Traffic improvements are coming to Centre Street in the fall, and officials say improvements to the VFW could help ease cut through traffic on Centre and Washington streets.

BTD focuses on Centre Street improvements, VFW too

The Boston Transportation Department (BTD) has been working with residents and officials in West Roxbury to improve traffic problems on Centre Street.

Residents have been voicing concerns for the street after the approval of several new developments in the area, and with more on the way, citizens think Centre Street could become dangerous for any mode of transportation.

BTD Senior Planner Bill Conroy said that the BTD is working on short-term items right now for completion in the fall to help ease congestion and speeding problems on the street. The bigger issue, he said, is that residents are concerned Centre Street is becoming a cut through rather than a neighborhood road.

“The meeting we had recently with WRMS director Danielle Joseph really went well, we got a lot of momentum with (BTD) Commissioner Gina Fiandaca to do some quick fixes and from what I gathered out of that meeting was that the general public wants Centre Street to be their street, not so much an arterial road where people are cutting through,” he said. “You want to slow traffic down in your neighborhood to stop people using it as a cut-through.”

The main obstacles to this would arguably be the traffic congestion on Washington Street (in part due to the work the Massachusetts Water Resource Authority is doing on the Enneking Parkway in Hyde Park) and the crawl that is the VFW Parkway. Conroy said that due to a recent deal with the owners of the 1239 VFW apartment development, they’re looking at opening up the VFW a bit more to help keep drivers from being tempted to cut through neighborhoods and Centre Street.

No opposition vote for medical marijuana facility

Jeff Sullivan

While there was a good amount of healthy debate during Monday’s West Roxbury Civic Improvement Association (WRCIA) meeting, the membership eventually approved a motion of non-opposition in a 7-3 vote for a medical marijuana dispensary at 1524 VFW Parkway.

The dispensary, proposed by Beacon Compassion Center, has been making the rounds in the community for months, gaining a letter of non-opposition from the West Roxbury Neighborhood Council, the West Roxbury Veterans Administration Hospital and the 1515 VFW West Roxbury Trailer Park Association. The group is also seeking a letter of non-opposition from the West Roxbury Main Streets and, if successful, they will appear before the Boston City Council this fall for final approval.

Owner and Walpole resident Rina Cametti said the facility will have several security measures, which includes an unarmed guard, low amounts of product and cash on the premises, a “mantrap” area, where patients are secured in a room while their credentials are verified, little signage and hired Garda trucks to carry their cash. Former WBZ-TV anchor Bob Lobel came with Beacon as a member of the company’s board.

CM football kicks off season

The Catholic Memorial High football team suffered a season-opening 33-3 loss last Friday at the hands of the St. John’s Shrewsbury Pioneers.

Many West Roxbury residents and CM alums are eagerly awaiting for the first night they can take another trip down to Baker Street to watch the CM Knights return to battle.

Knights head coach Brent Williams, a former defensive lineman for the New England Patriots, went as far as to say that the community significantly provides to the atmosphere surrounding the program.

“When the community gets behind a team, it changes the whole vibe of the program,” Williams said. “In the past, when we’ve had successful

“As part of mitigation for that project, the developer put forth money to improve the VFW corridor,” he said. “Right now at the intersections of VFW and Baker, and Corey and LaGrange, the signal boxes are not talking to one another. There was a master controller that was missing and (the Massachusetts Department of Conservation and Recreation) has secured and bought a new one. That’s being installed if not this week then next week. We’ve been working with Howard Stein Hudson to re-time and re-sequence those signals.”

Conroy said the new timing should help to alleviate the crunch during rush hour, lunch hour, or basically any hour on the VFW.

“With those improvements, it’ll help people to stay on the VFW as opposed to trying to avoid it,” he said.

For the short-term improvements scheduled to finish in the fall, Conroy said they are looking to add flashing school zone signals near the entrance of the Lyndon School, as well as 15-minute parking signs at the corner of Centre and Redlands Road, near the Speedway gas station.

“When we walked with Danielle (Joseph) and the community, they requested a 15-minutes drop-off for that location for the business, where it would stretch right back almost to Manthorne Road,” he said. “There are a lot of people who double park there.”

Conroy said they will be adding more pedestrian crossing signs to Centre Street, as well as repainting pavement markings. For more long-term improvements, Conroy said overall they’re looking to repave most of Centre Street in West Roxbury.

“We want to refresh the pavement markings for short-term, but Public Works will be going out there next spring or next fiscal year 2019 to resurface Centre Street as well,” he said. “That’s going to be resurfaced and I believe we’re resurfacing Centre from the VFW and going all the way out to Route 1, which is a huge stretch.”

Conroy also said they are working with developer Gary Martell to install a flashing pedestrian sign at the corner of Centre and Esther/Greaton Road as part of his mitigation package with the city. He said mitigation for the area around the 400 Belgrade development will also include road improvements and crosswalk improvements, but they haven’t been fully hashed out just yet.

Conroy said that they are looking at possible signalization or flashing lights for the intersections of Centre and Park, Hastings Richwood or Corey. He said they’re still too early in the process to have exact data, and they may cable (speed detection cables) those areas to see where the biggest problems are and act accordingly.

Conroy said that once these short-term improvements are finished, he wants to come back to the community to talk about other improvements as more development projects hit the neighborhood, most notably the Roxbury Prep proposal at the corner of Belgrade and the West Roxbury Parkway.

“Once we do these initial things which would come online in September, I’d be happy to go back to the community and do some follow up there,” he said.

Half Way race garners hundreds

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

Hundreds of racers set out on Sunday with the aim of raising funds for the Cops for Kids with Cancer Charity (CKC) in Roslindale.

The eighth annual Half Way to St. Patrick's Day 5K was originally set up by the Boston Emerald Society (BES), the Boston Police Department (BPD), the BPD Running Club and the CKC. Over the years, the event has raised thousands for the CKC, which states on its website that it has raised more than $2.5 million to families with children battling cancer. The charity states that it prides itself for giving without any obligation for the family, a "no strings attached" donation.

Fr. Peter Nolan, BES Chaplain, started the race off with an innovation and thanked all those who came out to support the cause.

"It's a wonderful, wonderful thing to see so many of you, old and young and middle aged out here. It touches my heart and it touches all of us and I say may God bless you for this great effort you're making, remembering those suffering children," he said. "God tells us to suffer the little ones to come unto him and forbid them not, so you're doing that wonderful, Biblical good work of the Lord."

Boston Mayor Marty Walsh also spoke before the start of the race.

"We're here today for a very special cause," he said. "We're running the Emerald Society of the Boston Police Department 5K, and I want to thank them for all they do. I want to thank also the Cops for Kids with Cancer and the Boston Police running Club, I want to thank you all for what you're doing today."

Walsh mentioned two siblings, Brendan and Kaylen

DON'T LET THE MEMORIES FADE

Yet another anniversary of the tragic events of 9/11 has passed.

A truly minor detail of those observances is the responsibility that befalls a publication like ours. With an amplified voice, the media has a true responsibility to help steer and collect remembrances, and facilitate the day of grief and reflection. Of course, in the scheme of things, our words are destined to be no more than minor trifles. Nevertheless, there is an understood responsibility. We do the best we can.

So, great and wonderful, we feel the need to add perspective and commentary. But what do we write? How do we use the printed word for the intended reflection? At this point in time speaking of American resilience is a bit old hat. It is, of course, a true and fair observation, and an important talking point, but also one our dear readers have heard persistently whenever black clouds gather.

Should we rail against terrorists? Sure. Maybe. The sad truth however is that anger cannot bring back loved ones and cherished landmarks. In fact, an eye toward retribution post-attacks have nearly doubled the amount of American blood spilled.

And so it remains. The challenge we have before us is honestly conveying the many feelings within, without tripping into treacle.

This year, our mission and challenge were given a new clarity.

Horrible hurricanes ripped apart houses and lifestyles, predominantly in Texas and Florida. The devastation from the storms will cost tens of billions of dollars to repair. The lives lost can never be restored.

Here, however, is what happened in the aftermath: America rose to the challenge. There are glimmers of hope in full, unabated growth.

Folks lent a helping hand. They donated money. They traveled to the zone of destruction to bring food, supplies, and comfort. Americans are already rolling up their sleeves, pulling on work boots, and helping to clear debris and rebuild what they can.

For those who cannot be there or physically help, donations are pouring in.

Recovery efforts are proof of the best within both the National Guard soldiers who are assisting and the civilian ranks alongside them.

An echo to all this is how America came together after 9/11. Politics were cast aside. Cultural differences were ignored. Even the Red Sox/Yankees rivalry was put on hold. The one, and only agenda: helping others in their time of crisis.

Whenever there is tragedy, you can count on the people of the United States to lend a hand in whatever way they can. That, we suggest, is what makes this nation so resilient. It may not always seem that way, but we are all in this together.

Starting the School Year Together

The start of the school year brings a lot change into our students' lives: new classes, new teachers, new subjects to tackle. September can be an inspiring time, a season that brings students, teachers and families together as they work to accomplish a shared goal: a successful, completed school year. But I know starting the school year isn't always easy for everyone — for a lot of students, school can be tough. It was that way for me. When I struggled as a student, my teachers and schools helped me — and I'm proud that for all students, Boston Public Schools have resources that are there to help each and every student succeed.

Here in Boston, education is a bond that brings us together. Making the Boston Public Schools work is a collaboration between teachers and students, families and principals, Superintendent Chang and myself — the entire community.

Together, we've been investing in BPS. We created Boston Saves, a pilot program to help families save for college and career training that we plan to bring to every kindergartener in the system. We've added hundreds of new pre-kindergarten seats. We're bringing our most rigorous curriculum to more schools through Excellence for All. We lengthened the school day to get elementary and middle school students more learning time. We've gotten thousands more students into high-quality after-school and summer programs.

We're seeing results. We have more Level 1 and Level 2 schools, and a higher graduation rate, than at any time on record. We're closing opportunity gaps for BPS students. And there's more to come.

This year we launched BuildBPS, a $1 billion, 10-year investment in school facilities, curriculum, and technology. We are working to create environments where our students can learn to solve 21st-century problems. And, under BuildBPS, we also announced the 21st Century Schools Fund. We've dedicated $13 million to provide immediate capital investments to every public school during this school year. Schools will be able to choose from a menu of investments, from classroom technology to classroom furniture. School communities know what they need best.

Martin J. Walsh

Boston's educational vision is one of lifelong success, so we're building pathways from early childhood to college and career. College affordability is a major barrier to students nationwide. So this spring, we rolled out our tuition free community college initiative for low-income students. We want to make sure that all BPS graduates, no matter their circumstances, have college as an option. Money should never be a barrier to opportunity.

Boston schools are home to students of many diverse backgrounds, and we're making sure students facing challenges have access to the tools and supports they need to reach their potential. We care about every single one of our students. An obstacle in the way of any one of their educations is an obstacle we must all overcome together.

I've experienced first-hand the importance of community support. When I was in first grade, I got cancer. I was often in the hospital for treatments and missed a lot of school. But everyone around me stepped in to help, from neighbors to teachers to classmates. The entire community was on my side. Today, every student facing challenges of any kind should feel the same. And I'm proud that in Boston, they do.

For that, I want to thank the teachers and staff in our schools. Thank you for bringing as much excitement to the first day of school as the students do. I know you've been preparing all summer for this day. Thank you for your relentless dedication. You play essential roles in the development of our young people.

Thank you to the parents and families for supporting your children. The hours of back to school preparation, pick-ups and drop-offs, and homework help does not go unnoticed. You are building a strong foundation for your children's futures.

Together our community supports the most talented kids in the country. I couldn't be prouder of Boston's youth. So lastly, thank you to the students for coming back each year with more passion and energy than the last. You inspire me every day and I will never stop working to make sure you have the resources you need to succeed.

I wish our students, parents, and families a fantastic school year filled with amazing experiences inside and outside the classroom. Have a great year!

One of Roxbury's finest

Trips to Castle Island this summer have allowed me to pay respects at the World War II Memorial and the Korean War Memorial, which list the 225 and 20 names, respectively, who as residents of South Boston gave their lives during these conflicts.

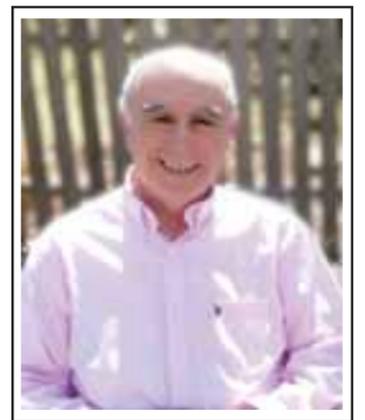

South Boston's Vietnam War Memorial is at M Street Park, commemorating the ultimate sacrifices given by 25 soldiers, and Dorchester's beautiful memorial honoring its fallen comrades in the Viet Nam conflict is on Morrissey Boulevard.

Regrettably, some other parts of the city have no such memorials. No such memorial recognizes Joe O'Callahan, who should have died in action but due to the intervention of Divine Providence didn't. The Callahan tunnel is not named for him; it recognizes a politician's son, who died in combat.

Two days after Evacuation/St. Patrick's Day in 1945 the aircraft carrier USS Franklin, affectionately known as Big Ben, was steaming westward in the Pacific with 3,500 crewmen and 100 aircraft, as part of a beehive of an armada with 16 carriers, eight battleships, 16 cruisers, and 63 destroyers aiming to put an end to the long, drawn-out war. On board the Franklin was at least one guy from Roxbury.

At 7 in the morning local time, an enemy plane approached before the task force could launch. The first bomb ripped through to the hangar deck, turning the 36,000 gallons of aviation fuel and 40 tons of bombs into an inferno. A second bomb detonated two decks

Crowley, who were running for their sister Shannon. Shannon Crowley originally started the race off in 2011 and was a recipient of funds from the CKC, but passed away in 2014 at the age of 8. Walsh also asked runners to keep those in affected areas of the recent hurricanes in their thoughts.

“As you’re running today I want you to think about the people of Houston and Florida who are going through a very difficult time obviously with the hurricanes hitting their areas,” he said.

Walsh added that the day was a beautiful day for running and he wished the runners well.

“The sun’s out, there’s football today, so I’m done talking,” he said. “Have a great race everybody!”

Resident Greg Tobin said he came out because the cause was worth it and the course was beautiful.

“I’ve done this once before, I like it because it’s a nice small community race, it’s like the sudden infant death syndrome race (Run for Tighe) coming up,” he said. “The track is almost the same; it’s a little hillier, which is fine, take your time.”

Residents Brandon Sisson, Ali Walendziac and Justin Bonnick said they all came out after hearing about the race from another branch of the justice system.

“So actually the two of us were interns at the Suffolk County District Attorney’s Office and obviously the BPD came over and handed out some fliers, and it supports a good cause so we decided to do it,” Sisson said.

Residents Mike Cane, Julie Marcantonio, Rich Perito and Patrick Donagon said they came out because they heard about it years ago from family and friends. Cane said though he was down in New York City for a long time, he started right back up again when he moved back home.

“It’s a great race, I ran it like 15 years ago and I moved back here about four years ago and I have run it ever since,” he said. “It’s a beautiful run a beautiful course and a great cause.”

Many runners were returning this year, while some were new to the course.

Marijuana continued from page 1

The vote for non-opposition resulted more from the WRCIA not wanting a recreational facility there in the future. On July 1, 2018, the retail recreational marijuana laws go into effect, and retailers can put in recreational facilities where ever the laws allow. The new Boston zoning regulations, put into effect by the Boston City Council, requires a buffer zone of a half mile between any medical marijuana facility. City Councilor Michael Flaherty, who happened to be at the meeting to let residents know he’s running in November for re-election as an At-Large City Councilor, said he’s currently working on zoning regulations for recreational facilities as well.

Regardless, the buffer zones required by the state legislation stipulate that no facility, medical or otherwise, can be within 500 feet of an area where children normally congregate (schools and parks), and Beacon has stated before, as well as former competitor for the VFW space, the Mass Patients Foundation, that West Roxbury essentially has no other location that will satisfy these requirements. WRCIA President Marty Keogh said while he’s personally against the dispensary, he felt it’s still better than a possible recreational space come July 1.

“If this is going to come anyway, your facility sounds heads and shoulders above anyone else,” he said to Beacon.

Cametti pointed out that cannabis in many instances both reduces opioid addiction in the states it is legalized and opioid-related deaths by 25 percent in those same states. He and several other members of both the Mass. Patients and Beacon stated that while users of marijuana can get dependent on it, there are none of the physical withdrawal symptoms like opiate-based narcotics have.

“Reports from the Journal of American Medicine state that if you were in a state with a robust set of medicinal marijuana regulations, opioid deaths have decreased by 25 percent,” she said. “That’s one of the things that the medical community is starting to understand and come on board with.”

Many residents were skeptical to those claims at the meeting. Joseph Goode said he hasn’t seen definitive studies from U.S. medical organizations reporting approved uses for medical marijuana.

“The medical community has had their hands a little tied because it’s still federally illegal, they will walk a different walk if and when it becomes widely accessible, you have so many doctors so passionate about this,” Cametti said.

The WRCIA approved the measure with the stipulation that they do not turn into a recreational facility down the line, which many residents were worried about. Cametti said the products offered by medical facilities provide concentrates and specific strains of the plant for specific results, while a recreational facility does not have many of those products. The most pressing example would be cannabidiol hemp oil, or CBD oil, which has no psychoactive effects and has been shown, at least anecdotally, to stop seizures in epileptic patients and stop tremors in Parkinson’s patients.

Pilot Program ends for Boston Police body-worn cameras

This week marks the end of the long fought for body-worn camera pilot program of the Boston Police Department. For one year, upwards of 100 police officers across the city – including members of the Command Staff – have donned the devices as part of an effort to expand its toolkit in the area of community policing.

Earlier this week, members of the Boston Police Camera Action Team (BPCAT) sent an open letter (attached) to Commissioner Evans calling on the Boston Police Department to immediately release their plan for full implementation before the end of 2017.

Enclosed in the letter are several requests for information on how the Boston Police Department plans to move forward on implementing a permanent body-worn camera program. Those requests include an initial report on findings from the pilot program, a preliminary budget proposal request to the Walsh Administration indicating a seriousness in moving forward with a permanent program, and the convening of a meeting between BPCAT members, partner organizations, BPD representatives, and union officials.

We are hopeful that Mayor Walsh, as the chief executive of the City, will support Commissioner Evans as he works to quickly fulfill both our requests, and the demands of the entire Boston citizenry – who have stood with and behind BPCAT and its partner organizations for 1,126 days – to establish a permanent body-worn camera program.

We encourage Mayor Walsh and Commissioner Evans not to shift their responsibility to enact this program to the expert Northeastern researchers who were enlisted to study the outcomes of the pilot program. Rather, they should acknowledge what we already know, and what the researchers will confirm with their study: that body-worn cameras are a useful tool in creating greater transparency and achieving a much-needed record of accountability in Boston.

The next Mayor of Roslindale?

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Roslindale Parade is shaping up to be one to remember this year, and it's the 42nd run through the neighborhood.

This year, in the 15th year of the Mayor of Roslindale Contest, so far only one candidate has been put forth, Doug McClure's dog Rozzi.

"It throws an interesting twist on it," said Roslindale Parade President Tom Donahue.

The contest has been more or less a fundraiser for the parade, and there will be a fundraising night event on Sept. 16 at the Emerald Society in Roslindale at 8 p.m. The society is also holding its ninth annual Half Way to St. Patrick's Day Road Race on Sept. 10, this upcoming Sunday, at 11 a.m.

"Doug is a former Grand Marshall and Mayor of Roslindale himself," Donahue said. "Last year we didn't have the contest because we were having trouble getting candidates, but Rozzi is Doug's golden retriever, and when he put him up for the contest, who are we to say no?"

McClure said he came up with the idea because so many people in his neighborhood know Rozzi, as she is definately a friendly dog. He said she greets all passersby around his home on Belgrade Avenue.

"My house is on the corner and Rozzi, she's like the little mayor of that corner," he said. "Everybody knows her name, they all seem to know Rozzi - I think that's kind of cool."

McClure is hosting a fundraiser at the Boston Emerald Society on Birch Street in Roslindale Square on Sept. 16 from 8 p.m. to midnight, after the Roslindale Porchfest (pending rain). McClure said the event should be a blast.

"I'm looking forward to this. We have a band, The Births and the Babymakers, and we have Rozzi running for Mayor, it should be great," he said.

McClure said he felt that adding a new twist to the contest could help get more residents involved, as everyone loves dogs.

"People love it, they think it's a great idea and a great spin and it's just something different," he said.

McClure said he's been participating in the parade since he was a kid and loves the atmosphere and sense of

Library branches hosting speakers

Jeff Sullivan
Staff Reporter

The Boston Public Library is hosting a slew of lecture series and events at both its Central Branch location at 700 Boylston St. and in the local branches around the neighborhoods.

“September and the beginning of the fall, we definitely ramp up our programming and it’s a great time for people to tap into free local resources,” said BPL senior public relations associate Rosemary Lavery. “The library always has a lot going on, or just being a resource to work, study, read or hang out. People can use the space and just kind be in touch with your local community.”

Dr. Cornel West will be at the Grove Hall Branch of the BPL on Thursday, Sept. 28 at 6 p.m. The discussion will be moderated by Dr. Saida Grundy of Boston University.

“It’s his 35th anniversary edition of his book, The Prophecy of Deliverance, published back in the ‘80s, and there will also be a discussion which is moderated by a professor of Boston University and supported by the entities New Democracy Coalition, the Massa-community it brings to the neighborhood.

“I’ve always loved the parade because I think it’s great for the community and I ran for mayor many years ago and the last few mayor campaigns didn’t raise much so I said that would be something different,” he said. “I’ve been a Roslindale resident for 56 years, so I’ve been going to the parade since I was a kid. Of course, when you become a business owner you get more involved.”

Donahue said there is still time for more nominations; the deadline is Sept. 25.

The parade will also be honoring resident Glenn Williams as this year’s Grand Marshall, along with the Sacred Heart School. Donahue said the parade usually honors someone in the community, but this year thought it would be a good idea to honor a business or community organization like Sacred Heart.

He added it was a kind of double honor for the school, as Williams is also the art director there.

“It’s also the school’s 100th anniversary this year, and our theme for the parade is education and the door to the future, which really encompasses all schools, but we recognized Sacred Heart because of their anniversary,” Donahue said. “Glenn was honored because he’s also the go-to guy for everything in Roslindale.”

Williams said he was very honored to be named Grand Marshall, along with the honor his school received.

“Well, I’m very, very proud, it threw me off just a little bit, the parade goes by my house every year since it started, so we’re always a part of the parade, but when I got the call to be Grand Marshall, it was very humbling, you know?” Williams said.

Williams added that his responsibilities for the parade are very, very stringent.

“I think I get to put on a clean shirt and walk up front somewhere,” he said laughing. “I also get to march with my school, I have such a close relationship to Sacred Heart, I’m really, really happy I was chosen to share the spotlight with Sacred Heart.”

Williams said he actually went to school there in the 1960s and has been teaching there for a decade.

“I love it because I’m the arts director and I get to teach every kid in the school, and it’s always a full classroom of kids of different ages and cultures, so it’s very exciting,” he said. “We’re a STREAM school, which combines the major elements of elementary education, which for us includes science, technology, religion – as we’re a Catholic school – engineering, arts and math. So that means I’m going to have kids here in the arts classes tied directly to their math or science classes, and we collaborate with the other teachers and so they’ll go to their technology class for instance and hear something they heard in art class.”

The parade is on Oct. 1 at 1 p.m. and will go throughout the Roslindale. There will be fire trucks, police vehicles, Shriners, and a whole host of school marching bands performing. ## SPINNEY

David Of Roslindale formerly of Somerville passed away on Sept. 4, 2017. David was a lifelong Quaker and activist for peace and social justice. Upon graduation from Harvard he registered for the draft as a conscientious objector and performed 24 months of alternative service on agricultural and construction projects in rural Mexico. At the American Friends Service Committee David was involved in prison reform, antiwar activities and organized local support for the California Farm Workers movement. Well into his seventies he remained committed to the idea that we need to, "show up" if we believe in the making of a better world. He was a daily participant in the Occupy Movement spending a night in jail at the end of the demonstration. With his usual understanding of "the other guy's shoes," he complimented the Boston Police for their professionalism in the handling of the demonstrators. He was also an active member of Veterans for Peace and took great pleasure in marching with them in many parades. David had a long and fulfilling career as an addictions counselor in the Cambridge Health Alliance Hospitals and was a member of AA for 38 years. Even into his retirement, he would be met on the street by former patients who expressed gratitude at still being sober. He was an avid runner and an accomplished chess player. However, his greatest joy was family and friends. His years of sobriety spent with, as he put it, "the love of my life" Evelyn Riesenber, were filled with laughter and daily adventure. He was a loving parent and took great pride and joy in his grandchildren. David filled a very large place in his family's life, who will miss him always. Beloved partner of Evelyn Riesenber. Devoted father of Caleb D. Spinney of Kennewick, Wash., Peter Riesenber and Adele Riesenber both of Roslindale and Frederick Riesenber of West Roxbury. chusetts Humanities Foundation and the Urban League of Eastern Massachusetts," Lavery said.

West is an iconic figure in African American studies and is a well-known philosopher, political activist, social critic and public intellectual.

Lavery also said the Hyde Park Author Series is featuring local author Janet Britcher for an overview of her book Zoom Leadership: Change Your Focus, Change Your Insight. The book offers techniques to draw on the readers' personal experiences and expertise to aide in decision making. The lecture will be at the Hyde Park Branch on Sept. 18 at 6:30 p.m.

Lavery said, "So we have lectures like that designed to help people manage their own lives and their own schedules and kind of help people move along with their own development whether it's education or just in their own personal lives."

Lavery said every library branch will also be hosting local family lecture series to help families find their roots in the city.

"We do that both in the fall and the spring, and that's a good opportunity for people to hear about tips and guides for those beginning genealogical research or wanting to know a little bit more about different topics related to the city. For example, we have one topic that's about the history of marshmallow fluff which was invented in Somerville and manufactured in Lynn and we're going to have a historian talking about that."

The Fluff lecture, entitled Boston in a Jar: Marshmallow fluff and Boston's Candy Industry, is set for Dec. 6 at 6 p.m. at the Central Library location.

The Central Library will also be hosting Boston Globe correspondent Stephanie Schorow for a lecture on the 75th anniversary of the Coconut Grove Fire, which claimed the lives of 492 people and was the worst nightclub fire in U.S. history. The lecture is set for Nov. 28 at 6 p.m. at the Central Library location.

Rozzie Reads Poetry is hosting a Tribute to Marc Widershien and an Open Mic on Sept. 28 from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. at the Community Room of the Roslindale House at 120 Poplar St. in conjunction with the Friends of the Roslindale Library.

Widershien passed away last summer, and the tribute of the local author will include a 40-minute performance from portions of his book The Life of All Worlds, narrated by Gregory Hall with a music portion of songs represented in the book from the '40s and '50s, performed by musician D'Anna Fortuno.

In West Roxbury, the branch is currently hosting the Ikonoplastic Art exhibit by Cristina Nelson, which is a mixed-media exhibit. The reception for the exhibit is set of Oct. 5 from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. Nelson said she used her connection to the three cultures of Buenos Aires, northwestern Italy and the U.S. to create her pieces.

"I belong to all of them and I belong to none of them," she said.

On Oct. 2, Adam Shutes of the Boston Cheese Cellar in Roslindale will come to the West Roxbury Branch to discuss cheese making and its significance in modern culture.

BOSTON BLOOMS WITH DAFFODILS PROGRAM RETURNS

Mayor Martin J. Walsh has announced that the "Boston Blooms with Daffodils" beautification initiative will distribute 20,000 daffodil bulbs this fall to volunteers for planting on public ways citywide.

The plantings will take place in approved locations along the City's public ways on the weekends of Oct. 28 and Nov. 4. Groups with approved planting locations will be contacted by the Parks Department and given bulb pick-up instructions and dates.

Individuals, civic associations, church groups, sports leagues, scout troops, open space advocates, and parks friends are just some examples of the volunteers the Parks Department seeks to help in the "Boston Blooms with Daffodils" effort. Last year over 100 community groups planted the bulbs distributed by the City.

Anyone interested in assisting with planting can fill out a form online at www.boston.gov/boston-blooms which asks for contact information and identification of the public space the applicant is volunteering to plant. Groups and individuals are asked to use their own tools.

Participants are also encouraged to take photos of their groups on planting days and email them to the Boston Parks and Recreation Department at parkpartners@boston.gov with "Boston Blooms with Daffodils" in the subject line. Photos will then be available for viewing at www.facebook.com/bostonparksdepartment, the Parks Department website, and submitted to local newspapers. For more information on how to participate in Boston Blooms with Daffodils, please call the Parks Department at (617) 961-3006.

(Never known to fail!)

Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine, splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in this necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my mother. Oh Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth, I humbly beseech thee from the bottom of my heart to succor me in my necessity (make request). There are none that can withstand your power. Oh Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (three times). Holy Mary, I place this cause in your hands (three times). Grateful thanks. —K.B.

teams, I’ve felt that West Roxbury really got behind us. When they see that we come out and work hard, it makes them appreciate the football, and it’s also what we want to put on the field.”

However, fans walked away Albert M. Todesca Jr. Field disappointed after watching the Pioneers outplay the Knights for 48 minutes.

A Will Fay field goal in the second quarter was the only points CM could muster against SJS.

While a few errors were made, Knights senior quarterback and team captain Brant Keogh threw many impressive completion passes during the game.

With a whole lot of football left to be played, the hope from Catholic Memorial Football Directors is to build off the success seen last year.

When asked about how he thought last season went, CM Athletic Director Craig Najarian said he was thrilled at the impetus shown by the boys all year long.

“I think we had a ton of momentum with our program,” Najarian said. “We went 7-4 and winning on Thanksgiving was a sort of a culminating moment.”

Najarian says that the school is excited to bring aboard new faculty members, and also for the return of a few longstanding faculty veterans.

“Coach Capodilupo will be working with our defensive line, which he’s done for a few years,” Najarian said. “For our new staff, Ashby Christian is joining us and he’ll be working with our running backs and defensive backs. He was also the coach at Norfolk Academy for a short time. Brian McCray will be our offensive coordinator. We also have some new assistants that have joined us as well.”

No one at Catholic Memorial was put down by the recent loss.

Williams said the skill acquired by younger players this season will hopefully lead the program to where they want it to be.

“We got a great group of kids and a lot of young talent,” Williams said. “They’re hungry to learn and they’ve worked really hard, especially over the summer. I think this group of captains has done a great job as elected leaders. Hunter Tully has demonstrated how impactful he can be, as has Nick Goffredo, the other captain. Dan Boyle is a veteran starter that’s been starting for three years now and those are the kind of kids that we rely heavily on. Overall, I think the team plays well collectively as a group.”

One young freshman in particular was cited by captain Brant Keogh as being a player of keen interest.

“Adding Jack McGowan’s little brother, Owen McGowan, was a big thing for us,” Keogh said. “He’s only a freshman, but we expect him to have a big impact.”

When asked where he hopes this team will be at the end of it all, Najarian said that the goal is always to be hoisting up a trophy come November.

“I never set predictions, but the goal is always to win the whole thing,” Najarian said. “So, we’ll shoot for the sky and see what happens.”

Ask The Doctor

Junior Damato began servicing vehicles in 1969. He owns a 10-bay auto repair service center in Hyde Park and an 8-bay center in Middleboro. Junior is an ASE-certified Master Technician, ASE-certified L-1 and ASE-certified Natural Gas.

To the Doctor: I own a 2001 Corvette and it has a fault in the steering column. The engine will start and run, but as soon as I attempt to move the car, the engine shuts off and I have to wait a few minutes before it will restart. I called the dealer and explained the problem. They ran the VIN# and said the recall for this problem had been done in 2006 and that the cost of the repair (anywhere from $500 to $900) would be on me. I know you work on these cars at your shop. Do you have any suggestions for an alternative fix?

From the Doctor: The steering column lock module has been an ongoing problem on Corvettes. A failing module shuts the fuel off at 2.5 miles per hour. To fix it with the factory GM parts is expensive. The steering wheel often has to be removed and the base of the steering wheel, where the puller is attached, can sometimes crack. However, I do have a solution that works perfectly. The bypass module cost is less than $60 (with shipping), is made in America, and is an easy installation. The electronic part is called Steering Lock Module Part #LMC5. It fits Corvettes from 1997 through 2004. This module simulates a properly functioning column lock. The bypass module is installed in the right side footwell kick panel. The installation takes 15 minutes and comes with directions – there is even a YouTube video. The company, located in Malibu, CA, is called Compliance Parts, LLC. They also have tech support, if needed.

Boston’s own Junior Damato, “The Auto Doctor” has agreed to field auto repair questions from Bulletin and Record readers. Please forward your questions to news@bulletinnewspapers.com and we will do our best to get your questions answered.

With most of the ship engulfed in flames, two destroyers, at no small risk to themselves, moved within several hundred feet to play their hoses on Big Ben, whose own damage control boys were struggling to contain the conflagration. Other ships in the task force came to help.

Many of the Franklin's sailors remained trapped below deck. As the bodies of the dead and the severely injured were laid on the flight deck, Fr. O'Callahan administered Extreme Unction - later known as the Last Rites and now currently known as Sacrament of the Sick.

With Big Ben dead in the water, Fr. O'Callahan groped his way through smoke-filled corridors to lead sailors trapped below deck to safety. He ignored his claustrophobia to go to one of the gun turrets, from where he passed hot shells outside so that they could be thrown into the sea. Not stopping here, he urged the men on and began handling fire hoses himself to thwart more explosions from the magazines.

Eventually, the USS Pittsburgh started towing the moribund aircraft carrier back to Pearl. Eight hundred and thirty-two sailors died and nearly 300 were wounded, to be treated for 48 consecutive hours by the medical staff of the USS Santa Fe, which had wedged itself into the Franklin to expedite the transfer of the burned and otherwise wounded. Up to this time, no other US naval ship in history had endured such terrible losses and remained afloat, giving rise to the alliterative descriptor: Big Ben Bombed, Battered, Bruised and Bent But Not Broken.

A shower of awards lay ahead for the Franklin's men. Two were for the Medal of Honor, 19 for the Navy Cross, 22 for the Silver Star, 115 for the Bronze Star, and 234 Letters of Commendation.

Roxbury's Fr. O'Callahan was one of the Medal of Honor recipients, the only chaplain of any denomination to receive such recognition during WWII. President Harry Truman did the honors in 1946. A track star, this Jesuit went on to teach math at Holy Cross and Boston College, but nothing could match what he taught his shipmates that day in the South Pacific.

Interesting to note, the Boston Public Library in Copley Square has only one copy of O'Callahan's gripping autobiographical "I Was a Chaplain on the Franklin" and it is not even available for check-out. There are six other copies in Massachusetts public libraries.
