yerganian echoed a concern many residents have made at public meetings about the project since it was reduced over the summer from 90,000 square feet and nearly 800 students to 49,000 square feet and 562, which is the question of what is going to happen to those students the school still has but cannot use with the building's new configuration. Roxbury Prep High School Principal Shradha M. Patel attended the meeting and said then and before that Roxbury Prep does have the capacity for those additional 238 seats and the middle school feeder system is designed for that, so they will have to rethink their intake models. But she did say she did not feel it would take away from the educational quality of the school.

Residents were concerned at this meeting and previous meetings that the additional seats could lead to additional high school sites in the future.

"There's no interest in more schools," said Patel. "Once you get an agreement with the BPDA, we are bound by contract for the 562 seats."

Yerganian said she was also disturbed by the fact that she left 50 flyers at the school for residents to come to her meeting for distribution to those interested. Patel responded by saying, "We're not allowed to distribute nor would we anything not approved by the school," she said.

Resident Gina Charles came with her daughter Shalyha Charles-Arnoux and Nygetll Charles-Arnoux to express her concern that her son, who is now at Roxbury Prep Middle School, is going to be put in danger because of the traffic at the location.

"I don't like that location," she said. "It's going to be full of traffic. The racist comment? I don't know where that came from but it didn't come from the community. The space is just too small and with the traffic and the schools and the church, there's just going to be a lot of conflicts."

Roxbury Prep Public Relations Representative Autumn McLaughlin attended the meeting and pointed out that one of the selling points for the school is that it's right at the Bellevue Hill Commuter Rail Station and four bus stops. She said students will be required to sign a contract with the school stating that they will not drive, and they estimate 90 percent of their students will take public transit to get to and from school every day. She also said the school is creating its schedule around the Commuter Rail Schedule so students can jump right off the train and go to class 10 minutes later.

Residents expressed concern regarding the lack of solid commitments from the MBTA to move bus stops closer to the school instead of west of the West Roxbury Parkway, which would otherwise require students to cross a very busy intersection at a very congested time. McLaughlin said they won't get any commitments from the MBTA until they can unequivocally state they have approval from the City of Boston's various agencies they need to start building.

"We have put through a proposal for a school to be built," said Roxbury Prep parent Debbie Dunlap. "The MBTA decides when the train is going to be stopping. Why are they going to change their schedule now if the building is not there?"

Yerganian said she felt other locations would be better suited for this school, like the soon-to-be shuttered West Roxbury Academy and Urban Science Academy (formerly the West Roxbury High School) because it has a lot of space for recreation. McLaughlin said they thought that was a good location too, but the Boston Public Schools Department is not willing to sell the site, and it will soon be undergoing renovations and repairs to get it back into the school circulation. McLaughlin pointed out they've also looked at other sites.

"Roxbury Prep has put in a number of bids over the years," McLaughlin said. "They've tried to get other sites but have lost out."

She said this location was the one they chose since they started the process of trying to find one building to host their high school in 2012.

The BPDA held a meeting about Roxbury Prep on Wednesday, after the Bulletin's deadline. Coverage of that meeting will be in next week's issue.

SENIOR * LIVING

Reflecting on a life well lived

Matt Benedetti
Staff Reporter

Eleanor McCabe fixes a cup of tea as the mellifluous voice of Patsy Cline reverberates throughout the well-appointed two room apartment at Edelweiss Village in West Roxbury. The retired school teacher is the picture of contentment as she takes the first sip from the steaming cup and places it back on the saucer.

On this unseasonably warm March morning, Eleanor's smile lights up the room as much as the sunlight shining through her parlor window.

At 91, Eleanor does not own a smart phone or have a "Facepage," the term she uses to reference the ubiquitous social media site. Unlike so many of us who are attached to our devices, her validation is derived not from a handheld screen but rather a deep and abiding Catholic faith practiced throughout a lifetime of joy and heart-break.

In an era fueled by a practically Pavlovian relationship with our phones, Eleanor's sedate approach to daily life is a rare but welcome contrast to the digital distractions so pervasive today.

The former grammar school teacher possesses the relaxed demeanor of an individual comfortable with her life then and now. When asked about her serene deportment, Eleanor points to her Catholicism as well as a rewarding professional life devoted to teaching the young people of Boston.

"I loved teaching and really do miss it," she said reflecting on her 33 year career.

"Mrs. McCabe" taught 3rd grade at the Roger Clap School in Dorchester for the majority of her career preceded by an initial stint at Most Precious Blood School in Hyde Park and a brief term of instruction at South Boston High School in the late 1970s. As a teacher, making a difference in her students' lives was always the priority.

"When you knew that the kids were engaged and learning—that was the best feeling," she said with a smile.

It is true of course that each student was different, though her thoughtful approach remained constant.

"No matter what I heard about a kid's reputation, I was always careful to make my own judgments. Sometimes all the student needed was a little attention and understanding," she said. "I never wanted my students to dislike school."

Some people work for decades without knowing if their efforts have made an impact, but Eleanor McCabe does not have that problem.

Recently, eight of her former 3rd grade students at the Clap School gathered in the Bierstube Bar at Edelweiss Village to reminisce with this remarkable person whose hallmark was an enduring compassion. After communicating via "facepage," the former cohort decided to pay a visit to the teacher they still fondly remember despite leaving her Harvest Street classroom in Dorchester almost 50 years ago.

Mary Lydon lived on Bellflower Street and fondly remembered Mrs. McCabe's class.

"She was a dedicated teacher and treated you like one of her own," said Lydon. "It was a disciplined classroom but she always took the time to talk with us and you knew she care,” recalled Lydon.

Another former Clap student, Paul Peluso, remembers her this way.

“She was kind to everybody and always cheerful—just the kindest person you would ever want to meet,” he said. “We should all have such a legacy,” he added.

A few years ago Eleanor received a bouquet of flowers out of the blue from a former student she taught at the Clap School in 1977.

Thanks for everything—Patrick Coffey were the only words on the card.

“To this day, I don’t know what I did for him,” she said with a bemused smile.

Undoubtedly, Eleanor’s outlook has been influenced by her mother, Delia Lyons, who once advised her to pursue a teaching career due to her genial manner, intellect and patience.

While working full time at New England Telephone, she attended the Boston College In town Evening Program to pursue a college degree. Upon earning her Bachelor of Science degree, she accepted a position at Most Precious Blood in Hyde Park despite taking a significant cut in salary. Almost immediately though, she knew that a teaching career had been the right decision.

“It was the happiest time of my life,” she remembered. “Always listen to your mother,” she laughed, recalling the sound advice.

The youngest of three children, Eleanor grew up in the shadow of Sacred Heart Church on Cliffmont Street in Roslindale. She enjoyed a close relationship with her older siblings, Joe and Mary. Her father Joseph, a native of County Galway, Ireland, died of cancer when Eleanor was only 7 months old.

Despite the tragedy, she recalled a happy home with her family and a street full of friends.

Eleanor Lyons became Eleanor McCabe after meeting her future husband Ed at Sacred Heart Church where both were regular communicants. After the wedding the couple settled in Roslindale and was active in parish life. Eleanor served as a Lector and Eucharistic Minister for many years. They raised a daughter, Patricia and enjoyed 50 happy years of marriage until Ed’s passing in 2014.

A strong faith has sustained her during the hard times and the period of transition that brought her to Edelweiss Village. However, she soon adjusted to the new environs.

“I love it here and Debbie (McPhee) is great,” she said. “They always have a full calendar of events and I can’t say enough good things. Everyone is so friendly—I would recommend Edelweiss Village to everyone,” she added.

After a 33 year career as an educator, Eleanor has witnessed profound changes in technology, method and doctrine but the core mission remains: teaching students. She understands that the profession can be challenging at times and has advice for educators beginning their career.

“Find some creative mentors as soon as you can and go to the primary conference whenever you can afford to do so. The inspiration and support will give you a wealth of resources,” she said.

“Enjoy every aspect of your professional development. Get as involved with your union as much as time and energy permit,” she advised.

In a field with almost infinite demands, being patient is also important.

“Take care of yourself so you can take care of your students and colleagues but, above all, try to have some fun every day,” said Eleanor as she set about brewing another pot of tea.

West Roxbury Girl Scout earns Gold Award

Elise Poniatowski of West Roxbury has earned the highest award in Girl Scouting, the Gold Award. A 12th grader at the Newman School in Boston, Elise created a poetry community group as a safe place to people to share and connect. Girl Scouts of Eastern Massachusetts will honor Elise and other Gold Award Girl Scouts from across the Commonwealth with a ceremony at the Massachusetts State House on June 14. The Gold Award requires a Girl Scout to dedicate 1-2 years (80 hours) on a community service project that addresses an issue and is sustainable.

www.gsema.org Elise, who belongs to Troop 79842 in West Roxbury, first created The Poetry Connection as a monthly poetry night at her church. Her goal: “to build a community where voices could be heard and combat hopelessness and isolation brought on by the current social climate of the world.” Elise hoped the artistry and possibilities she loved in poetry could translate resonate with others. “I wanted to give this same empowerment back into the community through poetry.” The Poetry Connection gained such a following that Elise worked to move it to her own school. It now exists as a weekly club at the Newman School, and will be continued by another student and members of the community. “To me, Girl Scouting has been such a strong sense of community in my life,” says Elise. “I have found how to make a family with the girls in my troop and also how to connect with my community around me. It has given me an opportunity to be grateful for what I have and use that privilege to help those who are not as well off. It has made community service an important part in my life.”

Elise Poniatowski of West Roxbury won a gold award from the Girls Scouts by creating a poetry community in order to give the same empowerment to others that she feels when writing.

ROSLINDALE LIBRARY AROUND THE NEIGHBORHOOD - FRIENDS OF ROSLINDALE LIBRARY OFFER FREE BOOK SHARING LIBRARIES

The Roslindale Community Libraries Project developed by The Friends of Roslindale Library is increasing the number of Free Book Sharing Libraries in neighborhood businesses and yards to make sure you can get books during the library’s renovation starting later in 2019. With the help of partners, we will have handcrafted libraries to give away to people who would like one on their property and meet the criteria. The community libraries are book-sharing boxes placed for public access to support good reading habits. People drop off books they no longer need and pick up books in which they are interested. The Friends will help keep the boxes stocked from their store of donated used books. Local businesses throughout Roslindale were recruited to host a library shelf as well. A map of all the locations will be produced once all the new community libraries are open. Any donations of books or funding are welcome.

Those interested in having a library on their property can check at the main desk of the branch library at 4246 Washington Street or call 617-323-2343. Applications should be submitted by the end of April

Event Description

The Boston Planning & Development Agency will hold a public meeting to discuss a proposed amendment to the Neighborhood District Articles of the Boston Zoning Code regarding Additional Dwelling Units (ADUs).

As part of the initial pilot in November 2017, the ADU amendment was made to Article 53 (East Boston Neighborhood District), Article 55, (Jamaica Plain Neighborhood District), and Article 60 (Greater Mattapan Neighborhood District) of the Boston Zoning Code. An ADU is a new typology to Boston that could create naturally affordable rental units without significantly changing the fabric of the existing neighborhoods, by allowing owner occupants to carve out space within the envelope of their home for a smaller, independent rental unit.

The courts went on seemingly for miles as hundreds of kids duked it out. The event saw increased participation this year, despite some heavy wind weather.

street food, a DJ, Lord Mayor of West Roxbury Richie Gormley, Boston Police Department Chief William Gross and Massachusetts Gov. Charlie Baker.

“He’s always been a supporter of this. When he was running he attended so this is not his first time,” he said. “He loves this.”

While it was a bit windy and snow had coated the city with a light layer the night before, the weather warmed up enough to melt the snow and make for a good playing surface.

“Like I said last year, Mother Nature is a fan of the Shamrock Shootout,” he said. “We dodged a big bullet with the weather this year.”

O’Brien said a lot of work goes into creating the event, which is obvious as street hockey courts stretch as far as the eye can see.

“We have a great group of people who really have a passion for this and for the community,” he said. “There’s at least 100 volunteers now and we have computer guys now, we have a lot of guys behind the scenes who are doing a lot of organizational work. That’s how it had to happen for the 620 kids playing right now. It’s a credit to the neighborhood because everyone wants to help out and do something.”

O’Brien said he and the other founders generally now just do the heavy lifting to get the nets and gear out on the street.

“A lot of the work behind the scene is a whole bunch of mothers, and they should get a lot of credit,” he said. “They do get credit, but they should get more. They do a lot of the computer stuff and organizational work; we do a lot of the lugging of the nets... We get them from the community, I mean (Boston Mayor) Marty Walsh helped out with his foundation and it’s a good time and it’s a lot easier with them involved. The Bruins also gave us a lot of goalie equipment.”

State Rep. and Coach Ed Copping said he thinks the Shootout will have to look at other streets if they want to expand the event.

“They’re already at the tips of the street on either end when the street starts to tip down, and they have no room to grow!” he said. “They have a great system of volunteers and, with the original founders, they make it seamless when you come here to play. It just seems to work so well.”

Resident Sheila Murphy said she’s been coming for years now and wouldn’t miss it even if it was raining.

“It’s so awesome, I’ve watched my daughter go from one end of the street to the together and every year it just amazes me how many people are here,” she said.

Resident John Fitzgerald volunteered selling shirts and merchandise for the event.

“Anything left over goes to the local charities here and we help doing the organizing as well,” he said. “I grew up here and been here all my life and I know the guys who started organizing it and it’s unbelievable. It’s one of the best events in the city. To close down a whole street and have 30 or 40 rinks or whatever it is, it’s definitely a unique situation.”

Resident Chris Ulrich said he and his son didn’t know what to expect when they first came four years ago, but the Shootout just took them in.

“They gave us a stick and a shirt and put my kid on a team and we’ve been coming every year after that,” he said. “It’s been great to see all the other people in the neighborhood, and the kid loves to play the game and it’s a good family event. It’s really impressive to see all the people come out here and talk, eat sausages, eat pizza, it just seems really good to me.”

Connecticut resident Cecilla Cloutier said she came up to help out at the event and see her son Kevin Cloutier.

“It’s so unique and everybody cooperates,” she said. “I was just saying to my son, look at all these wonderful people in their homes who are basically giving up their freedom today.”

keting video was played for the audience which will be used to kick-off the spring fund raising efforts.

Forest ended the business portion of the meeting, which lasted only 30 minutes by saying, “Shop locally! Keep our businesses alive. We’re so unique because they’re small. Let’s keep it that way.” She invited the attendees to take the rest of the evening to connect with neighbors in the room, visit the various committees who had tables set up in the rear of the hall, and to reach out to the candidates who were in attendance. Cookies and refreshments were supplied by one of the new Roslindale businesses opened in 2018, the Square Root.

Asked about the relatively short business meeting, Forrest said she learned the hard way that long meetings do not encourage the interaction that the organization fosters. The meeting is now focused on allowing lots of time after the business reports to have attendees meet each other and talk. “It allows inter-committees to meet each other for the first time.”

Fieg, who received the Volunteer of the Year award, said he joined the marketing committee because it’s what he does professionally. Asked about his future plans he said, “I plan to stay on the marketing committee as long as I have the time and ability to serve on it.”

LAVOIE

Colette L. Of Roslindale, MA, died on March 17, 2019, at age 75. She leaves a brother and sister-in-law, Philip and Joan Lavoie, a sister who predeceased her, Suzanne O'Donnell, her nephews, Brandon Lavoie and Marty O'Donnell and nieces Kellie O'Donnell, Kim Wolfson, Erin O'Donnell, and Katie Sullivan, as well as several grandnieces and grandnephews. She maintained close and loving relationships with these family members in spite of geographical distance in many cases. Colette also extended much caring attention and guidance to Harrison and Ezra Gish, sons of friends. She also leaves a close-knit group of diverse and in many instances lifelong friends. She was a wonderful aunt and a great friend, and going forward her passing will be deeply felt among them all. Colette attended Notre Dame College in Manchester, NH, graduating as a Medical Technologist in 1966. In 1981, she earned a Master's in Public Health from Boston University. She worked and lived in Boston, a city she loved. Colette also enjoyed traveling and visited many countries on her own, with friends and as part of a group. In her younger years, she dabbled in photography but reading and The New York Times crossword puzzles remained her passions throughout the years. At this time arrangements are being made for a private ceremony to celebrate her life. Donations in Colette's name can be made to Boston's WBUR radio station or the Stanley Tippet Hospice Home in Needham, MA. For online guestbook pemurrayfuneral.com P.E. Murray - F.J. Higgins George F. BPDA approves 1507 VFW Pkwy. development

Staff Reporter

Recently, the Boston Planning and Development Agency (BPDA) approved the project formerly known as 1507 VFW Pkwy. in West Roxbury.

The 254-rental property is slated to have 33 of its units income-restricted. The project will include 387 garage parking spaces in a five-level internal parking garage, along with an outdoor pool, and ample open space.

The project will bring public realm improvements including sidewalk widening and repair, elimination of a blighted building and transportation/bike improvements as well as contributions totaling $363,000 for the Boston Trailer Park Tenants' Association, and other various community organizations.

Known now as the Parkway Apartments at 1545 VFW,

BPDA Project Manager Michael Sinatra said the two-detached four-story buildings will be constructed at 45 feet and will have 251,000 square feet.

"The only zoning code violation on this project is conditional use," he said. "The main concerns were traffic as well as for the main building to achieve net-zero carbon and in response to the traffic concern, the proponent plans to reconfigure a lane on the VFW Parkway to help with queuing at the intersection of VFW Parkway and Spring Street. There is also a MassDOT plan to invest $800,000 to $900,000 to the repair of signalization and other improvements to the intersection."

Sinatra said the proponent will also be offering a shuttle to the MBTA West Roxbury Commuter Rail station at peak times, and will also be constructing the building so it only uses electricity and no fossil fuels for heating purposes.

"The proponent will make many other efforts to achieve this goal, and because of that support from both the community and City Councilor Matt O'Malley. The city councilor also sent a letter we received just this afternoon."

Development leader John Noone with Lincoln Property said they would be estimating about 250 construction jobs will be created of the project and as a community benefits package of about $363,000 and will be donating $25,000 of that to Parkway in Motion's Scholarship, $303,000 to the Boston Trailer Park Association to help with the organization's $900,000 three year capital improvement plan, $25,000 to the West Roxbury Little League, $10,000 to construct a sign for the Spring Valley Neighborhood Association and $10,000 to the Irish Social Club.

The Board voted unanimously to approve the project.

Boston Children's Hospital's Collaboration for Community Health.

"Our partnership with Children's Hospital will enhance our Boston Eats program and feed more youth when meal options may be limited," said Chief of Health and Human Services Marty Martinez. "I'm proud of the work carried out by the Mayor's Office of Food Access to further reduce barriers in accessing healthy meal opportunities so Boston youth have access to reliable and healthy food options year-round."

Meals are available on a first-come-first-serve basis with no identification or registration required for youth. In addition to providing meals, these sites provide a safe space for youth to engage with their peers when school is not in session and connect families with other resources in their neighborhoods.

Dismantling Education Inequity in Boston

There are many inequities in the Boston Public School System. Many Boston residents are unaware of this. Progressive West Roxbury/Roslindale will be hosting an event on April 9 to provide an opportunity to learn about these inequities.

Progressive WRox/Roz has joined with NAACP-Boston, Lawyers for Civil Rights, JP Progressives, Downtown Progressives, Citizens for Public Schools, QUEST, and several other groups to form the Boston Coalition for Education Equity.

The Boston Coalition for Education Equity is concerned with persistent inequities that play out in numerous ways for Boston students, what policies other cities are using, and action steps to move forward.

Coalition events are informative, provocative, important, heart-wrenching, and encouraging. Our forum will highlight three case studies: — BPS Budgeting Hunger Games — Testing Towards Destruction — Exam School Equity

Held at Temple Hillel B'Nai Torah, 120 Corey St, West Roxbury, at 7:00pm on April 9
