Tips for West Roxbury helping restaurant workers

West Roxbury resident Bob Kilduff has organized a fundraiser for local waitstaff.

Local West Roxbury resident, former veteran and current City of Boston Firefighter Bob “BK” Kilduff started a community fundraiser last month to help restaurant workers in the neighborhood to weather the effects of the local economy shut down.

While Kilduff said he understands the need to keep people safe, he felt he needed to help, as many restaurant workers have been laid off a this time. According to an article published on Masslive.com on April 27, 93 percent of Massachusetts restaurant workers have been laid off as sales have dropped by 81 percent since the start of the COVID-19 outbreak.

Kilduff said locally, the response from residents has been great.

“We’re trying to raise awareness and people really liked the idea too,” he said. “Actually, a couple of other towns have picked up on it and done it too. A couple of guys in New Hampshire just took off with it. It’s taken on a life of its own, which is great to Meet Duckens Petit-Maitre: Candidate for State Rep.

Hyde Park homeowner Duckens Petit-Maitre knows how to start anew and face challenges. A native of Haiti, he moved to Roslindale at a young age and attended the Boston Public Schools, graduating from West Roxbury High School in 2004.

“I still remember living on Augustus Ave. when I was young,” said Petit-Maitre, 35. “It was a beautiful neighborhood, very quiet. But sometimes you’ve got to move on.”

Petit-Maitre is approaching the race to earn the seat of state representative, open for the first time in decades due to the retirement of veteran Rep. Angelo Scaccia, with the same enthusiasm and a sense of urgency. He said he feels the concerns of the district, particularly for people of color, have been neglected by the old guard.

“Life is changing, and we have to change with life,” Petit-Maitre said, trying to hold back

“As a father of two boys, I have to set a good example for my kids,” he continued. “You can’t just act like you have nothing to lose. I want to bring the

Allston Brighton Food Pantry supper returns

While the in-person supper will not be coming back anytime soon, a grab and go version has been set up.

While it probably won’t be in its historical form for awhile, the Allston Brighton Food Pantry announced last week that its supper program has returned, in take-out, and it’s not stopping any time soon.

Brighton Allston United Church of Christ Pastor Mark Seifried said though it was tough to shut it down, even for one week, he’s hopeful that the decades-long tradition will continue during the time of lock downs and COVID-19.

“We’ve done it the last two weeks We’re serving take-out style with all the contents in a bag, and we give a bag of groceries with fresh fruits, fresh vegetables, baked goods if we have them and bread if it’s available,” he said. “It’s so the folks actually have food they can enjoy for a few days after the community supper.”

Seifried said the supper is open starting every Wednesday at 6 p.m. at 404 Washington St. in Brighton, and is open to anyone.

“There’s no criteria, people just show up and we give them food, we don’t ask questions,” he said. “We just say, ‘it’s great to see you,’ and pass out food.”

Seifried said it was a tough call three weeks ago when the church decided to temporarily stop the tradition, which has been a mainstay for residents in Brighton and Allston for about 42 years now. Seifried said to his knowledge, there

COVID-19 Health Inequities Task Force underway

Focus on racial and ethnic disparity

Matt MacDonald
Staff Reporter

On April 9, Mayor Martin Walsh announced the creation of the COVID-19 Health Inequities Task Force (HITF) in response to the high number of confirmed cases of the coronavirus in Boston's communities of color and in its immigrant population.

Serving as an advisory group to City Hall as it grapples with the pandemic, the Task Force has been reviewing Boston's racial and ethnic COVID-19 data (provided primarily by the state's Department of Public Health and the city's Public Health Commission) and offering recommendations to try to effectively resolve any health inequities that it finds.

The Task Force is comprised of 24 members – community leaders and specialists including public health physicians, researchers, neighborhood health center CEOs, ministers, and those in the non-profit and private sector.

All were chosen for their close connection to the Black, Latino, Asian, and immigrant populations in the city that are being disproportionately impacted by the coronavirus.

The HITF works in partnership with the Mayor's Office of Health and Human Services (HHS) as well as the Mayor's Office of Economic Development (OED), and both offices – which are led by Marty Martinez and John Barros, respectively – use their resources and connections to put the Task Force's recommendations into action.

As Martinez described it in a phone interview last Thursday, the Task Force is “helping to drive ideas, they're driving initiatives, they're driving a direction and helping us to make sure that we don't lose sight of the inequities that are in front of us,” while adding that his role, interacting with the Task Force, is “part facilitation, part coordination, and part listening to these advisors about what we need to be doing here in the city.”

Since its establishment, the Task Force has been meeting regularly (via Zoom) and – despite its large size and the forced isolation and fast moving nature of the pandemic – its work with the City has shown some immediately results, particularly in the area of testing.

Martinez went into detail regarding this. “Since that first meeting – almost two weeks ago – we've been able to partner with eight different community health centers to bring on community based testing, and the City supports it with funding and technical assistance and other support, and testing supplies to help them to be able to do that.”

The HHS Chief also noted two other COVID-19 recommendations being put into practice: the Task Force's push for the City's better understanding of its racial and ethnic health data, and neighborhood specific community mobilization.

Task Force member Paul Watanabe – Director of the Institute for Asian American Studies at UMass Boston – illustrated both of these aspects by first comparing data showing Boston's Asian American community's low incidence rate of COVID-19 with its disproportionately high COVID-19 emergency room fatality rate, and then noting the community meetings that were immediately planned and held to address the issue.

Watanabe described the nature of these meetings in relation to the HITF's goals: “The Task Force idea is not for them to be a bunch of experts and tell the community what they need to know, and so forth, but to also understand that people – particularly those who live and work on the ground within the city – are the people that can help inform the City, and all of us, on making better decisions. And I think that openness is really critical.”

He continued by adding, “Let's not just simply present data. Let's try to figure out how to address what that data's telling us in the near term, the medium term, and the long term.”

Watanabe made sure to note that the COVID crisis did not create the racial and ethnic health inequities visible now, and also connected its effect on minority communities to economic disparities, stating, “The health inequities are the manifestation of something much broader that's occurring within our city – within our society, frankly – and we're seeing it played out, not only in Boston but across the country, in many dimensions.”

Dr. Thea James echoed Watanabe's statement while speaking – in a separate conversation – for herself and the rest of the Task Force. “The one thing none of us has been surprised about is how it turned out demographically, because it always does.”

As an emergency medicine physician at Boston Medical Center, and having deployed domestically and internationally with the City's Disaster Medical Assistance Team, James commented on her experience as it applies to the Task Force's mission:

“I always feel like if something's going on with the community, inside the community, or if people come to a hospital and they're from the community, they know what's going on out there. So what I want to know is what it is that people need most to stop the pipeline of them coming into the hospital, and to stop the pipeline of them testing positive.”

Speaking of the immediate COVID-19 public health crisis, as well as of the underlying racial and ethnic conditions that have brought into

PPE a Trashy Problem

Residents are concerned about personal protective equipment being dropped outside trash cans and the health risks that could cause.

Ariane Komyati
Staff Reporter

Within the past month, wearing medical masks and gloves in public has become the new norm. This has caused an increase in littered personal protective equipment (PPE) in public areas such as parks, parking lots, banks, and busy streets.

Improperly discarded PPE is a nationwide problem, and the city of Boston is no exception. Many Boston residents/community members have voiced their concerns on social media about the amount of littered PPE in the city. Using platforms like Facebook or Twitter, community members share photos of hotspots for PPE litter in Boston.

In Roslindale, many community members have noticed discarded PPE in front of the Post Office on Cummins Highway. Other concentrated areas of littered masks and gloves in Roslindale include Washington Street, American Legion Highway, and Roslindale Square. One community member has noted a fair amount of PPE litter by the Bank of America drive-up ATM in Roslindale Square. Many Roslindale residents have seen a lot of littered PPE in the Stop & Shop parking lot on American Legion Highway, and the Popeyes parking lot.

“[There are a lot of littered masks and gloves] In front of my house. We share a fence with the gas station next door. Their patrons have been throwing their gloves over the fence. It’s crazy how many I see on Washington Street between Archdale and South Street,” noted one Roslindale resident. Another resident stated that she has seen a lot of improperly discarded PPE in front of her house on Neponset Avenue.

“[The littered PPE] Outside the CVS on Washington street is shameful,” stated Roslindale community member Wilma Monaghan.

“Most of the ones [littered PPE] I’ve seen are in supermarket parking lots. Many at the Shaw’s in Hyde Park. I think I counted ten between my parking spot and the front door. [Also at the] Stop & Shop in Roslindale, and I’ve seen many in the parking lots near the Popeyes on the American Legion Highway,” noted Roslindale community member Jackie Neely. One community member suggested that supermarkets place more trash bins by their cart returns to help mitigate the problem.

“Definitely lots [of littered PPE] at the Star Market parking lot and around the edges of the parking lot. Bummer, but there really aren’t many trash cans and I think that would be helpful!” said community member Rory McCusker.

Another community member remarked that Washington St. and Brook Reservation are also “a mess.”

In West Roxbury, hotspots for the littered gloves and masks include the VFW Parkway, Centre Street, and parking lots in front of CVS, Roche Bros, and Star Market. “Supermarket parking lots are loaded with gloves everywhere - I don’t understand why it can’t make it to a trash can,” remarked West Roxbury resident Bonnie Houston.

“Parking lots are a common place [for littered PPE]. I live on Lagrange Street and picked up two discarded masks in front of my house,” stated one West Roxbury resident.

“The Public Works Department works hard each day to provide core city services in the City of Boston. At the direction of public health officials, we are urging residents to assist in our efforts by utilizing trash receptacles to dispose of their rubber gloves, facemasks, and any additional trash. To prevent litter, these items should be placed in a trash bag with other items and securely tied,” stated Chris Coakley, the Public Information Officer for the Boston Public Works Department (PWD).

My heart goes out to . . .

During this pandemic I feel for those grieving the loss of loved ones without the consolation of being with them as they pass and without the solace of wakes and funerals. There are also heartfelt feelings for those still struggling valiantly to recover from the disease and for those who have lost jobs and businesses. But beyond those very tragic losses mentioned above, there are others in no particular order to whom my heart goes out:

My Kind of Town/
Joe Galeota

. . . college and high school seniors who have missed proms, prize nights, and graduations

. . . college and high school athletes who have missed the culmination of winter sports and the entire season of spring sports

. . . high school sophomores and juniors who have missed dancing at their sophomore semis and junior proms as well as visiting college campuses

. . . college and high school actors and musicians whose plays/musicals are undermined after months of practice

. . . middle school students and kindergartners who have missed their "graduations"

. . . participants in dance recitals, science fairs, and debating tourneys

. . . children missing the unbridled exuberance of that last day of school

. . . partygoers denied anniversary, birthday, and Kentucky Derby celebrations

. . . stressed patients awaiting dental procedures and elective surgeries for knee and hip replacements, tonsillectomies, etc.

. . . future motorists anticipating their driving exams

. . . potential lifeguards missing their Red Cross training

. . . teenagers awaiting other summer job openings

. . . parents awaiting the OK's for their children's summer camps to open

. . . engaged couples having their weddings being put on hold

. . . Confirmation, First Communion, Bar and Bat Mitzvah recipients, all having their days-in-the-sun cancelled

. . . youngsters awaiting spring soccer, Little Leagues, and CYO softball/baseball tryouts and games

. . . flower lovers struggling to park near the Arboretum on Lilac Sunday

. . . environmentalists repugnant at the thought of not using their own bags again and again at grocery stores and pharmacies

Undoubtedly there has been much that has been overlooked. There are other examples of pain in these horrible times.

Please forgive me.

QUARANTINED AS A CHILD

To the Editor:

In a time when sheltering in place has become the norm, my memory of being quarantined in the summer of 1936 might be of interest to Bulletin readers. I was seven years old when scarlet fever entered my Dorchester neighborhood. Two of my four brothers and I came down with the disease. A quarantine sign was put on the front door of our flat on Mount Vernon Street indicating, I guess, that in order to avoid infection people must not come into our flat, and those of us who were infected must stay inside. At some point the City medical authorities decided that in order to avoid the spread of the disease we three brothers, and others in the neighborhood, should be isolated from healthy people until we were free of the disease. Jim, Gene and I were taken to the South Department of the Boston City Hospital, a facility for isolating those with contagious diseases.

The usual hospital measles confinement was a month, and my brothers went home in a month, but I was confined for a total of five months. After the first two months I was sent home, presumably cured, but a week later the medical authorities decided I still carried the infection, and I was re-hospitalized for another three months. I was declared free of infection and allowed to return home shortly before Christmas.

My memories of my South Department confinement are scattered and incomplete. I don't recall being confined to bed, or being ill, sad, or abandoned, although I must have been confined to bed at times.

I remember sleeping in a room with four other boys my age. I recall being free to walk along the ward corridor and to play in a recreation room at the end of the corridor. I remember helping the nurses on duty distribute meal trays. During my entire stay I did not see my mother, and I saw my father only once. It was on a day when I was out on the ward porch. My father waved to me as he walked by along Massachusetts Avenue on his way to work.

Late in my hospital stay a decision was made to remove my tonsils and adenoids. I guess the medical people decided my tonsils carried the scarlet fever infection and ridding me of the infection required ridding me of my tonsils. On the morning of the operation I recall something being put over my mouth and nostrils to sedate me. I remember nothing more until the operation was over. It all seemed uneventful. It wasn't long after that I was discharged and sent home. I remember being disappointed that I would miss the upcoming ward Christmas party. I joined my third grade class at Saint Rita School in December after missing the first three months of the school year. I evidently caught up with my class and finished third grade the following June.

ISOLATION ISN'T ALL BAD

To the Editor:

Since we changed our clocks from Eastern Standard Time to Daylight Savings Time, we somehow entered the Twilight Zone and have been placed in seemingly animated suspension since around March 12. Our lives have been turned upside down between fear of the virus to the shutting down of our national economy.

Living now in a life without many distractions, we keep trying to find things to do to keep us from going bonkers. Every day the first thing I do is go out and do my new daily power walk. Sometimes if I get bored later in the day, it is out again for another power walk. Good consequence of this new exercise regiment is that since March 12, I have lost a tad over 10 pounds. Not bad, huh?

Living in an environment of social distancing and social isolation goes so much against the grain of being a social animal as we humans all are. Got my facial cover on and between my red bandanna, backwards baseball cap and cool dark blue aviator sunglasses, I could pass for a Charlestown bank robber.

I get out every day, sometimes to just drive around, other times to use athletic tracks and often walk a beach, calming down with the sight and smell of ocean water. I will never get used to this though and long for a world without masks.

I love walking from Roslindale across the West Roxbury Pkwy into West Roxbury. I always try and color coordinate with my walking outfits. I actually saw two beautiful orioles flying over Oriole Street. How cool is that?

One good thing about my routine now is I walk by Centre Street and Anna's Donuts. I gave up donuts, but they do make the best coffee. I do not like the idea that our life has been placed on hold for the foreseeable future, and I do not like the idea that we have over 26 million Americans out of work and that number is still growing. Soon we will reach 30 million and then we enter a new Great Depression.

Most of us will survive this pandemic but can we say the same for our nation's health and wellbeing going forward? As President Trump and others have said, "The cure can't be worse than virus itself."

It will be nice to keep up my daily walking even when it is no longer required of me to keep from going bat-crazy. I'm starting to like it too much.

ANOTHER SOURCE FOR PPE'S

To the Editor:

I'd like to offer a suggestion for helping to locate medical supplies for medical offices, hospitals, etc.

I'd been thinking of ways to assist w/the lack of needed medical supplies, especially since my brother, a Dr. w/his own Urgent Care practice was in the same situation as every other medical facility.

For 36 years, I was a faculty member of a theatre department at a small college, south of Boston. I believe that many places have reached out to the science departments of colleges, asking for donations of their medical supplies.

Theatre and Fine Art departments use much of this same medical equipment (You need respirators, N95 masks, surgical masks, disposable gloves, etc when building sets, painting or dying fabric, working in metal, etc.)

I contacted my theatre department chair to ask if they would consider donating these items, and then I reached out to the college president. Despite our being a small department that didn't keep excess stock due to space and budget limitations, I managed to collect 4 unopened packages of latex gloves, 2 full boxes of non-latex disposable gloves, 45 N95 Masks, 4 paper masks, 9 pleated surgical masks, 9 surgical caps, 8 paper gowns, and 1 respirator.

Consider contacting your private secondary school, college or university to ask if they would donate or sell these medical supplies to the medical facility of your choice or closest to their location (to avoid mailing issues).

Demolition and renovation at the state labs on South Street

Richard Heath
Staff Reporter

The building everyone loves to hate in Forest Hills will be going through significant changes beginning this year.

The Hinton State Laboratory Building at 305 South St. has loomed over Forest Hills and the Arnold Arboretum since 1974.

The 11-acre campus includes the twin Tower Building connected by a bridge and the sprawling, two story Biologics Building with its eight-story boiler stack.

The $129-million project includes the demolition of the Biologics Building and the complete interior renovation of the Tower Building, according to the Division of Capital Asset Management and Maintenance (DCAMM), which is in charge of the five-year project.

A Request for Construction Management for the demolition was issued by DCAMM in January 2017.

The hillside campus was originally the Bussey Agricultural Institute of Harvard University established in 1870. The Mass Dept. of Public Health (MDHP) began operations at a portion of property in 1894 when it began to produce diphtheria antitoxins. MDHP built the brick stables at the far end nearest the Arboretum entrance in 1904.

In a statement to The Bulletin, DPH explained the project.

“The former UMass Biologics Building is being torn down because it is past its useful life,” it said in a statement.

“Demolition is imminent and will be completed this year. Once demolition is complete, the site will serve as a staging area for the renovation of the Tower Building. [The site] will primarily be occupied by modular units that will house staff displaced by the renovation. [After that] the site will be restored with landscaping.”

Renovations and upgrades of the Tower Building are being prepared and designed by Payette Architects. DPH said no visuals are available.

“The entire interior of the Tower Building will be renovated to bring it up to 21st century standards,” the statement said. “This will maximize the use of spaces and create a modern, flexible State public health laboratory.”

“The upper floors will be devoted to laboratory space, including three Biosafety Level 3 laboratories (the same as today) arranged close to the laboratory functions such as infectious diseases and environmental health testing to be prepared for extraordinary events such as H1N1, Zika and coronavirus.”

“The State Lab is not directly involved in current COVID 19 vaccine efforts,” the DPH statement said. “The Hinton Lab is not a research laboratory but conducts priority testing to detect organisms of public health importance and to detect chemical threats.”

According the DPH, the remaining floors will house epidemiologic labs, information technology, office functions and administration of the DPH Bureau of Infectious Disease and laboratory.

The entranceway will be redesigned to improve security and make the building more accessible to the public for functions and meetings.

The Hinton State Lab has a large auditorium and smaller meeting room, which are often been made available for community meetings.

According the DPH, no exterior changes are planned and renovation work is expected to be completed by mid 2025.

The Hinton State Lab is one of four large institutions in Jamaica Plain including the VA Hospital and MSPCA on South Huntington Avenue and the Faulkner Hospital on Centre Street. The Lab has always been the most mysterious.

There have been no public meetings about this work, the largest since the facility was built 46 years ago.

State Rep. Liz Malia did not respond to requests for comment.

The Bulletin only learned of the project through an April 5 notice in the development website BldUp that an electrical disconnection permit had been pulled to prepare for the demolition of the Biologics Building.

The Department of Public Health acquired the Bussey Institute campus by eminent domain in 1963 and planned a new laboratory in 1969. Designed by Desmond and Lord, the Tower Building and Biologics Lab were opened on October 11, 1974.

After the State Biologics Institute was incorporated into the University of Massachusetts Medical School in 1997, UMass leased the property to DMH and began scouting a new location for the Biologics Lab, which was no longer adequate.

In 2002 UMass acquired 15 acres of land on Walk Hill Street at the former Boston State Hospital and planned a two-phase, $100 million biologics laboratory, designed by Stull + Lee; the first phase opened in 2005 and the second Stull + Lee building opened in 2010.

All staff, equipment and apparatuses were transferred to the Walk Hill Street buildings and the old Biologics Building in Jamaica Plain became redundant.

When the Jamaica Plain campus was transferred back to DPH in 2014, the State began to consider what to do with the empty building and the decision was demolition.

Dr. Sandra Smole is director of the Hinton State Lab and she gave this statement to The Bulletin.

“We are looking forward to the impending renovation of the facility and its impact on our ability to provide services for testing and surveillance of infectious diseases, services that numerous staff have been diligently providing during this pandemic period.”

HP again without COVID-19 testing site Still leads city in coronavirus incidence rate

Matthew MacDonald
Staff Reporter

The Brigham Health mobile COVID-19 screening, testing, and education unit held its last day of operation at Brigham and Women's Faulkner Hospital Community Physicians at Hyde Park (1337 Hyde Park Ave.) on Saturday, April 25. It had been testing at the site since April 16 and had drawn a larger than expected number of patients during its stay.

No replacement testing site has yet been announced for Hyde Park, although Health and Human Services Chief Marty Martinez stated last Thursday that the City is trying to find a new health partner to provide testing for the community.

While encouraged by the recent high percentage increase in testing for Hyde Park, Martinez acknowledged that it is not enough, given the high number of positive cases in the neighborhood. "It's a good start and we appreciate their [Brigham Health's] work, and now we're going to lift

Ask The Doctor

Junior Damato began servicing vehicles in 1969. He owns an 8-bay center in Middleboro, MA. Junior is an ASE-certified Master Technician, ASE-certified L-1 and ASE-certified Natural Gas.

Q) Dear Doctor: I own a 2012 Camry. When the sun is bright, the radio and navigation screen is impossible to read until I get in shadier spot. It seems the screen is flat and should be indented into cabinet or there should be protruding sides to screen to block light. What can I do? The auto body shop said they see this problem but there's nothing they can recommend. I haven't seen my radio stations or navigator on a sunny day since I bought this can new. Can you help me? —Jean

A) You are not alone my wife had the same complaint on all her Camrys. First make sure the setting is either on automatic or day time, next try adjusting the light and contrast settings. There is a company called Nushield that may help. A small piece of cardboard or plastic cut to fit over the screen held on with velpro or even slid into the CD slot if you have one. Having windshield tint installed about 6 inches from top down if legal can help and if equipped with a sun roof, make sure the shade is closed.

Q) Dear Doctor: I own a 1998 Mercedes-Benz SLK230 Kompressor with about 80,000 miles on it. I only drive it 2,000 or 3,000 miles each year during the summer months. It has about 80,000 miles. It's kept in a garage for six or seven months. From time to time during the last several years the turn signal lamps and hazard lamps stop flashing. The lamps light up but don't flash. A couple years ago my mechanic used a nail file to scrape some corrosion off of some device — perhaps a relay switch. A couple times it happened after I parked in the hot sun. Flashers were working when I parked, but ceased to flash when I restarted the car. The dealer proposed replacement of a group of devices that are stored closely together. He said it would be a $15,000 or more fix. Absurd! Do you have a suggestion? —Rich

A) The technician will first check the Identifix web site, then also look on Alldata to look at history on other 1998 SLK 230s. There is an ECU next to the battery that does control the system. Removing the ECU and opening it up to clean all the connections may be the answer.

Junior Damato, the "Auto Doctor," has agreed to field auto repair questions from Bulletin and Record readers. Please send your questions to news@bulletinnewspapers.com and we will do our best to get them answered.

Discarded masks and gloves cause both environmental and health hazards. Littered masks and gloves can potentially spread COVID-19 germs to others when stepped on or blowing around in the wind.

It is important to remember that PPE is for regular trash - NOT for recycling. Even though it is plastic or rubber, it is contaminated. It is regular trash and is not recyclable. Gloves and masks - even sanitizing wipes - are plastic. When discarded into the environment, the PPE goes into sewer systems and into our water systems. It then breaks down into microplastics, which can be even more harmful as they can latch on to and attract toxic chemicals like pesticides..

"Every time I see all this discarded medical waste, I'm furious. I don't understand the mentality of a person who chooses to throw anything on the ground! They're actually throwing out potentially contaminated items in a public area forcing someone else to clean it up! It's almost beyond comprehension considering the reason we're doing all this to begin with," Neely said. "I feel angry at the sheer volume of litter and for that matter, plastic! I have a sinking feeling knowing the terrible environmental effects from disposing of all this plastic."

Hess, her son Timothy, of Cheshire, CT, her daughter Mary (Moran), her grandchildren, Michael Moran, Stephanie and Andrew Sullivan, and Meghan Sullivan. Known to all as a selfless, compassionate, generous, humorous and humble lady of grace, who was "Born to Shop," Barbara swaddled countless infants in her arms, and pampered their mothers, during her 38-year nursing career at the former St. Margaret's Hospital, Dorchester. Legendary were Barbara's spaghetti sauce with meatballs and sausage, boiled dinners (grey and red), potato salad, French fries and fried chicken, brownies, cakes and pies. Barbara was unwavering in her love for, and devotion to, her husband, their seven children, 23 grandchildren, 15 great-grandchildren, and a great-great-grandchild. Each, in addition to being faithfully cheered on at all of their countless sporting events, had their personal infant sweater, hat and booties crocheted for them by their beloved "GG." Hundreds of other nieces and nephews and their children and the children of those Barbara knew but a short while were also gifted the cherished "sweater sets" which Barbara continued to lovingly make into her mid-80s. Boston was cold and snowy the morning Barbara Pauline Sullivan passed from this life to eternal joy and peace with her immediate and extended family and friends in heaven. However, in the minds of all those who love and miss her, there will always be the memory of Barbara's unconditional love, warm smile and bright eyes. A private Graveside Service was held. In lieu of flowers, donations in Barbara's memory may be made to the Meghan M. Sullivan Scholarship Fund, c/o Billerica Scholarship Foundation, Billerica Treasurer's Office, 365 Boston Road, Billerica, MA 01821. William J. Gormley Funeral Service 617-323-8600 help raise awareness for those folks where their income as a bartender or server is basically gone. To help them out in even little ways to let them know we're thinking about them in this time has been great."

Kilduff's GoFundMe page can be found at gofundme.com/f/tips-for-west-roxbury. He said he started a month ago by reaching out to local restaurants and bars in West Roxbury.

"I didn't want to pick and choose between the restaurants, because that didn't seem fair and so I reached out to some of them to see what the owners might think," he said. "They suggested I get in touch with the West Roxbury Business Professional Association (WRBPA)."

The WRBPA, formerly run by Mary Mulvey Jacobson, is run now by her family and Jim Hennigan of Hennigan Insurance. The organization is designed to help local small businesses network, share ideas and thrive, and also to support the Mary Mulvey Jacobson Families in Need Program. Families in Need is essentially what it sounds like; the organization helps families who need help with expenses throughout the season, but is most known for its Thanksgiving and Christmas dinner delivery drives, which Jacobson started more than 30 years ago.

The WRBPA has a network of organizations that help find families in the most need, and Kilduff said it was a good place to start to find restaurant workers who would really need the funds they raise.

"I talked to Jim Hennigan and I told him what the idea was, and what he indicated to me is they have a relief fund for charitable organizations for employees, not local employers, the employees," he said. "They distribute the funds to those most in need using the process they usually utilize, which we thought was more fair."

Kilduff said he's happy to give back as much as he can to the neighborhood.

"Anything I can do for the neighborhood, you know?" he said. "You could say I'm a big fan. I moved here right out of the military and I actually could have lived anywhere in the city, but I chose West Roxbury because I loved the community and the neighborhood, and I made a lot of friends over here. If I can give back something to the neighborhood, that's really a great thing."

existence the HITF, James added, "Unless we act on it to disrupt that cycle, nothing is going to change, and I think everybody on the Task Force is highly, highly committed to getting this done."

Both James and Watanabe also spoke of the advantage of having such a large, diverse, and connected group of people to serve with, with James noting the shared purpose of individual Task Force members leading to more effective community outreach and Watanabe commenting on the links between each Task Force member to activists and organizers throughout the city and, consequently, to the residents of those communities.

All of which aid in the Task Force's ongoing challenge, as Watanabe described it, of working with problems on a daily basis and dealing with them in real time.

As the pandemic continues, the COVID-19 Health Inequities Task Force will continue and adjust its work to the fast developing situation, while the City's immediate plan - according to Martinez - is to make testing sites available in every neighborhood while expanding the number of private partners working with it against the coronavirus.

has never been a pause in the program until now.

“Well I wasn’t around back then, I’ve only been here a couple of years, but during the 70s recession, the neighbors and the community were either unemployed or underemployed, and not making enough to keep up with all the financial demands of the time, and so the church started offering the weekly community supper,” he said. “It was a way to gather people, to share a meal and catch up, but also to talk about who they were, what they were doing and what strategies were working and what weren’t to help them get through the recession.”

The pantry also does food baskets for residents in need every second and fourth Saturday from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., much in the same way as the supper. Seifried said everything is sanitized as much as possible and social distancing protocols have been established. However, the pantry services are for residents of the neighborhood and proof of income eligibility is required. Go to abfoodpantry.com/index.php/food-pantry/ for more information on that front.

Seifried said currently, donations are keeping up with demand but there’s no way to know what future demand could look like.

“Donations are always welcome,” he said. Checks should be made payable can be sent to: Allston Brighton Food Pantry, Brighton Allston Cong. Church, 410 Washington Street, Brighton, MA 02135.

He added they currently don’t need volunteers because of social distancing practices.

“But we’re evaluating it on an ongoing basis,” he said. “One of the issues we’re having though is fewer folks are able to volunteer, and so we don’t really know how we would be able to expand while keeping up with the level of service that we give. We’re evaluating this week to week and, certainly if the demand blossoms, we will react accordingly.”

He said numbers for the supper are down as well as the food pantry.

“But that’s to be expected,” he said. “Some folks are probably staying in for the lock down, or practicing social distancing themselves and not getting out as much. I know that some of the homeless folks we regularly serve are in shelters that don’t allow them to leave the premises because they’re trying to keep everybody safe and keep them from spreading infection, or becoming infected themselves.”

Residents flocked to the testing site at 1337 Hyde Park Ave. all last week, but Brigham and Women’s announced they would have to put the testing on hold.

up another site, and we’re in the process of trying to figure it out right now. It’s important.”

The City’s goal is to set up at least one COVID-19 testing site for each neighborhood in Boston during the COVID-19 pandemic.

Comprehensive testing is a key facet of epidemiology and public health due to the fact that – with the information it provides – the distribution pattern and impact of a disease within a population and location can be better understood, treated, and controlled.

With the departure of the Brigham Health mobile unit, there is again no COVID-19 test site in Hyde Park. According to the Boston Public Health Commission COVID-19 report for the week ending April 23, the neighborhood’s COVID-19 incidence rate leads the city.

Petit-Maitre, an MBTA bus driver for nearly 10 years and a Carmen’s union member, said he has seen the impact of the coronavirus firsthand on the most vulnerable residents of the district. A state senate candidate in the 2018 race, he said some of the issues that were of most concern to him then – truly affordable housing, small business development and a reliable transportation system – have not been addressed adequately. COVID-19 has only turned problems into plights.

“I want to ensure that all voices are heard and included, particularly people of color and people who have been left out of the conversation,” he said. “Nobody has looked out for them. We need to get it from someone who understands them, if we didn’t get it from the previous administration.”

“One of the reasons I decided to jump into the race was that the leaders were not speaking for everyone,” Petit-Maitre continued. “It was the same faces running for office and running the community events. I was a big fan of Angelo. But I noticed that things have not changed.”

Petit-Maitre is a member of the new Ward 18 Democratic Committee, which ran as the Fresh Slate ticket. A fellow member is his rival for the seat, Gretchen Van Ness, a local attorney who ran for the Rep. seat in the last election.

“It is very nice to have change,” he said. “And a change is coming after 40-something years. There are immediate needs that have to be addressed.”

He described himself as “bold, progressive and independent.”

Although he does not have experience in government like challengers Van Ness and former Boston City Councilor Rob Consalvo, Petit-Maitre said he has a wealth of education that makes him uniquely qualified for the position. He holds a B.A. in Legal Studies from Newbury College with a minor in Business Administration. He also has a degree in Criminal Justice from Bunker Hill Community College and a certificate in Information Technology from Cambridge College and has studied Political Science. Also, he has served as a City of Boston constable for 12 years as well as a notary public.

Petit-Maitre also has served on several political campaigns, including the mayoral runs of Mayor Tom Menino and Consalvo’s unsuccessful bid. Most recently, Petit-Maitre volunteered on the successful HP 150 event two years ago and also gives his time at Blake Estates.

Affordable housing is the top priority for Petit-Maitre.

“And the key word there is affordable,” he stressed. “The main expense in a family’s budget is rent. That determines how much you can spend on everything else. Many people can’t afford to live here anymore, and they are moving out. Because of that, small businesses are closing their doors. There has got to be an immediate solution.”

Having purchased a house in Hyde Park seven years ago, Petit-Maitre said he understands how hard the process is to consider buying a home or renting, and how bad the market is, even before COVID-19.

“If you are a grocery store worker or you work in a restaurant for $10 an hour, a one-bedroom apartment costs $1,750 or $1,800,” he explained. “How can you even afford that? And then there’s food. And expenses. With COVID-19, sooner or later, the economy is going to shut down.”

Petit-Maitre said he wants to work on legislation and in the community to stimulate small business growth.

“They are the backbone of every city’s economy,” he said. “Eat local, shop local, consume local. There are so many great local businesses in Hyde Park and Roslindale, and we have to keep them from shutting their doors.”

Transportation is another key topic for Petit-Maitre. Being a bus driver, he sees people struggle on the T, particularly the 32 bus going through Roslindale and Hyde Park.

“People rely on the T to get from Point A to Point B, but it keeps falling down,” he said. “What’s the point if they keep fixing up the old equipment?”

He said people should be waiting a maximum of 15 minutes for the 32 bus, and not see several buses come at once, leapfrogging past each other while one bus is overcrowded.

“They are packed like sardines,” he said. “Don’t just fix it because of COVID-19.”

Another problem Petit-

Maitre has witnessed first-hand is machines in Readville cleaning the tracks late at night and leaving behind smoke.

“People have to consume that,” he said. “It is not good for the people of Readville or the environment. I want to look into that with Keolis and the state.”

One thing Petit-Maitre said he would have done if he was currently in the State House is to have done more aggressive testing early on, as well as more contact tracing.

“We need more testing, because a lot of people are asymptomatic,” he said. “Any person can be a carrier.”

Other issues he pledges to work for are quality public education, gun control, health care equity and reproductive rights.

“If you vote for me, from Day One, you will see a difference, compared to other candidates” Petit-Maitre said. “I promise to be accessible and put people’s concerns into actions.”

“I’m tired of politicians who play with our votes,” he added. “If you ask 100 people who their state rep is, I bet you 70 don’t know, or even what his face looks like. I promise to return a call within 24 hours. If you can’t do that, then you should not be a leader.”
