Seniors First Night drops the ball early

About 2,300 residents came out for the 30th annual Seniors First Night at the Seaport on Friday to ring the new year a little bit early.

Boston's big First Night Celebration went off on Monday night, however the city's older residents celebrated early on Friday and rang in the New Year in style.

Co-hosted by the Elderly Commission and the Seaport World Trade Center, more than 2,300 residents celebrated 2019 at noon. The celebration featured food, dancing and a commencement speech from Boston Mayor Marty Walsh.

"Are you ready to party?" Walsh asked. "You are the people who built our city, I want to thank you for making Boston your home."

Hundreds danced the afternoon away while volunteers served food and drink and gave out information on city services available to them. The tradition has been going on for 30 years, and usually garners a huge crowd.

Resident Robert Sherman said despite a few hiccups in the afternoon, it was still a great time.

"The food was a bit cold this year, but you can't complain about a free meal," he said. "The speeches were quick though, thankfully. It's hard to do, but it was a very nice meal and the mayor does a good job."

Resident Willa Brandt said her friend Frankie

ABCDC looking to develop more affordable housing in 2019

The Allston Brighton Community Development Corporation (ABCDC) is looking ahead to 2019 to create more affordable housing units in the neighborhoods.

ABCDC Executive Director John Woods said the first thing to do in the new year is to work with the community, as they have done for the more than 500 housing units they've developed since 1980.

"First and foremost, we're going to build some neighborhood consensus. Then we will figure out a financing plan using public and private resources," he said. "Many of these ideas start out as small seeds and the hope is we can get something to grow."

Both Brighton and Allston have seen a huge increase in residential development during Boston's housing boom, and many residents are opposed to hyper-dense developments that don't offer home ownership components in the neighborhood. According to the 2010 census, Brighton had 24 percent of its housing stock owned by its occupants and Allston had 11 percent. Those have increased slightly in the past few years, but residents are still wary of new development.

"I think it is specific to each site, and once we pursued sites

Keep Hyde Park Beautiful starts spring cleaning early

While Sunday was cold, it was still beautiful weather for the team at Keep Hyde Park Beautiful to go out and help keep the neighborhood clear of trash and litter.

The group called for a cleanup at the Fowl Meadow on Friday of last week and more than a dozen residents showed up ready to clean.

"It was kind of spontaneous," said KHPB member Cathy Horn.

Horn said they had installed "No Littering" signs on the stretch of Meadow Road, which sees a lot of truck traffic from

Jamaica Plain girl personifies what the holiday season is all about

A 12-year-old Jamaica Plain girl was given a $100.00 gift card intended to allow her to buy whatever she desired for Christmas. But, instead of buying for herself, she put others first and proceeded to spend the entire $100.00 on family members without spending so much as a single cent on herself. Sounds almost too good to be true, but it isn't. In fact, that was the scenario that greeted Boston Police Officer Jorge Dias a couple weeks ago at this year's Shop with a

Cop, the 10th annual event, which took place December 10, 2018, at the Target Store in Dorchester. As for Dias, he'd be the first to say the encounter with the young girl most assuredly left an impression. So much so, when New England Patriots CB Stephon Gilmore recently reached out to Dias looking for a family or good kid to buy Christmas presents for, well, let's just say Dias didn't have to think long

Fire hits West Roxbury house on Christmas Day

GoFundme page set up to help family

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Boston Fire Department (BFD) reported arriving at 4 Perham St. in West Roxbury to a house fire on Christmas Day.

The BFD reported smoke on arrival at the two-story single-family home at about 4:50 p.m. No one was in the building as residents Shannon McNamara and her son Kyle were away during the fire.

The fire was knocked down in about a half an hour, and the BFD reported double-checking for extensions of the fire. The BFD reported no injuries to themselves during the fire. The fire chief on scene estimated the damage at $200,000.

Friends of McNamara have started a GoFundMe page, which can be found at gofundme.com/shannankyle. As of the date of publication, the fundraiser has garnered $34,405 to help the family rebuild in the neighborhood.

According to the GoFundMe page, residents are encouraged to donate based on factors such as how the family has affected residents' lives.

"If you're not sure about how much to donate, a good rule of thumb is $5 for every time you've given Kyle a ride, $10 for every time you've made him repay the favor since he got his driver's license and $20 for every time Kyle has invited himself to dinner at your house."

Several residents have donated large sums to the family according to the GoFundMe page, like donations of $5,000 and $1,500, but most of the 370 donations as of the date of publication came from residents donating what they could.

According to the page, the family has returned to the house and was able to rescue several items and survey the damage. They are reported to have to rebuild the house from the ground up before they move back in. The family did lose one member, however, in that their cat Stanley did not survive the fire.

Mayor Walsh announces appointments to Boston School Committee

Mayor Martin J. Walsh today announced the appointment of Quoc Tran and reappointment of Jeri Robinson to the Boston School Committee, the governing body of the Boston Public Schools (BPS). Tran is currently the secretariat deputy director of the Office of Diversity and Civil Rights at the Massachusetts Executive Office of Health and Human Services. Robinson has been a member of the Boston School Committee since 2014, and recently retired from her role as vice president of Early Childhood Initiatives at the Boston Children's Museum. The swearing-in ceremony will take place on Monday, January 7, 2019 at 4:00 p.m. at the Bolling Building.

"Quoc Tran is a great addition to the Boston School Committee. His experience as a civil rights attorney and a community leader will add a unique and crucial perspective to the group," said Mayor Walsh. "I'm also proud to reappoint Jeri Robinson to the Committee, who for the last four years worked and advocated tirelessly to create opportunities for our students. I thank all members of the School Committee who have served in this important role, and look forward to reviewing applications for the remaining vacancy, and encourage those who are interested in serving on the Committee to apply by the January 7, 2019 deadline."

Dr. Miren Uriarte stepped down from the Boston School Committee in December 2018, ending almost four years of service on the Committee. The Citizens Nominating Panel is currently accepting applications from candidates interested in filling the remainder of her term, which expires on December 31, 2019. The Panel is expected to submit a list of nominees to the Mayor by January 16.

The seven-member Boston School Committee is responsible for defining the vision, mission and goals of the Boston Public Schools; establishing and monitoring the annual operating budget; hiring, managing and evaluating the Superintendent; and setting and reviewing

ADULT BEHAVIORS

What makes someone an adult? Different cultures and religions have unique dividing lines between boys and men, girls and women. There is also a legal standard.

Well, there used to be a legal standard. Many moons ago, government officials in various states decided that while 18 may be the age of “adulthood,” that birthday was no longer good enough for purchasing alcoholic beverages. In Massachusetts, as of New Year’s Day, we officially added cigarette purchases to the list of things you cannot do as an otherwise legal adult.

We do, in many ways, appreciate the new law and its prohibition. Medical research shows that smoking can be especially harmful for younger, still-developing bodies. It is also not easy to argue that being 18 triggers some magical transformation into a mature adult. Put a beer in their hand to be quickly disillusioned of that theory.

Our problem has less to do with nicotine consumption than it does the misguided attempt to manipulate legal human behaviors through state law.

If something should be illegal in the eyes of officials and a majority of voters, so be it. If those same elected officials want to draw boundaries for where smoking is, or is not, allowed in public places, we support them. Taxing these products to extinction? Go for it.

We do, however, worry about deciding that a class of folks, in this case those between the ages of 18 and 21, can be barred and banned from buying (or, presumably, using) otherwise legal products.

We resort to a cliché often used to argue against these restrictions. At the age of 18, you can vote and join the military, potentially making a rational choice to sacrifice your life for the good of the nation. These difficult choices are all well and good, but nicotine is apparently a bridge too far.

Massachusetts, and Boston specifically, have resorted all too frequently to the role of a nanny state.” As we have written about in the past, since 2008, food service establishments in Boston may no longer use oils, shortening, or margarine containing partially hydrogenated vegetable oil for cooking and serving food.

It was a bad look then, and it remains so.

We do understand that creating a healthier populace helps all of us. Better health, in theory, means more efficient health care systems and maybe (just maybe) less expensive health care bills and insurance.

We can’t help but wonder, however, whether these and other positive outcomes are really what’s under consideration.

Consider that other annoying and targeted vice: vaping. How strange is it that, as marijuana is legalized, the least intrusive ways to ingest THC are in the government’s crosshairs? Edibles? Can’t allow that. Kids might accidentally ingest them. Vaping? What about teenagers who may be drawn to those new toys. Heck, even flavored tobacco products are systematically banned. Adult consumers are somehow less important than the occasional, errant child.

For every fear laid onto e-cigarette and vaping devices there is someone who might otherwise be able to quit smoking using them as a temporary crutch. Limit accessibility and supply, and you might as well demand that they start smoking again.

Stopping the smoking scourge isn’t rocket science and our officials are well-armed with the needed tools. We encourage them to use them.

Redrawing the boundaries of what is legal, however, is not the right approach, nor is outlawing new technology just because it could be misused by teens, a generation that would benefit far more from increased parental supervision than overextending government reach.

With neighbors like these . . .

Sometimes when a community has a monolithic neighbor, be it corporate or human, the residents realize that their needs and wants are subservient to those who exude importance. They cringe at the thought of the geographical giant flexing its muscles, political or otherwise.

But this is not the case with Roxbury Latin. A huge and legendary land-owner in West Roxbury—one that has been here since 1645—RL never tries to bully its way in spite of its ownership of a vast 117-acre expanse. In fact, quite the contrary is true.

This centuries-old institution, reminiscent somewhat of the one depicted in the fictitious movie “The Dead Poets’ Society” (without the dormitory component), has been very gracious toward its neighbors. Their generosity for scholarships to city kids is without rufute, as they educate boys coming from both near and far, with 90 of its 303 students hailing from within city limits.

Years ago, before Millennium Park was built over the LaGrange Street landfill, every spring there was contentious efforts to reserve park space for men’s softball, high school baseball and softball, and youth soccer. Girls’ CYO softball was at the bottom of the list. Millennium Park, built under the direction of the late Alice Hennessey, relieved the stress for playground and park space with its numerous soccer fields.

Previous to this, Roxbury Latin stepped into the fray to offer its diamonds to St. Theresa’s softball practice and games, alleviating no small amount of the stress. I hope that mourners at the funeral services of the recently deceased former

of Town/

headmaster, Reverend Tony Jaryis, were made aware of this tidbit.

For almost a quarter of a century RL has been very kind to its JP neighbor, Nativity Prep. Serving boys only from low-income families, the tuition-free Jesuit-run school located a block from the Bromley-Heath project has benefitted in numerous ways from its more financially secure bigger brother.

And just recently, within the past several weeks, I, too, became aware of Roxbury Latin’s generosity towards its neighbors as it hosted a (free) Community Sing culminating with Handel’s Messiah. Because the event was mentioned several times in the Globe, the event did not target only physical neighbors of Rev. John Eliot’s school founded in 1645: it was available to any reader within the broadsheet’s distribution area. And it was without charge.

The first half of the festive night featured about a dozen alumni blessed with no small amount of musical talent, rendering Christmas songs, led by Headmaster Kerry Brennan and highlighted by intricate harmonizing. Creatively named The Sly Voxes (a cute play on words since “vox” means “voice” in Latin, although the accurate plural is “voces” but who wants to nitpick with a great play on words?), they rendered mostly spiritual selections. Because the school was religiously founded, no listener could object to such a repertoire.

Indeed, if the Boston Symphony Orchestra ever needs a group to substitute for the Tanglewood Festival Chorus (with its superb tenor, Roslindale’s Fran Rogers), this group could step right up at Symphony Hall behind Keith Lockhart’s instrumental assemblage.

There was a unique Jamaica Plain connection of the aforementioned talented and effervescent group singing 12 pieces with all sorts of sophisticated harmony: the son of legendary Longwood Pediatrics/Children’s Hospital pediatrician John Cloherty, originally from Montebello Road in the shadow of White Stadium, was one of those with a gifted larynx.

The reception afterwards was befitting a Board of Trustees’ meeting. Roxbury Latin spared no expense, offering all types of exquisite desserts and drinks on its china to attendees in its historic Bernstein Tea Room with a large fireplace all aglow.

Robert Frost believed that fences make for good neighbors. Perhaps there are other components, garnered from last month’s performance on St. Theresa Avenue, that the renowned poet could have added to his list.

NEIGHBORHOOD POSITIONS BASED ON EXPERIENCE

To the Editor:

As co-leaders of the Mt. Hope Canterbury Neighborhood Association, we would like to thank the West Roxbury - Roslindale Bulletin Newspaper for its continuing news coverage of our neighborhoods along American Legion Hwy. in Roslindale. Specifically, thank you to reporters Jeff Sullivan and also more recently Mary Ellen Gambon who have for the past many years covered almost all our monthly meetings and events.

In the December 20 issue of the Bulletin, Ms. Gambon wrote a detailed article concerning City Realty’s (CR) proposed 6-story 52-unit rental housing development fronting Cummins Hwy., on a 0.9-acre lot, zoned for a maximum of 10 units. It is adjacent to two of our neighborhoods along American Legion Hwy. The article included some of the issues our residents are concerned about. These residents have been negotiating on these issues with the CR team for many months leading to some good progress.

We feel that while the article on the meeting was accurate, the headline “Some MHC members say NIMBY to City Realty Development” was unintentionally misleading. The term ‘not in my backyard’ is now a loaded and divisive word that is not helpful in finding ways forward, and neglects the history of this area. There are many similar community meetings with developers happening all over, and many articles about them, without using that term as a headline. We prefer to use the term QUIMBY, quality in our backyard.

Over the past four years the residents of the neighborhoods in the Mt. Hope - Canterbury area have supported zoning variances requested in the building of 27 new housing units at locations in and

CM donates more than 250 gifts to Saint John Paul Academy

Christmas arrived early at Saint John Paul II Academy when seven students from Catholic Memorial School delivered over 250 presents to the school's Columbia Road campus in Dorchester on Tuesday afternoon.

Before the donation, the school needed gifts to support 70 percent of their families who asked for assistance at Christmas time. Thanks to the donations provided by CM Campus Ministry's Christmas Gift Drive, the Columbia campus met their need and then some.

"Just like loaves and fish, it just kept growing," said Ms. Kate Brandley, the regional director of the three Saint John Paul II Academy campuses.

"After my principals went through everything, there were so many gifts left over. It wasn't just baseballs and basketballs either. We had robotic toys and themed books. It seemed like they really cared about the boys who they were donating to."

Over 1,100 students attend Saint John Paul II. A parochial school for children from grades pre-K to eight, the school offers financial aid to 70 percent of students.

Every year, Saint John Paul

The students at Catholic Memorial High School donated more than 250 gifts for those in need at the Saint John Paul Academy in Dorchester.

II keeps track of families who request gifts for their children during the holiday season. The school raises gifts and accepts donations from other schools to meet the annual need. A low donation total puts more pressure on Ms. Brandley's faculty and staff to fulfill the remaining need.

CM's Campus Ministry program, led by Mr. Kevin Durazo and Mr. Nicholas Genovese, orchestrated the CM Christmas Gift Drive to support Saint John Paul II's Columbia campus. Together, they advocated for donations through posters in school hallways, lessons on service in the theology curriculum, and announcements about the initiative in the CM weekly newsletter. Starting at the beginning of December, students and faculty placed their donated gifts underneath a Christmas tree display in CM's main lobby.

On Tuesday, the seven-student cohort gathered in front of the CM main lobby. They packed up the gifts underneath the tree, loaded the CM Campus Ministry van, and delivered the gifts to Dorchester. When they arrived at the Columbia campus, the students engaged with the Saint John Paul II faculty and learned about the school's mission.

A few of the CM students who dropped off the donations once attended Saint John Paul II Academy. Junior Clayton Majors-Rice attended Saint John Paul II's Neponset and Lower Mills campuses while growing up in Dorchester.

"You should always give back to the place that raised you," said Clayton.

"[Saint John Paul II Academy] helped me when I was younger by giving me a really caring environment. I hope to do the same kind of service work in my last few years at CM and when I go to college. It's taught me to be a better man, to take charge, and to be a leader."

The CM students left Dorchester with a feeling of fulfillment. They knew their service made a significant difference in the lives of many.

"It made me feel like Santa Clause," said Kevin Hicks II, a sophomore from Roxbury.

"I felt that I was doing it to make a difference. Especially when it means that they're getting gifts for Christmas."

Hyde Park's 2018 in Review

Mary Ellen Gambon
Staff Reporter

Hyde Park celebrated its 150th anniversary this year, and festivities abounded throughout the spring and summer commemorating this occasion.

But this was only one of many special events in Hyde Park over the past year. It was a time that that was marked by major concerns over two major developments in Readville – the Sprague Street development and the Readville Yard 5 project.

Between the two, if approved, approximately 800 housing units would be added to Readville at the Dedham border. This area, residents complained, is already plagued by traffic and parking problems.

Hyde Park also saw its first major development erected on Fairmount Avenue. The 37-unit apartment complex received 3,700 applicants. The new building, spurred by the need for affordable housing in Boston, came about through the efforts of the Southwest Boston Community Development Corporation. (SWBCDC.)

Councilor Tim McCarthy and City Councilor at Large Michelle Wu were two of the major proponents of fare equity on Hyde Park's commuter rail lines. Depending on the line and zone, the fare can be a couple of dollars more each way. This issue still is being addressed.

An ancillary issue to this is parking. To avoid more costly parking at the Fairmount lot, commuters have encroached onto the side streets of the Fairmount neighborhood. This prompted advocacy for resident parking stickers. Now, other neighborhood groups are beginning to debate the effectiveness of the issue.

Since recreational marijuana has been legalized in Boston, the struggle this year has been trying to find places for dispensaries. Two potential marijuana dispensaries have high hopes to open in the former Serino's site at 931 Hyde Park Avenue.

One is a local man from Roslindale who will sell pre-packaged marijuana. The other is an Arizona-based company which would process marijuana and distribute it on-site.

Fairmount Avenue was the scene of many notable events.

One of them was this summer's major HP 150 event, the Festival in the Streets. On June 16, Fairmount Avenue, Logan and Cleary Squares were transformed into a carnival-like atmosphere. The Blue Hills Bank parking lot became a mini-beer garden, selling tickets to enjoy craft beers at the 21-plus event.

The stage at the center of the four-hour festival, which attracted an estimated 2,000 people, had three bands with singers performing disco jams, 80s covers and other tunes to pump up the crowd. Local restaurants served food outdoors while artisans from The Switch displayed their crafts for sale.

Because of the success of the event, HP 150 organizers said they expected the event to be held on a more frequent basis, not in another 150 years.

Another landmark event on Fairmount Avenue was the 37th anniversary of Riverside Theatre Works. On June 1, 1981, Marietta Phinney founded Riverside Theatre Works in her backyard "down by the riverside" of the Neponset River with 12 students. Her mission now is to make Fairmount Avenue the "Avenue of the Arts."

One of these students was P. J. Terranova. Now 47, Terranova in 2018 took the role as RTW's Executive Artistic and Educational Director. He had assumed several positions at the theater after he brought the skills he had honed at RTW to Broadway in "Jesus Christ Superstar."

This fall, Terranova made an emotional return to the stage for the first time in RTW's production of "A Chorus Line." His role in developing youth theater, he had said, is hoping will become part of fulfilling Phinney's dream of making Fairmount Avenue the "Avenue of the Arts."

Another project that is in the works is the restoration of the neighboring historic Everett Square Theatre. This venture has been spearheaded by real estate firm owner and neighborhood philanthropist Pat Tierney.

According to a study done by students from Boston College students as part of a Field Projects in Real Estate Course in 2017, the estimated cost of restoring the theater would be $10 million.

The theater, a city landmark, first opened as a vaudeville theater in 1915 and later hosted other live performances. It was also known as The Pixie Theater, a cinema which showed classics including "Grease," "Star Wars" and "Saturday Night Fever."

Art activities flourished in Hyde Park. The Hyde Park Art Association, through the Menino Arts Center, held several successful exhibits. One of the most notable ones, especially considering Hyde Park's anniversary, was the celebration of the 54th Regiment.

This reenactment exhibition had portrayals of soldiers and officers of the first African American regiment for the North, stationed at Camp Meigs in Readville. It attracted dozens of patrons over the course of several days.

There were both children's and adults exhibits showing replicas of the uniforms, tents and even the food that the soldiers ate. The soldiers, dressed in uniform, described what it was like to serve under those conditions, some having escaped from slavery.

Their valiant service, which eventually united the country, was portrayed in the movie, "Glory." The film starred Denzel Washington and Matthew Broderick.

Hyde Park also saw the Urban Arts Festival at the Martini Shell at Truman Parkway. Hundreds flocked to see a steamroller press paper and ink into wooden carvings to create unique works of art.

In addition, there was a "Battle of the Arts to create a piece of artwork in a contest setting within a three-hour time frame. Dance troupes, a rapper, poets, singers and spoken word artists performed while artisans showed off their creations for sale and enjoyment.

Artists at Large hosted a number of art exhibits at the library, including several by artists in the Haitian community. One of the most popular was recently on display. "Biomimicry" by artist Yves Rigaud of the Haitian Artists Assembly of Massachusetts (HAAM) showed paintings made from microscopic pictures of butterflies and other insects with stunning color, detail and technique.

The environment took a prominent role in the neighborhood as well, with the semiannual cleanups of the Neponset River in the Spring and fall. Shopping cars, tires and even a scooter were dredged out by dedicated troops of volunteers from Truman Park-

Should I take Widow's Benefits or Retirement Benefits?

Dear Rusty: I am 58 years old. My spouse passed away last year, and I am entitled to survivor benefits. I am trying to plan for when I can retire from working, but don't know if I should take my widow's benefit or my own Social Security. I called Social Security twice and have received two different answers. If I claim Social Security at 62, will I receive 70 or 80% of the full amount? This makes a huge difference in deciding when I should retire. Signed: Widowed Worker

Dear Widowed Worker: There are two different types of Social Security benefits that you need to be concerned with – your benefit as a survivor; and your own SS retirement benefit which you have earned from working all your life. The thing to keep in mind is that any time any Social Security benefit is taken earlier than one's full retirement age, it is reduced (born in 1960 your normal full retirement age (FRA) is age 67).

You will be eligible for your survivor's benefit when you reach age 60 (unless you're disabled in which case it's 50). But if you take the survivor's benefit at 60 it will only be about 71.5% of what you would get by waiting until your full retirement age to claim it. Your FRA as a widow is less than your normal FRA; your widow's FRA is 66 years and 8 months. The reduction for claiming the survivor's benefit earlier than your widow's FRA is about 4.75% per year early. Your survivor's benefit will reach its maximum (100% of what your husband was entitled to at his death) when you reach your widow's full retirement age, but it does not continue to grow if you wait beyond that to claim it.

You will be eligible to collect your own Social Security retirement benefits from your lifetime work record when you reach 62 years of age, but if you take it at age 62 you will only get 70% of what you would get by waiting until your full retirement age of 67. SS retirement benefits are reduced by 6.7% per year for the first 3 years claimed early and 5% per year for anything more than 3 years, so with an FRA of 67 your benefit would be cut by 30% at age 62. Unlike survivor's benefits, your retirement benefit continues to grow in value (by 8% per year) until you are 70 years of age. So, at age 70 you can get a retirement benefit, which is 24% more than you would get at your full retirement age. Here's an example, assuming your Social Security retirement benefit at your normal FRA is $1000: If you claim at age 62 your benefit amount will be $700/month; claim at age 70 your benefit amount will be $1240/month.

Russell Gloor
AMAC Certified Social Security Advisor

Your wisest approach will be to determine which type of benefit will pay you the most for the rest of your life. If that is your survivor's benefit, then you might consider taking your own SS retirement benefit at age 62 and collect that until your survivor benefit reaches maximum at age 66 + 8 months and claim the survivor benefit then. If your own SS retirement benefit will pay more at age 70 than your survivor benefit will pay at your widow's full retirement age, then you can consider collecting your survivor's benefit until your own SS benefit reaches maximum at age 70 and switch to the higher benefit (your own) at that time. You have a choice of which benefit to take and when, but whenever you apply you should be very explicit which benefit you are applying for. If you want to take the survivor's benefit and let your own grow, you should apply saying "I am applying for survivor's benefits only; I want my retirement benefit to grow." If you are applying for your own SS retirement benefit, you should apply saying "I am applying for my retirement benefit only; I want my survivor's benefit to grow until my widow's full retirement age."

A COMMUNITY CONVERSATION: THE POWER OF PUBLIC MONUMENTS & WHY THEY MATTER

Wednesday, January 9th @ 6:30pm, Tremont Temple,

Boston On Wednesday, January 9th, the National Parks Service, Friends of the Public Garden, City of Boston, and Museum of African American History will host A Community Conversation: The Power of Public Monuments & Why They Matter with an introduction by Karen Holmes Ward and featuring moderator Beverly Morgan-Welch (National Museum of African American History and Culture) and panelists DeRay McKessen (Black Lives Matter activist and author), Renee Ater (American Public Art historian), and F. Sheffield Hale (President and CEO, Atlanta History Center).

The Shaw 54th Memorial on the Boston Common has been called "one of the monuments that changed America." More than 120 years old, the Memorial is positioned strategically on Boston Common opposite the Massachusetts State House. This conversation will deepen the community's dialogue about race, freedom, and justice and raise awareness of the significance of the memorial and the story it tells.

Ask The Doctor

Junior Damato began servicing vehicles in 1969. He owns a 10-bay auto repair service center in Hyde Park and an 8-bay center in Middleboro. Junior is an ASE-certified Master Technician, ASE-certified L-1 and ASE-certified Natural Gas.

To the Doctor: I have a 2015 Chevy Silverado 1500 long wheelbase, regular cab truck with 20-inch wheels. I purchased this truck new. It suffers from what the service manager describes as the "Chevy shake." We discussed the shocks, tires and drive shaft, but changing them and wheel balancing doesn't help. The service manager has a 1/2 ton four-door truck with the shake and says GM admits to this intermittent highway speed shaking problem but they do not have a fix for it. Several of my friends with these Chevys have the same problem. Got any ideas as to what is going on with these trucks?

From the Doctor: You are not the first to experience a shake or vibration on some 1500 pickups. I have seen it all over the years. Transmission and torque converters are the most common issues that cause a shake. Very seldom it is axle related.

To the Doctor: I operate a small auto repair shop. What is your opinion on which operating system I should buy into as well as your thoughts on Identifix?

From the Doctor: I have been using both systems for 30 plus years. In the old days I may have been able to both figure out a drive-ability problem as well as using a pen to write up a work order. I did hesitate to spend the money required to buy into either system because I did not know if I could afford it. Within three months, the system had starting paying for itself and I never looked back. You cannot afford not to buy into the systems.

Boston's own Junior Damato, "The Auto Doctor" has agreed to field auto repair questions from Bulletin and Record readers. Please forward your questions to news@bulletinnewspapers.com and we will do our best to get your questions answered.

A full toilet, vehicle gas tank, couch and a car jack were among the usual trash found at the site. Members said they cleaned up this stretch only three months ago, and still had dozens of trash bags.

Amazon delivery vans and Katsiroubas Produce. She said they had to take down the signs for the winter season so they could survive for the spring.

“So they won’t get ruined by the snow and plows,” she said. “We came and took down the signs and noticed how much trash there was and we said we should put together a quick clean up for the weekend and see how many people come out.”

Horn said winter cleanups are tough, as trash can be hard to pick up when its frozen, stuck to the mud or asphalt, and she said they are planning for spring.

“We are starting a series called Coffee Talk at the new coffee place Coffee Break (formerly Bean and Cream) and once a month we’re going to have a ‘come talk to KHPB’ thing there,” she said. “We’ll have a couple of our reps there and whoever wants to come talk to us and meet with us about problem areas or ideas they have for beautification, cleanups or if they’re interested in volunteering can come talk to us and, if they bring their own mug, they get a free cup of coffee!”

Horn said dates are still being worked out but they should have a formal announcement in the spring.

The area has been a place of love for resident Jim LaFond Lewis for about six or seven years now. He said he’s been cleaning up every so often here by himself, and he’s glad to get the help from KHPB.

“Well, I’m an amateur photographer and I started taking pictures of this place in the winter,” he said. “I thought how beautiful it was, but as spring rolled around, I realized I had to move some stuff to get the photographs I wanted. I quickly decided that I owed this beauty some payback and I started cleaning up.”

He said the last time he was out cleaning was three months ago. Despite finding a full toilet, a gas tank, a hydraulic car jack and the better part of a couch, LaFond-Lewis said this was not the worst time he’s been out cleaning.

“It was much worse the first year I did it,” he said.

In the first month he started collecting, LaFond-Lewis said he picked up a host of items that included, but not limited to, a television, thousands of beer and brandy bottles, an industrial sized mop wringer, a steel milk crate, a plastic milk crate, a tire and wheel, paint cans, a car battery, planter pots, cassette tapes, DVDs, CDs, MA license plate 9058 DH, a $20.00 bill, a street sign, a car muffler, a pair of car shocks, three whole intact bags of household waste, a mag wheel and a decomposing raccoon carcass (presumably in a decomposing pear tree).

“The toilets, that’s a new one, but I’ve seen refrigerators, couches and an unexploded World War II mortar, which was detonated by the Boston Police Bomb Squad, and a stack of used adult diapers and construction debris,” he said. “But that’s minor compared to the regular trash we see here, from people who don’t want to take responsibility for their trash.

And some of them are local.”

LaFond-Lewis said he is occasionally able to track down some of those local persons who litter, including the owner of the stack of used adult diapers.

Resident Katherine MacDonald said she started volunteering for KHPB a few years ago and has had an amazing time with the people she’s met there.

“It’s a good way to get some exercise,” she said. “I met up with Cathy and my other friends at KHPB. I joined because I got tired of seeing this stuff. I used to live on Hyde Park Avenue near Meigs Playground, and so I’m familiar with this area biking and walking. I want people to have pride of place, pride in where they live, and if this example of picking up trash can help somebody else to join, then all the better. But mostly, I hate trash!”

Residents Janet Smith and Diane Cylik said they joined when KHPB started and she said they saw this notification and felt it was a good day to come out.

“It’s beautiful trash-picking weather,” said Smith. “Though I have to admit, if it was snowing, we wouldn’t be here.”

Cylik said they have had to postpone cleanups in the past because of snow, but otherwise not much in the way of weather ever stops them. For more information on KHPB and to keep up with upcoming clean ups, go to keepbeautiful.org.

ing district policies and practices to support student achievement.

"We are pleased to welcome Quoc Tran to the Boston School Committee, and look forward to working with him on the important issues facing our students, educators and schools in 2019 and beyond," said Michael Loconto, Chair of the Boston School Committee. "These appointments come at crucial time as we continue moving forward on key issues that will enhance learning opportunities for students, including the continued roll out of BuildBPS facilities upgrades and the hiring of a new permanent superintendent. On behalf of the School Committee, we thank all members for their service and are excited to continue this work together."

In his current role at the Massachusetts Executive Office of Health and Human Services, Tran develops and implements diversity and inclusion strategies for over 22,000 employees, and creates diversity and affirmative action plans to retain a diverse workforce. Prior to this role, he was the executive director of the Vietnamese American Civic Association (VACA), where he managed all operations of the organization related to serving the social and public assistance needs of Vietnamese refugees and immigrants. Tran was a BPS high school teacher for six years and is parent of Boston Latin School students. He holds a bachelor's degree in mechanical engineering and a master's degree in education from Northeastern University, and a doctoral degree in law from Suffolk University. He currently resides in Dorchester.

"I am very honored to have received Mayor Walsh's trust and confidence in appointing me to this very important Boston School Committee," said Quoc Tran. "I look forward to working alongside all other Committee members in ensuring the highest quality possible that our city's school system deserves."

Jeri Robinson, first appointed by Mayor Walsh in 2014, brings more than 40 years of experience in teaching and consulting in the fields of early childhood and museum education. She recently retired from her role at the Boston Children's Museum, where she developed programs and outreach to further the Museum's early childhood agenda, seeking new sources of funding for educational initiatives and developing current resources. She holds a bachelor's degree and master's degree in education, and an honorary doctorate in education from Wheelock College, and serves on numerous boards dealing with family, community, multicultural, and early childhood education issues. She lives in Dorchester.

The seven members of the School Committee are Boston residents appointed by the Mayor of Boston to serve four-year staggered terms. Mayor Walsh made these appointments based on a list of candidates recommended by a 13-member Citizens Nominating Panel composed of parents, teachers, principals, and representatives of business and higher education. Under the legislation that established the appointed School Committee, "the Mayor shall strive to appoint individuals who reflect the racial, ethnic, and socioeconomic diversity of the city."

or hard about who the Pats CB needed to go shopping for. In fact, in the days after the Shop with a Cop event, Dias couldn't stop thinking about Marisa, a 12-year-old girl from Bromley Heath, whose generous spirit and big-hearted innocence seemingly personified everything the holiday season is supposed to be about. Dias could not have been more impressed with her generosity and her generosity most certainly separated her from the pack.

In fact, of the 400 kids given the opportunity to go shopping for themselves at this year's Shop with a Cop, there was one, who, instead, chose to go shopping for others. As Dias watched, 12-year-old Marisa proceeded to buy clothes for her parents, her two little brothers and her older sister, older by a year, who suffers from severe paralysis and, consequently, spends majority of her time in a wheelchair. When Dias noticed that Marisa had purchased a few stuffed animals, Marisa explained to him that her older sister loved the softness of stuffed animals. She further explained that her sister had difficulty holding things given her paralysis, but she could hold soft things like stuffed animals. Said Dias, "I couldn't get over how special this little girl was. Not a selfish bone in her body. I was so impressed that I wanted to celebrate her generosity in some way and then, out of the blue, I get a call from Stephon."

Last night, a few hours after helping his team defeat the Buffalo Bills by the score of 24 - 12, Patriots CB Stephon Gilmore chose to celebrate the Pats 10th consecutive AFC East title in a different way. While accompanied by Boston Police Officer George Dias and several other officers assigned to District E-13 (Jamaica Plain), Gilmore visited a few families and stopped by a few apartments with one, of course, being Marisa's apartment inside the Bromley Heath Housing Complex. Suffice to say, Gilmore and Dias were on a mission Santa Claus himself couldn't deny and would wholeheartedly endorse. And, as you can see by the photos, Gilmore spared no expense in making sure that Marisa and her family would enjoy an extra special Christmas this year. Said Dias, "It's a moment Marisa and her family will never forget. And, the best part, she deserves every bit of it."

Affordable Housing

we thought would be appropriate, the first thing we do is meet with the local folks and the people who would be most affected," Woods said.

The need for affordable housing in the City of Boston is great. A recent study found that though a fifth of the city's housing units are income-restricted, the city is still seeing many residents priced out of their homes at alarming rates. That's why Woods said they are working to increase the number of units they can offer.

"I think the thing that's most compelling to me is that of the 506 units we have in our portfolio, there is a current wait list of about 17,000 people," he said. "We're going through a purge process now to make sure people who are on the list are still interested, but even if we can cut that number in half, that's still way too many people."

Recently, the ABCDC reopened its property at 1285 Comm. Ave. in Allston, which has 118 dwelling units. It was a monumental undertaking, especially since it was a phased construction that allowed each resident to stay in their units for the majority of construction. Woods said it was a complicated financing structure that allowed them to renovate the building.

"That was one complex financing structure on another already complex financing structure," he said. "That's the thing with a lot of the affordable housing in our portfolio; they were created with a combination of these public and private resources that are sort of a big Gordian knot. It's a very complex set of requirements we need to adhere to in order to both maintain the properties and go ahead and improve them. In the past, a lot of the agencies we dealt with have relationships with public Boston community capital. The Local Initiative Support Corporation out of Boston, they help a lot and then, of course, the private lenders tend to step up and provide us with some attractive financing."

The ABCDC also provides residents with referrals, support and new programs to help residents figure out home-buying. The group has also hosted health and wellness events, ESOL workshops, coffeehours, food pantries and holds social events as well. Walker got her to come out for the first time this year.

“What made me come out was they were at the senior center and they had people signing up for First Night,” said Brandt. “I was thinking they meant the one they have at the Copley, but they told me it was during the day so I said, ‘oh why not.’”

Brandt said she was having a great time.

“It’s good because you don’t have to do it at night and it’s nice to see people you haven’t run into in a while,” she said.

Many people brought friends and family to the celebration to show them what it was all about, like resident Lloyd Smith and Karen Young.

“My brother invited me so I thought I’d come,” said Young. “It’s my first time and it’s just great to see some of these seniors out, some who might not have families, and it’s good to see people in the company of others like themselves and just to socialize. When I walked in I was just like ‘whoah.’”

Smith said he’s been coming for five or six years and wouldn’t miss it for the world.

“I want to get out of the house and meet people, and I’ve had a great time,” he said. “They’ve got to change the food though, we need some chicken.”

Residents Georgiana Forte and Terese Stravinsky said they also came for the first time after seeing an ad in a magazine.

“We just said why not,” said Stravinsky.

Forte said it was amazing that they were able to transport so many folks to the Seaport World Trade Center in a neighborhood plagued by parking issues. Many residents took the MBTA Ride or shuttles that were set up for that purpose.

“We took the Ride, but everybody’s going to get home and it’s just a lot of logistics,” she said. “It’s been a great time for us, the volunteers are great and the food is great.”

“I would have liked a salad,” Stravinsky said with a laugh.

“We’ve been coming here for years,” said one resident. “We’re in a fishing club and we come every year. It’s very good. The mayor’s doing a great job.”

Hundreds of seniors stepped on the dance floor during the party, as well as had free meals provided by the city.

way to Mattapan.

Neighborhood groups including Keep Hyde Park Beautiful spearheaded cleanup efforts, the most recent being on December 30 at Meadow Road. The Neponset River Greenway Council, led by the efforts of Jessica Mink, has been organizing walking tours of the river and meets quarterly in Hyde Park.

This spring, Hyde Park lost a decades long community activist in the late Barbara Baxter. She was greatly involved in the Hyde Park Neighborhood Association as well as the cleanup of the Neponset River and other community endeavors.

In her honor, a fund has been established to buy flowers, in testimony to her love of the environment. These were planted along the canoe launch near the Martini Shell, where she loved to enjoy the view.

To end the year, some noteworthy visitors came to the community center to enjoy the Anderson Tree Lighting festivities. Wally the Green Monster and his partner, Tessie, came sporting the World Series trophy. Delighted Red Sox fans of all ages had their pictures taken with the trophy, nearly besting the number of pictures taken with a jolly soul from the North Pole – Santa himself.

Hyde Park displayed its vibrancy through community activism, passion for the arts, willingness to become involved in preserving the environment and volunteering in efforts that display their community pride in a myriad of ways.

West Roxbury/Roslindale Bulletin, 01/03/2019

around our homes, including a few of CR's projects.

The questions for any neighborhood is: what will the impact of a developer's proposal have on the surrounding communities' quality of life, including the new residents. With this proposal, we have five main questions.

1. Home-ownership: Almost all the residential development along the American Legion Corridor in the past 20 years, built and proposed, have been rentals. In this low to moderate income, majority minority area, we need more home ownership opportunities for residents to settle in, build wealth, and invest it and themselves into our community.

2. Our parkway: Although most of the city-owned American Legion Hwy. has the same legal protections of its heavily greened adjacent land as the rest of Boston's better known parkways, these laws have mostly been ignored along ALH. The original CR proposal would have removed all the mature trees along 200 feet of ALH right up to the sidewalk. Would such a proposal be made along the Jamaica way? Due to our public neighborhood meetings with the CR team, they heard our concern and moved their proposed building farther from ALH by designing it to have a smaller footprint, hopefully saving about ? acre of trees.

3. Stormwater and flooding: Residents living across ALH on Wilmot and nearby streets are concerned about stormwater flooding. Wilmot's homes are directly across ALH from CR's parcels and at a much lower elevation. Neighbors report that flooding has gotten worse since the Stop and Shop plaza, also across ALH, was rebuilt with an apparently insufficient parking lot drainage system. The system now dumps all the rain it collects into one retaining pool, immediately across from Wilmot St., which according to the neighbors, then drains under ALH directly into the Wilmot St. area. These neighbors are understandably concerned about how the CR team plans on dealing with heavy rains that would fall on their proposed building's roof. Currently, rain waters are absorbed by the parcels' 100% green space.

Residents voicing concerns have successfully led to a redesign of CR's proposed onsite storm rain storage and disposal system. CR's team now claims that their new collection system will hold the heaviest rainfall hitting the building's roof and direct it under the building into large storage vessels, then will release it slowly later. This will not solve the Wilmot St. flooding problem, but CR promises not to add to it.

4. and 5: Traffic and parking. Residents of our side of Roslindale, Mattapan, and Hyde Park are burdened with some of the longest commute times in the city. Public transportation is inadequate and infrequent. Of the 3 bus lines, one runs every 45 minutes 4.5 days/wk., another takes forever, detouring from Forest Hills through Roslindale village then up Cummins, and the third is almost always overcrowded at rush hour. The nearest rapid transit hub is a mile away and expensive. Biking and walking are dangerous, intimidating and often impractical. We have been trying to improve biking and walking pathways here, but with little success so far. Drivers generally use ALH, which mostly has a 30 mph speed limit, as a racetrack. But until ALH has a multi-modal redesign, transportation will continue to be difficult without a car.

The current large CR proposal, 500 ft. from the already dangerous 5-way Cummins/ALH/Canterbury intersection, would add to the car, parking, and traffic problems. That intersection would become even more difficult for pedestrians, cyclists, and drivers too. CR is proposing 62 off street parking spaces and a storage room for bicycles. The parking would be mostly accomplished by the use of mechanical 'stackers' that stack one car above another. From the video, it appears the mechanism will fit only medium and small size cars. Another issue is the potential for more black ice on that steep section of Cummins Hwy. due to shadow from a 6-story tower.

The proposed 52 units could house approx. up to 100 adults. Most non-domestic activities need a car for easy access, and on-street parking is limited to nonexistent. Add to this a garage driveway that opens onto Cummins Hwy., a roadway that is jammed with cars at rush hour. Any car/parking/traffic problems will fall on the shoulders of both the current and the new neighbors living at this building.

One of our neighbors asked "How does this (project) help our neighborhood?". This is a serious question. Our neighborhoods along American Legion have been invisible as neighborhoods to public officials and others for decades. Often our area has been seen as an obvious place to put infrastructure or businesses that no one else would want in their neighborhood. These are not malicious decisions, but they are thoughtless and destructive to our quality of life. And we have not seen much of the public improvements we see in other wealthier neighborhoods. New housing is important, but where are the public improvements for the new residents as well as for those who have lived here for years? CR should help with this through community benefits, but the city and state should provide the bulk of the resources. Adding new residents, without improving public and active transportation and creating walking distance parks, would just perpetuate neighborhood inequities. The city has invested many millions redesigning and rebuilding existing parks elsewhere; some many times over. We are still waiting for our parks. There is land available, and we have plenty of suggestions.

Our neighborhood association has built great relationships with our elected and appointed officials and we have recently begun to see changes. One pocket neighborhood is slated for a 'Slow Streets' makeover to stop the speeding cut-through traffic on our residential streets. A small vacant, bare lot received $50,000 for a new lawn, six new saplings and a bench, thanks to advocacy from our D4 City Councilor, Andrea Campbell. A new traffic light at the ALH Dunkin Donuts was installed with support from our State Rep. Russell Holmes. But still, we are far, far behind in neighborhood public improvements.

So, please appreciate the difficulties our neighbors face and that the opinions are based on need and years of experience here in our neighborhoods that we cherish.

ONE IDEA FOR A WEST ROXBURY SCHOOL

To the Editor:

In case you missed the news last week, the Boston School Committee voted unanimously to close the two Academies, Urban Science & West Roxbury, located at what was used to be West Roxbury High School. In the interest of full disclosure, I graduated from West Roxbury High.

Yes, I was a rarity, a West Roxbury kid who attended West Roxbury High.

I will always be grateful to the teachers who pushed me academically, especially the late Mary McLaughlin and its headmaster at the time, Donald Pelligrini.

The writing has been on the wall for a few years now, in my opinion. This year was not the first time the building was on the list to be closed. It was on a preliminary list the previous year as well, but after an uproar from students, parents and faculty, Superintendent Chang chose not to go ahead with the idea.

I commend the students again for fighting to keep the academies open.

It is not an understatement to say the closing will be very disruptive to students and faculty.

The reason for closing it, according to the Boston School Department, is that it is in need of extensive repairs. Once the repairs are done it is supposed to reopen. I hope that is true. We have seen public buildings where we have been told once repaired it will reopen in the past only to be told later it was too expensive to repair and the building eventually winds up being sold by the City to a developer.

Still what the School Committee should be questioning is how was the maintenance allowed to lapse so badly that the decision was made to close the school down? There are a number of schools older than this one still functioning (Joyce Kilmer and the Lyndon, for example).

One idea I had is that since the school is closing at least for a few years, The City of Boston should begin discussions with the people supporting Roxbury Prep to relocate it there. It would be a better location than the postage sized property on Belgrade Ave. Just thought I would throw it out there.
